SUNNY DAYS IN WINTER.

Summer is a glorious season,
Warm, and bright, and pleasant;
But the past is not a reason
To despise the present.
So while health can climb a mountain,
And the log lights up the hall,
There are sunny days in winter,
After all.

Spring, no doubt, hath faded from us,
Maiden like in charms:
Summer, too, with all her promise,
Perished in our arms.
But the memory of the vanished,
Whom our hearts recall,
Maketh sunny days in winter,
After all.

Sunny hours in every season
Wait the innocent—
Those who taste with love and reason
What their God has sent.
Those who neither soar too highly
Nor too lowly fall,
Feel the sunny days of winter,
After all.

Then, although our darling treasures
Vanish from the heart:
Then, although our once loved pleasures
One by one depart,
Though the tomb looms in the distance,
And the mourning pall,—
There are sunny days in winter,
After all.

BEHIND THE SCENES.

"Four o'clock, and no Ellen yet. What can detain her so, she that is usually more punctual than the clock? Poor Ellen!" she soliloquized, "how differently have our lots been drawn in this world! Her parents dead—their wealth irretrievably lost, and she to proud to accept a cent that she has not laboriously earned. Oh, dear!" and Laura again sighed, just as the clock's liquid voice chimed the half hour. "She doesn't come," continued the puzzled little damsel. "There's something the matter. Perhaps she is sick. I'll send James to inquire—no, I'll go myself."

It was scarcely a room in which Laura Avery was sitting—rather a magnificent bay-window, with draperies of embroidery lace. Before the sentence was out of her lips, she was in her room adjusting a soft grey shawl over her black silk dress, and tying the strings of a quiet little brown velvet bonnet, whose one crimson rose-bud among its trimmings of emerald moss was not unlike the bloom of her own cheek. "I don't think it is going to snow," she pondered, looking out at the grey, threatening sky, as she drew on her perfectly-fitting kid gloves.

As she came through the softly carpeted vestibule, a servant approached her:

"A note, Miss Laura; it came five minutes ago."

Ah! the rose was several shades in the back-ground now, as Laura Avery broke open the seal, and glanced over the delicate cream colored sheet, while a bright, half-suppressed smile dimpled the corners of her mouth. Yet the note was a very simple one after all:

"DEAR MISS AVERY,—May I promise myself the pleasure of accompanying you to the new opera to night? Unless I receive a message to forbid me, I will call for you at half-past seven.

"Your most devoted,

"FLORIAN RICHLEY."

Laura instinctively slipped the note into her bosom, as if fearful lest the very pictures on the wall should catch a sight of the elegant chirography, and pursued her way down the gloomy street, with eyes that saw the murky atmosphere through a radiant glow of color de rose.

Meantime, the gray October light was fading away from a dreary room on the third floor of a house situated on one of the side streets, where respectable poverty strives, hand in hand, with the grim assailant—want! Singularly out of keeping with shabby and poverty-stricken appearance of the little apartment was a newly-finished dress of lustrous purple silk, bright as the dyes of Tyre, that lay folded on the table beside the window, in such a manner that you could see the costly trimming—a wide border of purple velvet, edged on either side with a floating white point lace. For poor Ellen Waynall was nothing more important than a hard-working and poorly-paid dressmaker. She lay on the little white bed in the corner, with her flushed cheek pressed close against the pillow, and her slender figure partially covered by a coarse plaided shaw, while the occasional involuntary contraction of her forehead bore witness to the pain she was meekly suffering. As one or two quiet tears escaped from her closed eyelids, and crept softly down her cheeks, a light step sounded on the landing outside, and a knock was given gently on the panel of the outer door.

"Come in," said Ellen, hurriedly dashing away her tears. "Laura, is it possible this is you, dear?

"Yes, it is myself, and none other, Nell. I could not imagine why you did not come and fit that dress, as you had promised; but I know the reason now. Nelly, you are sick. Why did you not send at once for me."

Ellen tried to smile faintly.

"I am not very sick, Laura; at least I have not suffered much until to-night, and the doctor says that if I only had a little wine—no, no, Laura, do not draw your purse," she added, with a slightly perceptible sparkle in her eyes, and a proud quiver to her lips, "I am not quite so low as to need charity. Do not look so hurt and grieved, You know how proud and sensitive I cannot help being on some point. It is only for a little while. When I am well enough to take the dress home, and receive the money for it, I shall be able to purchase whatever I may require."

Laura Avery knelt down at her friend's bed-side, with soft, pleading eyes.

"Dear Ellen, you surely will not refuse to accept a temporary loan."

Ellen shook her head with a grave smile. "I can wait, Laura," said she.

Laura looked from the dress to Ellen with a look of pained perplexity. Suddenly a bright thought struck her.

"Let me take the dress home, Ellen!" she exclaimed. "The walk will be just what I need, and I can stop at Debour's on the way, and order the wine for you. You will never be strong unless you cossett yourself up a little. You will let me, won't you, Nellie?"

Ellen hesitated a moment. "But—"

"No buts in the matter, if you please, Nell," laughed Laura, gleefully beginning to fold the rich dress into the little dress that stood beside it. "Tell me where it is to go."

"To Mrs. Richley's, in River Street. Why, Laura, what is the matter?

"Nothing; only I am folding this dress wrong," replied Laura, in a low voice.

It was well that Ellen did not see the scarlet blush that rose to her friend's lovely face, as she stood with her back to the bed smoothing the lustrous breadths of the silk. What a selfish little creature I am," she mused, "Poor Nelly needs the money so much, and cannot go for it herself; and it isn't at all likely that I shall see Florian. I will go—th re is an end of it."

"Thank you, dear Laura; it is so kind of you," said Ellen, fervently, as Laura came to the bed-side with the basket on her arm, and blue veil drawn closely over over the brown bonnet. "She owes me three dollars for this dress, and there are seven dollars on the old account that she has never paid me.

"Ten dollars! I'll collect it, never fear," said Laura, gaily, as she disappeared, while to poor Ellen it seemed as if the sunshine all died out with the bright presence of her beautiful friend. It was nearly dusk when Miss Avery, summoning up all her resolution, ascended the brown stone steps of the Richley mansion, and rang the bell.

"Is Mrs. Richley at home?"

"What is your business with Mrs. Richley?" asked the servant, suspiciously viewing the little basket that she carried.

Laura bit her lip; this in nner from the servants was entirely a new experience to her, yet how often must poor Ellen have endurec it?"

"I have called to bring home a dress that was finished for her," she said, in a tone of quiet dignity.

"Oh—ah—yes, well, I suppose you had best walk in."

The servant conducted her up-stairs to a sort of boudoir, where Mrs. Richley, a portly dame of about fifty, gorgeously arrayed in crimson silk, was sitting in her easy chair in front of a glowing coal fire. Laura was inwardly grateful that the gas had not been lighted, particularly when she observed that Mr. Florian Richley was lounging on a velvet sofa in one of the window recesses. Mrs. Richley looked up as the servant ushered in the new comer.

"Well, young woman," she said, "what do you want?"

Laura's cheek tinged at the tone of coarse insolence in which she was addressed, but she commanded herself to reply meekly—

"I have brought home your dress, Mrs. Richley."

"Where is Miss Waynall?"

"She is ill."

"Very well! lay down the dress—it is all right."

But Laura stood her ground valiantly.

"Miss Waynall would like the money to-night, ma'am—seven dollars on the old account, and three for this dress"

"It is not convenient to-night."

"But, Mrs. Richley, Miss Waynall is ill, and needs the money very much," persisted Laura.

"There, Florian, I told you just how it would be," said Mrs. Richley, petulantly, addressing the young man in the Turkish dressing gown and elaborately arranged hair.

"What the deuce is the matter now?" snappishly asked Florian, for the first time condescending to evince the least interest in what was going on.

"Why, these impertinent dressmaking people are always clamoring for money, just when you have drained me of my last cent."

"Let 'em clamor, then; that's my advice," said Mr. Florian, without taking the trouble to move his head.

"Just give me back that ten dollar bill, Florian," urged his mother. "You can't want it to-night."

"But I do want it, as it happens," said Florian, coolly.

"You are just going to fritter it away in some of those gambling places, or drink yourself stupid again," fretted Mrs. Richley. "It's too bad—getting my money away from me, just to indulge in those horrid habits. Why don't you earn money for yourself?"

"Easy, mother, easy," said the dutiful son, lazily dragging himself to a sitting posture. "Don't lose your temper, for it isn't worth while. This ten dollar bill is going to help to make my fortune. It shall take the lovely Laura to the Opera to-night."

"Nonsense!" returned Mrs. Richley. "This fine scheme will flash in the pan, like all the rest of your castles in the air. She won't have you."

"Oh, yes, she will, my incredulous mamma. Wait and see. I shall bring her to the point pretty soon; then I'll pay you back the money with interest out of my lady's bag of shiners."

"And will you leave off your gambling habits? Oh, Florian, they will be the ruin of you yet."

"Perhaps—perhaps not," returned the young man, indolently. "That will be very much as I please.

Both the mother and the hopeful son had, apparently, entirely forgotten the presence of the young girl who was standing in the dusky shadow of the door, until this moment, when Mrs. Richley, turning sharply round, saw her.

"What are you waiting for?" she asked irritably. "I have already told you that it was not convenient to pay you the money to-night. Why don't you go about your business?"

Her cheeks were flushed, even beneath their artificial bloom of rouge, and her dull gray eyes sparkled with rising anger, as Laura Avery composedly advanced. She took one of the wax tapers from its china shell, and lighted the gas with a steady hand, whose flash of rich rings struck Mrs. Richley with astonishment. Then, quietly looking the amazed mother and son in the face, she spoke.

"I am sorry that you cannot pay your just debts, madam; but I am not sorry for any occurrence that has had the effect of opening my eyes to the true character of Mr. Florian Richley. I will take the ten dollars, sir, to my sick friend, as you will find it entirely unnecessary to go to the expense of taking Miss Laura Avery to the Opera to-night."

Florian's handsome cheek had grown very pale—his knees quivered beneath him, as he mechanically took the bill from his pocket book and placed it in the hand of the imperative beauty; while Mrs. Richley sank back aghast into the cushioned easy chair. Florian made no desperate attempt to retrieve his lost fortunes, even in the moment of sore defeat and discomfiture.

"I am very sorry—awkward mistake—hope you will afford an explacation," he stammered.

"I require no explanation, sir," was Laura's cold reply, as she withdrew from the apartment, haughty and unapproachable as a statute of ice. She hurried homeward through the twilight streets with a burning cheek and beating heart, and it was nearly dark when she once more entered Miss Waynall's room, lighted only by the faint glow of the fire.

"Back so soon, Laura?" asked Ellen, somewhat surprised.

"Here is the money, Nelly, and here is the wine," she said, thankful that the dim light could not betray her tell-tale features, "and now you must get well as fast as you can."

"Oh, Laura! I am so much obliged to you," said Ellen, earnestly.

Laura stopped to kiss her friend's pale cheek, inwardly thinking how much cause she had to thank Ellen's indisposition. But she never told Ellen of the discovery she had unwittingly made, while fulfilling the gentle mission of friendship, and no one ever knew the precise manner in which the contemplated match between Florian Richley and Laura Avery was broken off. There are some things that bring their own reward in this world, and that one act of kindness had saved Laura from taking the step that would have precipitated her into a lifetime of misery.

TO CHURCH-GOING PEOPLE.

The gentlemen at Church may be known by the following marks:

1. Comes in good season, so as neither to interrupt the pastor nor the congregation by a late arrival.

2. Does not stop on the steps nor in the portico, either to gaze on the ladies, salute friends, or display his colloquial powers.

3. Opens and shuts the door gently, and walks deliberately and lightly up the aisle or gallery stairs, and gets a seat as quietly as possible, making few people move.

4. Takes his place either in the back of the seat, or steps out in the aisle when any one wishes to pass in, and never thinks of making people crowd past him while keeping his place on the seat.

5. Is always attentive to strangers, and gives up his seat to such, seeking another for himself.

6. Never thinks of defiling the house of God with tobacco, or annoying those who sit near him by chewing that nauseous weed in Church.

7. Never, unless in case of illness, goes out during the time of the service. But if necessity compels him to do so, he goes out so quietly that his manner is an apology for the act.

8. Does not engage in any conversation before the service commences.

9. Does not whisper, or laugh, or eat any fruit in the house of God.

10. Does not rush out of Church like a tramping horse, the moment the benediction is pronounced. but retires slowly and in a noiseless manner.

11. Does all he can by precept and by example to promote decorum in others, and is ever ready to lend his aid to discountenance all indecorum in the house of God.

SIR BENJAMIN BRODIE'S CURE FOR SLEEPLESSNESS.—I mentioned to Benjamin that I was suffering from sleepless nights, and asked if there was any remedy for this. He said the best was open air with exercise. He doubted whether there was any other; the nerves gained vigour in an out-of-door life, and nature would give the relief of sleep to the body when sufficiently fatigued by exercise. He had known a remarkable case of a pound man of fortune, who in his prosperous days was restless and sleepless. He ran through his fortune, reduced to the last shift for a livelihood, became a stone-breaker on the roads. In this condition he was recognised by some of his former acquaintance. They were greatly shocked, and combined to subscribe a sum of money enough to relieve him from present necessity, and went to him with this free offering, and suggestions for a different mode of life. But he declined the gift, saying—"Thank you; I am happy and healthy now. I sleep all night, and I am happy all day; and I prefer to stay as I am." "This," said Brodie, "sound rather like a mortal tale out of my store of fiction, but it is a fact within the sphere of my actual knowledge."—Reminiscence of Sir Benjamin Brodie in Fraser's Magazine.

MISERABLE PEOPLE.—Young ladies with new bonnets on rainy Sundays, and dresses playing dip, dip, at every step. A witness in a bribery case. A smoking nephew on a visit to an aunt. A young doctor who has just cured his first patient, and has no prospect of another.

An American editor says he once partook of a beverage so strong that he could not tell whether it was brandy or a torchlight procession that was going down his throat.

THE SHIVERLY A PRACTISIN'.

Saint's Rest,) wich is in the Stait uv Noo Gersy,) Sept. 21, 1865.

Ginral Bonnerger Pogram uv Mississippy, who demonstrated his devosbun to the grate prinsiples uv constitoosbanl liberty, by servin the confederasy ex commissary, who rote me to meet him in Washinton. He had jest rescoved his pardon, and the fust yoose he made of his privileges wuz to come to Washinton to meet me fur consultashen on the hopes and prospex uv the Dimocrisy.

Ginral Pogram is a fine spesemen uv the ginnooine shivelrus sutherner. Six feet 2 inches in hite, he kin chaw more towacker, spit with greater accoorasy, and walk uprite under a hevyer lode of strate whisky, than any man I ever met. A unsfisticated child uv natur, he scorns the polish and sham uv wat is called civilization. Never shel I forgit the litenin-glase uv contempt he guv me when I askt him to qualify his whisky with a little water!

Ginral Pogram opened by lementin the untimely decese uv so many suthern voters, in the late diabolikle war linkin and his helpuns made upon 'em.

I replied, to-wunst, that the deficit cood be easly made up. 'I her,' sez I, 'bin a calcoolatin this matter. At a triflin expendditoor uv money, the tide uv emigrashen from Europe ken be turned southward, and the places uv poor slawtered heros be filled with the Irishman, the German, the—'

'Liar! thief! murderer! nigger-steeler!' showtid the Ginral, seezin me by the throte and brandishin his cane over me.

Fallin on my knees, (formin a tablow, the 'Yoonion ex it wuz,") I gaspt:

'Why this violence?'

'Oh, nuthin,' replied the Ginral, relaxin his holt, 'I shel be electid to Congris, and ex I shel hev to mix with yoo Yankees, I wuz a practisin the old tacktix, jest to get my hand in agin. Wuz yoo afeered? Bless yoor sole, we woodent kill a Northern Dimekrat for no money—we need 'em all. But,' continued he, 'this emigrashen skeem uv yourn won't work. Yer Irishman and yer German wood work, but they'd want to get wages.'

'Wal,' sez I, astounded, not seein what he drivin at.

'Can't you see,' sez he, 'they'd earn money, they'd save it. Our habits ex expensive, and now that niger-breedin is dun away with, we can't sell over half a dosen niggers a year, to keep up our expenses. Alas, (tears suffused his beemin eyes ex he spoke) the last nigger I sold wuz ex white ex yoo are; my son Tom wuz her father, and I got $2,500 for her in Mobeel when she wux 16. I sold her to the President uv the Suthern Society for ther conversbun uv the Heathin. I knockt a hundred off the price uv the gal on that account. But to resoom.

'The furiner works, and saves suthin—we won't work, can't sell no more niggers, and git hard up, and her to sell land to the furriner. Then he's OUR EKAL! and what becomes of the anshent shivelry?'

'But,' sez I, 'yoo hed the poor whites among you afore the war. What wuss wood a furriner be?

'Them poor whites wuz a pekooyler class—we kep em coz we hed to her em to vote. We allowed them to squat on our lands, never let em learn 2 read, and kep ther skins full of cheep whisky. When wun uv them got to know too much, we ether killed him or sent him North, keepin among us jest sich as we wanted. With our poor whites doin our rotin at hum you Dimekrats doin it up North, and the niggers doin your labor, truly we wuz a favored people.'

'But who ere you goin to git to do your labor?'

'The nigger.'

'Not much. The Northern Legislachers are a passin laws agin ther comin there, so they cant git away from us, and jest ex soon ex the thrice-accursed burelin soljers are withdrawd, our laws is in force, and then wat good is a nigger's contract to him? Methinks the cuss of Kanan is still onto him, Linkin to the contrary notwithstandin. I shel be kind to mine—I shel pay the abelbodied field hands $4 per month, mechanics $6. Uv course ef furriners kin compete with em, and work for less, we'll take em, previded they'll be ex umble.

'The nigger was made to be a slave. God cust Kanan and sed he shood be a servant forever. Did He mean us to pay em wages? Not enny, for ef He had He wood her so ordered our tastes and habits so ez we shood hev the wherewithal to do it.

'Nasby,' sed he, a pawsin to draoe the bottle, and rollin his ize upwards, 'I am the child uv a pius parence, and never, no never, will I depart from their faith. God cust the nigger, and I will do my part manfully towards carryin out His will. Watever betides us, the suns uv Ham must be the survants uv the suns uv Japheth, and their dawters likewise, that the Skriptur shel be fulfilled.'

I partid with that grate and good man, my mind full uv the nearly white gals he owned, and determined, ere long, to be assistin uv him in fulfillin that part uv the Skriptur.

GONE TO POT.—The mammoth cheese exhibited at the recent Provincial Fair at London, weighing 4,000 pounds, has met with a terrible disaster and been irreparably damaged. The owners designing to exhibit in Montreal, risked the invaluable possession upon the Grand Trunk Railway—what else could have been expected. The cheese was in a wagon which occupied a position on one of the platform cars, and when a short distance east of Napanee this car, with several others, ran of the track and the mammoth cheese was turned over and rolled with tremendous force down an embankment. The catastrophe had the effect of cracking it through and through and knocking out a few fifty pound chunks; and it is further reported that skippers, the size of woodchucks, startled by the shock, were seen to emerge from the spongy mass and make their way over the adjacent fields, but this story is possibly an exaggeration.

GHOST STORY.

The following circumstances have been reported by the caretaker of a residence having a tale of suicide connected with it, and situated in a somewhat lonely position surrounded by trees in the vicinity of Blackrock. Recently, between twelve and one o'clock at night, the narrator was alarmed by hearing footsteps ascending the house stairs of the mansion, of which he was for the time being the sole occupier and caretaker. Striking a light, and taking with him a double-barrelled gun, loaded with bullets, he entered the corridor whence the sound of footsteps seemed to proceed, and there at the head of the stairs leading to the corridor, he perceived by the dim light of his candle, the figure of a man dressed in dark trousers and coat, and wearing a broad-leafed slouching hat. He called out, but receiving no reply, he laid down the light, and discharged both barrels at the figure, which disappeared. As he reports, he proceeded to examine all the doors by which the staircase or corridor could be entered, but all were securely fastened—After about an hour, continued and loud noise was heard by the caretaker, proceeding as from the kitchen of the residence in question. Going in that direction, he again distinctly saw the same figure standing motionless in the kitchen passage. Now greatly alarmed, he again discharged his gun, which he had reloaded, and dropped both light and gun, and ran from the house. Two police constables of the F division were promptly on the scene, and a minute search was made throughout the premises, but nothing unusual was found save the dropped gun and candle, and bullet holes in the wall where the caretaker indicated having fired them. These circumstances, with the necessary reservation of names, are here given precisely as related by the actors in them. Those who are fond of unravelling mysteries and accounting for ghost stories will probably easily arrive at the elucidation of this particular one.—Cor. of Buffalo Express.

Counting the Cost of Camp Meeting.

A correspondent of the Providence Press makes the following calculation:—"It costs something now to go to a camp meeting, as may appear from the following figures. Let us put the number in attendance upon this meeting (Martha's Vineyard) on Sunday at 10,000 people. This calculation, we think, is quite moderate. Let us suppose the travelling expenses of these 10,000 persons average $3 each; this will foot up to $30,000. Now let it be supposed that one half that number average one week's stay upon the ground for each individual. The price of board is seven dollars per week. The board of these 5,000 people would reach the respectable figure of $35,000. Now let it be supposed that five thousand persons sacrifice seven day's labor each, and that each man's earnings (when at home) average two dollars per day, this calculation will give us the little item of $70,000. At least $30,000 worth of property remains permanently upon the ground. The interest of this at 7 per cent. would yield $2,100. Our calculation is that each of the 10,000 persons who visit the encampment expend $1 for incidental expenses. Now let us add these several items together, and we find that they present the astounding aggregate of one hundred and forty-five thousand two hundred and ten dollars!

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE—A MAN'S HAT IN A LADY'S SLEEPING ROOM.—Massachusetts is noted for its many institutions of learning. In one of these, which is for females only, and which is situated not far from Springfiel, there is a rule that the young ladies must retire for the night at 10 o'lock; and to see that this rule is complied with, one of the teachers visits all the rooms every night. One night as the teacher was going her nightly rounds, she found in a certain Miss B—'s room, a man's hat. She looked first at the hat and then at the young lady. Miss B. was very calmly sleeping, unmindful of the suspicions of the teacher, who had now gone after reinforcements. She soon came back with Miss H., the principal of the school. They together searched the room with lights and tongs, confident that they would find a man some corner; but they searched in vain—for all they could find was the hat. So the young lady was awakened. 'Miss B., did you have any gentleman visitor to-day?' said Miss H., speaking rather severely.—'I believe not,' was the answer. 'Or any this evening?' 'No.' 'Now, Miss B., there is no use denying it; we know all about it.' 'All about what?' said the girl very composedly. 'About having a man concealed in your room.' 'What proof have you of it?' was the reply. 'This,' said Miss H., striking a theatrical attitude, and holding the hat, 'this is the proof, and for this you must be called to account.' 'Don't lug that hat off,' said Miss B., 'I brought that from home yesterday to make soles to my slippers.'

FEEDING FOWLS.—In a state of nature, fowls run over a great extent of ground before they get a crop full. They pick up their food, grain by grain, and with it small pieces of dirt, blades of grass, and other things, that help digestion. Placed before the fowls in boxes filled with grain, the birds do in five minutes that which should be the work of two hours; they eat a greedy fill, and suffering unnatural repletion, they have recourse to drink, the corn swells in the crop, and the sufferers instead of walking about cheerfully, hide in corners and squat about to the detriment of their health.—This applies to the equally bad practice of throwing down the food in heaps.

Some wicked fellow says 'that he has invented a new telegraph.' He purposes to place a line of women fifty steps apart, and commit the news to the first as a very profound secret.

A writer on swearing says—'An oath from a woman's lips is unnatural and incredible. I would as soon expect a bullet from a rosebud.'

NORTH WENTWORTH.

At some time the political world has been comparatively quite, scarcely a blast passing over the political horizon. At length the decease of the member for North Wentworth, and lover-buried haste of his would-be representative and late opponent, have induced some comment from the press of the country. The indecent haste of Mr. Brown, who desires to represent the county in the Tory interest, should be enough to sink him very low in the eyes of the people of North Wentworth. It tends to show the length to which that party will go to carry their point, not regarding even the presence of the dead. Mr. Brown issued his address to the electors of Wentworth before the remains of Mr. Dickson, their late representative, had been committed to the earth, if we mistake not. Put aside from this matter, as this and more might be expected from a politician who had been defeated at the last election, there are other reasons urged against the course the oppositionists are pursuing at the present time. At the time of the formation of the present coalition, it is well known that the business of the country had come to a dead lock. Neither party could carry on the necessary legislation of the country, and more than once were the governments defeated. Upper Canada had long spoken loudly of the wrongs she was forced to endure through the truckling of some of her corrupt politicians, to Lower Canada domination. During this stand still state of affairs, many were the nostrums set forth for the cure of the public malady; but the treatment could not or would not be continued long enough to prove its power to affect a cure. Just then it was found necessary to effect a complete change in the tactics of parties; and, by common consent, unanimous was the agreement to set aside the strife and opposition, and allow breathing-time for a trial to reconstruct and remodel the affairs of the Province, in any way (but more especially by means of Confederation, if possible) that would prove a cure for the evils complained of, and at the same time continue intact the connection with the mother country. In vain may it be asserted that there was no agreement to allow the then status quo to remain until a fair trial of the wisdom of the Coalition to settle the great constitutional questions of the day should be fairly tested. This agreement, or compact, or whatever it may be called, was not long kept by the Conservative party; they hounded Mr. McDougall, from place to place, as long as they had the slightest glimmer of a prospect of rocking up a little opposition. And not even not with that, they will not allow the last breath of a man to expire until they rush to the canvass. This will work its own cure very soon. The good sense of the people will condemn such conduct, and allow those who are so hasty to sink into insignificance. As regards the personal claims of the two men upon the people of Wentworth, we, at this distance, are not able to give an opinion. As regards the claims of the parties, there can be no doubt that Mr. McMonies' claims are the strongest. The great battle of Constitutional Reform, so long sought by Upper Canada, would never have been entertained for a moment by the Conservative party, but for fear of the power of the Reform party. Whatever they have done, they have been forced into by Reformers. It will, therefore, be easily perceived that it is for the interest of the country to keep a strong Reform representation; and we trust that the Reformers of North Wentworth will see to it that Mr. McMonies' election will be carried by an overwhelming majority. Mr. Brown's hopes of success are based considerably on the fact of his being Warden. This we all know is a baseless vision. The most popular or the most efficient do not always have the honor of Warden conferred upon them. Oftener the candidate for Warden is chosen because of the availability of the man, rather than his popularity. One aspirant is disappointed, and immediately he sets to work to overthrow the design of his opposers, and thus casts his vote irrespective of qualification or popularity. This may have been the case with Mr. Brown, or lobby practice may have raised him to the honorable position.—Reformers, too, will have brought out their best men; and thus Mr. Brown may have no opportunity yet of serving the county represented by the cares of Parliament. For a good lesson may be derived from the present contest. Reformers should not be asleep or indifferent, but always ready for the conflict. Their opponents in North Wentworth had their man nominated before the probability of a vacancy had been thought of. Let Reformers, therefore, improve the lesson thus offered, and not be found indifferent until their opponents get the advantage of them.

Peterboro' Literary Club.

We are requested to State that the regular meeting of the the club will commence on Thursday evening, November 2nd 1865, at the Freemens' Hall. Subject for discussion, "Should the rate of interest on money be limited by law." The public are invited to attend.

BARRAS.—Petitions are being signed to have Barras's sentence commuted. He has written to the President of the United States to intercede for him; he appears to dread death.

OUR COUNTY.

We will be pardoned while we express our pride at the present state of morals in this County. At the last sitting of Assize held here the Sheriff had the pleasure of presenting the Judge with a pair of white gloves, as a token of the non existence of any criminal cases on the Docket. This, too, is the second, if not the third time the Judge has had the pleasure of performing this act, and we think within a very short period. From this it will be seen that the moral standing of our citizens is second to none in this country, or any other country; and the people deserve the highest encomiums for their good character and peaceable and law-abiding habits. This, Judge Draper took occasion to refer to in his address to the Grand Jury, congratulating them on the state of things, and wishing that they might continue. He remarked that the excellent system of education established in the province was doing much for the County toward preventing crime; but he further stated that education alone could not work the destruction of evil or the prevention of crime; that must be brought about by a higher power. The learned Judge then referred to the approaching Thanksgiving Day, and recommended the observance of it as a token of thankfulness for the good mercies of God, and His regard for his creatures in providing for their necessity.

It is very satisfactory for us to be able to say that our County stands the highest in the province as regards the morality of the people. Murder, robbery, burglary, arson, &c. &c., are among the crimes that are too numerous in other places, while our County stand pre-eminent, for two or three sessions, for not having what might be called a criminal case on the calendar. Let us hope that these things will continue and that year after year we will be able to record the advancement of the people in the arts of civilization and peace, and that they will remain a law-abiding people, remarkable only for their industry, morality, love of order and truth, and the cultivation of every principle contained in the Moral Law.

OBITUARY.

It becomes our painful duty to chronicle the decease of John Harvey, Esq., the oldest and most esteemed of the early settlers of this County. Mr. Harvey came to Canada about 40 years ago, and was one of two white men who first trod on the site of the present Town of Peterborough, long before there was a shanty or hut where are now beautiful mansions and extensive stores. He was a native of Roxborroughshire, Scotland, and settled in Smith in the year 1819, where he has resided since until his death at a good old age (67.) He was during life esteemed by all who knew him, and will be mourned by a numerous circle of relations and friends.

Mr. Harvey, upon his arrival in this country, remained a while at Quebec, and afterwards for a season at Kingston. With the intention of farming, he proceeded to Toronto—then Little York, when, by the advice of Rev. John Strachan, now Bishop of Toronto, he settled in Smith, on the land where now stands the home-stead. In coming, he had to proceed from Port Hope on foot, having only a trail to guide him the greater part of the way. Nobly did he contend with the privations and hardships of the early settlement. By his industry and perseverance, he raised himself to independence. For a few years past, his health has been observed to be declining; but the sudden decease of his youngest daughter, about two months ago, had the effect of accelerating the disease until on Monday last he expired, in the midst of a number of anxious relatives. He leaves behind him five sons and two daughters, besides a very numerous circle of friends, to mourn their loss.

His remains were conveyed to their last resting place, yesterday, accompanied by a large concourse of acquaintances.

Thus another of the pioneers of the country is removed by the hand of unerring wisdom. Another indication of the connexion of the present with the future is legibly written for the instruction of the living. A most emphatic persuasion to improve the present is thus afforded; and while the living deservedly honor the memory of the dead, let them strive to imitate their virtues, so that, like the deceased, in life they may be respected, and in death be happy.

We omitted to refer to some articles from the new settlements that were on exhibition at the County Show, which would be an interjection to those who brought their articles so far, and which stuff deserves particular notice. The fact that the new settlement can produce such fine samples of both grain and roots completely explodes the idea that the back County is barren—and of course unfit for habitation.

The articles from the English Company's settlement were particularly recommended as worthy of notice. The samples, both of the grain and roots, were very fine; in a few instances superior to those of a similar sort from the older settlements of the County.

The potatoes were superior to anything we have witnessed for years; some of them the largest we ever saw. The oats, both thrashed and on the straw, were very good indeed. The land, however, must have been too strong for oats: the straw was five feet 7½ inches high; the ears were well formed and the grain good. We suppose it to have been the first crop on new land; had it been after one or two crops of wheat, it might have been a little plumper and harder. The wheat shown was also very good indeed, and these and other articles shown, fully prove the soil to be fertile enough to amply repay the labors of the husbandman. We cannot refrain from congratulating the people of Dysart and Anstruther, as well as settlers in Burleigh, on the creditable appearance they made at their first competition at our County Show.

CORRECTION.—In the prize list of last week an error occurred, in the name of Mr. Spry. As exhibitor of Carriages, Fry & Edmison should have been Spry & Edmison.

At Smith's Falls, a man named, Thomas Eagar, and his wife were found dead in their own house. A whisky bottle was found very near them; this accounts for the murder.

The Committee of the Protestant Home beg to acknowledge with thanks, the following very liberal donations collected on the day of thanksgiving by the the following churches, viz:

From the First Presbyterian....$40.50
From the Wesleyan Methodist..$13.00

THE INTERNATIONAL VISIT.

SECOND DAY IN ROCHESTER.

At nine o'clock, a. m., the Mayor and other distinguished citizens were at the Bracket House, in order to conduct the party to the different places of interest. They were first conducted to the Mayor's office. Here the British and American flags graced the walls, and the motto "United we can rule the World," was in large letters. The next place of interest was the Council Chamber. Here the President of the Council, Alderman Draper, took occasion to explain that their business was conducted under the different heads of Legislative Department, Executive and Judicial; their city was divided into 14 Wards, each Ward represented by 2 Aldermen, or 28 in all. This hall was decorated with paintings of all their ex Mayors, and we noticed a niche for the present one also. The County Court Room was the next place visited, and the court was just in sitting. This Hall decorated with paintings of the Pioneers of the county a sign that they remember departed worth and those who bore the burden and heat of the day. The library of the County Clerk's office is a very extensive one, and we learned that this Officer also performs the duty of Registrar. Notwithstanding the American love of change, we found here the Deputy Clerk Mr. Cuttler, who has occupied this position for 10 years. We also had a view of the Way Locks on the Erie canal and saw a vessel weighed, the weight being 318, 750 lbs. Vessels to the weight of 600,000 lbs. can be weighed here. The whole apparatus is very simple too, and the work is done in a great measure by the agency of water. We then returned to witness the display of fire engines. There are 4 steam fire engines in the city. The whole force costs about $12000 a year. The engines cost about $3000 each, and are capable of throwing water 180 to 200 feet high and perfect currents so that fire could make no progress when they are at work.

Then came dinner, which was also provided at the same excellent hotel where we had been accommodated the night before.

After dinner, the whole party were provided with carriages, and taken first to the House of Refuge—a reformatory establishment—in which there are 470 boys between the ages of 7 and 16 years. Here they are boarded schooled and instructed in principles of religion and morality. They are taught trades, and we witnessed them making chairs, brushes, boots and shoes, &c., thus while they are confined, the means of obtaining an honest living in future is put within their reach. The yard is fitted for amusements for summer and winter, and the whole is calculated to please rather than leave any feelings of disgust when they may leave. The whole establishment costs $55,000, yearly of this the State furnishes $26,000, and the wages of the boys brings in a little over $26 000. Everything being calculated to make it as self-sustaining as possible.

We next passed by a large grain elevator on the canal, and were conducted to the City Hospital, where a most sumptuous collation was prepared by the ladies who have the care of this institution. After the refreshment, the Port Hope Glee Club sung a most pathetic piece, which brought tears to many present. Our next visit was made to St. Mary's Hospital, supported by the Sisters of Charity; here we saw some invalids in most comfortable apartments, attended by the kind sisters who had also waited on many of the wounded soldiers during their late struggle.

Some way in the order of the day, the abode of the dead and the Penitentiary concluded the sight-seeing, as old Sol was beginning to go down in the far west. But Mount Hope, the cemetery of the city, is really a place where one would almost like to rest to the great day. Our stay here was too short. A day among the "tombs" would hardly satisfy. We mounted an observatory and took a view of the city and surrounding, as we did also from the observatory of the City Hall. From both these places the view is delightful. The City appears beautiful; the streets lined with trees; the private residences very tastefully surrounded with trees and shrubs—showing a taste for the beautiful and cheerful. The Penitentiary has nothing about it that would tempt our stay. The poor culprits are not to be envied; but crime must be punished, and well will it be if their punishment in this life leads them to repentance, so that they may avoid eternal punishment. Here the programme was again a little changed. A citizen, Mr. Knapp, had provided a lunch in his beautiful grounds, which he expected they would stop and partake of; but the lateness of the evening forbade it. All the party returned safe and well to the starting point, where tea was in waiting, which gave opportunity for more expression of sentiment and good will. Here Judge Chumasero of the County of Monroe, made one of the best speeches—nay, the very best during the whole proceedings. The Judge is eloquent—fluent—in the selection of expression, very elegant—and is an honor to his own, as he would be to any bench. The start for home. Now "home" was the watchword; and about nine p. m., all started for the cars. The good people of Rochester, however, did not give them up till they left the Canadians safe aboard of that magnificent steamer, the Corinthian. The Mayor of the city, all the Aldermen, and numerous private citizens, were unceasing in their efforts to please and attend to the guests. Aldermen Draper, Fish, Wagner, Quinn, &c., did all in their power to make the visit pleasant and profitable; and in this they succeeded.

On the host a series of hastily got up resolutions were prepared and presented to the owner, captain and agent of the Corinthian, thanking them for the part they had performed in these international interchanges of good feeling, and expressing their confidence in the vessel and her management. A vote of thanks was also presented to Col. Hanltain, for the able and satisfactory manner in which he had discharged the duty of spokesman for the whole party. It may not be out of place to remark that our worthy representative became the lion of the party, and bore home with him trophies of being also a favourite in the eyes of the American ladies, in the shape of a beautiful bouquet.

The heavings of the "beautiful waters" changed the cards very soon, however, and kept many with their heads low; but this was part of the expected programme, and few repined at it.

The whole visit was what may be called most pleasant, and profitable we trust. The interchange of thoughts, words, feelings and courtesies, we fondly hope will have a soothing effect on the minds of those who live so near each other, so that in future they will be able to trust one another in trouble, cease to annoy, and be enabled to live in peace and good will. We also trust this will not be the last of these international meetings.

THE MAYOR OF LINDSAY.

"Put a beggar on horseback, and he'll ride to the D—l."

This old adage was never better exemplified than in this instance, with respect to the individual, by the assistance of the County and the people where he resides, he has been raised almost from poverty to a respectable position. He arrived in this country dissatisfied: but, although the government was distasteful to him, he saw good opportunities to make money, and remains. By degrees he accumulates some property, (which is said to be his own)—gets into respectable society and assumes airs, and finally arrives at the position of Mayor of the Town. As chief magistrate of Lindsay, and representing the people, he is invited to partake of a grand reception (in common with the members of neighboring corporations) in a foreign land. While there, and in reply to the toast "our guests," he embraces the opportunity to utter no disloyal sentiments against the country to which he is so much indebted. He rises, and in a grave and sedate manner, unbosoms himself in a few ignorant and disconnected sentences, the tenor of which was his praise of "the land of the free and the home of the brave," instead of thanking them, in the name of the people he represented, for being honored with an invitation. The dream of his childhood appeared in a vision before him; he hoped "the Stars and Stripes might float over his grave!" This sentence was given with great emphasis, and with a tremendous oratorical flourish, hoping the effect would draw forth a cheer. Unmistakable signs of contempt were visible in every part of the hall. The American gentlemen felt disgusted that their hospitality should be thus abused, but, of course, attributed it to ignorance. Many of them afterwards said that men of his stamp were a detriment rather than an accession to a country—that they would be dissatisfied with the pure and unsullied government of Heaven—and that so long as they could rule, everything was right: but once out of power, and rebellion would be rampant. I have not the slightest objection to the Mayor of Lindsay, or any other person, uttering these or any other sentiments he chooses, so long as he speaks for himself personally: but I do object to a person occupying his position, receiving the hospitality of a foreign nation, by virtue of that office, clothed with the seal of the corporation, and armed with the British constitution and flag, uttering expressions of deep seated and rooted hostility to the same institutions with which he is armed, and which is his passport to the privilege of associating with respectable people of two nationalities, each glorying in his own country without giving offence to the other. The gentleman actually had the misfortune to live under the British flag! Poor fellow! what a pity he did not land in the United States, instead of Canada! Who knows but to-day he might be occupying the position of a good many of his countrymen, carrying the "hod," or using those useful instruments, the "shovel" and the "pick." Query—Would not those be more congenial to his nature than his present accidental position. It appears the world (although under the British flag) has been unusually kind to him; but, unfortunately, Dame Nature has been exceedingly malignant. Mr. Editor, I am constrained to say that any individual who is so unprincipled, demoralized, degraded and disaffected, as to speak thus of a country that has been the means of raising him from a grade of poverty to a position approaching respectability, should receive the unqualified condemnation and contempt of every man and woman in the land; his name should be handed down to posterity as a renegade to his country. I most earnestly and sincerely pray that the Stars and Stripes may float over his grave, and would suggest the propriety of his commencing immediately to make preparations for his removal, that this fair land may no longer be polluted by his presence. I hope, for our common country, that the people of Lindsay will not not further disgrace themselves by electing him to the high position of Mayor again. Mr. Editor, you must pardon me for taking up so much of your valuable space. The remarks were so offensive I could not allow them to go unnoticed; I expected, however, to have been relieved of the trouble in your last edition.

Signs of the Times.—A new mode of observing Thanksgiving Day.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

MY DEAR SIR,—'Tis known to you, no doubt, that Wednesday, the 18th of October, 1865, was appointed by the Governor General as a Day of Thanksgiving to Almighty God for the mercies, &c., bestowed upon us as a nation. Very commendable in itself, and a duty the performance of which no one who acknowledges a superintending Providence will dispute, except Infidels, Nothingtarians, &c. Truly this is a day of change! and in keeping with the prevailing Infidelitarianism of our day, in morals and religion. A few of the keepers of those dens of immorality and vice called "Taverns," in Ashburnham and Peterboro', surprised the quiet inhabitants of Otonabee, by introducing to their notice a new mode of observing the day of thanksgiving, by having on the road to Keene some distance above Dudley School House, a public horse-racing! What next, Mr. Editor, after this? Perhaps the introction of King James' "Book of Sports on the Lord's Day." In order that the sport should not be without its usual accompaniments of profane swearing, drunkenness, &c., large barrels of "liquid fire" was conveyed from Ashburnham to the Township, on the Tuesday evening previous. On the morning of the next day, till the time the races commenced, crowds of pedestrians, (many of them the very scum of society,) and all sorts of vehicles, containing gents equally immoral, poured into Otonabee from Peterboro, Ashburnham, &c., to patronize with their presence the races. And on their return home, not a few of them evinced by their carriage that "temperance," and the dread of taking God's name in vain, were not included in their list of virtues. Truly, Mr. Editor, religion is at a low ebb among us—society is corrupt among us—and many of "The Watchmen upon Zion's towers," and others from whom better things might be expected, are sitting at ease with their arms folded, and crying "Peace when there is no peace." May not the charge brought against the Church in Ezekiel 33rd Ezekiel be applicable to us, only changed a little? "With their mouth they show much cursing an bitterness and their heart goeth after their vioting and drunkenness."

I remain, Mr. Editor, yours truly,

OTONABEE.

Otonabee, Oct. 20th, 1865.

THE DEATH OF HER WHO WAS NOT LOUIS NAPOLEON'S WIFE.—The foreign papers announce, among recent deaths in France, the decease of Mrs. Trelawney, better known as Kate Howard, who was formerly a pretty milliner girl in London, where she was picked up by Louis Napoleon, when in exile, and made his mistress. He was very much attached to her, and might have acknowledged her to the world, if she had been suited to act a part with so distinguished a person. But on the occasion of his marriage he also negotiated a marriage for her with one Capt. Trelawney, whose name she has since borne, though she is not lived happily with him, and would gladly have been free from him, if possible, but the judges could find no cause for the separation. Napoleon gave her the princely chateau and domain of Beauregard, near Versailles, where she lived and died with an income of $200,000 per annum for the expenses of keeping up the requisite state, and $200,000 worth of diamonds, and he ever treated her with the greatest consideration. Many a person seeking pardon from the government found the avenue to Napoleon through Kate Howard's sympathies. Like many favored mistresses in France, she became quite a church attendant during the last years of her life, and with unbounded charity washed away the sins of her youth. She died at the age of forty-one years and a month. Her funeral took place at the church of Chesney. The building was too small to contain the crowds which came to the service from Paris, Versailles, and the neighborhood. Mrs. Trelawney belonged to the Anglican Church, but she had for some time been a constant attendant in the Catholic Church of Chesney. Some hours before dying she abjured Protestantism at the hands of the parish priest and requested to be buried in the cemetery of the commune.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK FOR 1866.

The Fashion Magazine of the World.

LITERATURE, FINE ARTS, & FASHIONS The most magnificent Steel engravings—Double Fashion Plates. Wood engravings on every subject that can interest ladies. Crochet knitting, Netting, Embroidery, Articles for the Toilet, for the Parlor, the Boudoir, and the Kitchen. Everything, in fact, to make a complete Lady's Book

THE LADIES' FAVORITE FOR 36 YEARS

No Magazine has been able to compete with it. None attempt it for every department of a household. These are alone worth the price of the book.

GODEY'S RECEIPTS

MODEL COTTAGES, (no other Magazine gives them), with diagrams.

DRAWING LESSONS for the Young—Another speciality with Godey.

ORIGINAL MUSIC, worth $3 a year. Other Magazines publishes old worn-out music; but the subscribers to Godey get it before the music stores.

GARDENING FOR LADIES.—Another peculiarity with Godey.

Fashions from Messrs. A. T. Stewart & Co., of New York, the millionaire merchants, appear in Godey, the only Magazine that has them

Ladies' bonnets. We give more of them in a year than any other Magazine. In fact, the Lady's Book enables every lady to be her own bonnet maker.

MARION HARLAND,

Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemesis," and "Miriam," writes for Godey each month, and for no other magazine. A new novel by her will be published in 1866. We have also retained all our old and favorite contributors.

Poetry.

STICK TOGETHER.

The man who wrote the following deserves the crown of a hero, for his heart is of the stuff of which heroes are made:

When midst the wreck of fire and smoke,
When cannon rend the skies asunder,
And fierce dragoons with quickening stroke,
Upon the reeling regiments thunder,
The ranks close up to sharp command,
Till helmet's feather touches feather—
Compact the furious shock they stand,
And conquer, for they stick together.

When now, mid clouds of woe and want,
Our comrades' wails rise fast and faster,
And charging wildly on our front
Come the black legions of disaster,
Shall we present a wavering band,
And fly like leaves before wild weather?
No! side by side and hand in hand,
We'll stand our ground and stick together.

God gave us hands—one left, one right;
The first to help ourselves,—the other
To stretch abroad in kindly might,
And help along our faithful brother.
Then, if you see a brother fall,
And bow his head before the weather,
If you be not dastards all,
You'll keep him up and stick together.

ODD WAY OF TEACHING.

Some Englishmen, otherwise well educated, make mistakes respecting the pronunciation of the letter H. They omit it where it should be, and introduce it where it sould not. A wag supposes such persons to be thus addressed by the letter H itself:

Whereas I have by you been driven
From 'ouse, from 'ome, from 'ope, from 'eaven,
And placed by your most learned society
In hexile, hanguish, and hanxiety,
I here demand full restitution,
And beg you'll mend your elocution.

The retort is as smart as the attack:

Whereas we've rescued you, ingrate,
From 'andcuff, 'orror, and from 'ate,
From 'ell, from 'orse pond, and from 'alter,
And consecrated you in haltar,
We deem your prayer a rude intrusion,
And will not mend our elocution.

Varieties.

A man with a scolding wife, on being asked what his occupation was, replied that he kept a hot-house.

Don't live in hope with your arms folded; fortune smiles on those who roll up their sleeves and put their shoulders to the wheel.

Out West, the young ladies keep a light burning in the parlor to a late hour on Sunday night, to 'make believe' they've caught a beau.

THE LOVE OF A WEED.—Ladies, when being courted, ought not to object to the moderate use of tobacco. They should recollect that where there is a flame there must be smoke.

A Frenchman, soliciting relief, said gravely to his fair hearer—"Ma'amselle, I nevaire beg, but dat I have von wife vid several small family dat is growing very large and nossing to make dere bread out of but de perspiration of my own eye-brow."

Peter, what are you doing to that boy? asked a schoolmaster. "He wanted to know if you take ten from seventeen how many will remain; so I took ten of his apples to show him, and now he wants I sho'd give 'em back?" "Well why don't you do it?" "Cos, sir he would forget how many are left."

A bachelor sea captain, who was remarking the other day that he wanted a good chief officer, was promptly informed by a young lady present, that she had no objection to be his first mate. He took the hint—and took the lady.

"Come here, my lad," said an attorney to a lad about nine years old. "A case is between the devil and the people; which do you think will be most likely to gain the action?" The boy replied, "I guess it will be a hard squeeze; the people have the most money, but the devil has the most lawyers!"

"Now, gentlemen," said a nobleman to his guests, as the ladies left the room, "let us understand each other; are we to drink like men or like beasts?" The guests, somewhat indignant, exclaimed, 'like men.' "Then," he replied, "we are going to get jolly drunk, for brutes never drink more than they want."

"Sambo, am you posted in the natural sciences?" "Ob course I is; sartingly," "Then you can tell me the cause of the great blight in the potatoes for the last ten years?" "Oh! dat's easy enough. It's all owing to the rot-tater-y motion ob de earth."

A clergyman catechising the youth of his church, put the question from a catechism to a girl:—"What is your consolation in life?" The girl smiled, but did not answer. The clergyman insisted. "Well then," said she, "since I must tell you, it's a young printer, named Billy H——."

As Deacon A——, on a extremely cold morning, was riding by the house of his neighbor B——, the latter was chopping wood. The usual salutations were exchanged, and the horseman was about going on, when his neighbor detained him with—"Don't be in a hurry, deacon. Wouldn't you like a glass of old Jamaica this chilly morning?" "Thank you, kindly," said the Deacon, at the same time beginning to dismount, with a "I don't care if I do."—"Ah, don't trouble yourself to get off," said the neighbor, "I merely asked for information. We haven't a drop in the house just now."

Rather keen and suggestive was the repartee made the other evening in a Pittsfield, Mass, barber shop. A gentleman of standing, an owner in one of the factories, we came in impatient at being delayed while two boys had their hair cut, remarked that "Little boys ought to get their hair cut in day time, and go to bed in the evening."—"Yes," said one of the juveniles, "but little boys who get up in the morning at five o'clock and work in the mill till seven at night, must get their hair cut when they can."

A few years since, the noted Tom Marshal was delivering an address before a large audience in Buffalo, when some one in the hall every few moments shouted:—"Louder! louder!" Tom stood this for a while; but at last turning gravely to the presiding officer, said:—"Mr. Chairman, at the last day, when the angel shall with his golden trumpet, proclaim that "time shall be no longer," I doubt not, sir, that there will be in that vast crowd, as now, some drunken fool from Buffalo, shouting louder! louder!" Tom then went on with his speech, but there was no more cries of louder!"

Coleridge was acknowledged to be a bad rider. One day, riding through a street, he was accosted by a wit:—"I say, do you know what happened to Balaam?"—Then came the answer sharp and quick to the question—"The same as happened to me. An ass spoke to him."

The Great Original Painting

BATTLE OF THE BOYNE!

By HH. WEST, Pres. Royal Academy.

SPARKES, BOURNE & Co., would respectfully announce that they have now ready for delivery a splendidly got up COLORED LITHOGRAPH of this magnificent HISTORICAL PAINTING, representing the Battle at the moment of the death of the gallant DUKE SCHOMBERG; and which is published on the finest paper—size 22 × 28 inches.

This Picture—a faithful copy of the great Original—will be found incomparably superior to anything ever offered to the public either in this country or Great Britain. It has been executed by the first Artists of the day, and no trouble or expense has been spared to make it worthy of the justly celebrated Painter, and the GREAT HISTORICAL FACT which it represents, and which ought never to be forgotten by those who now enjoy the CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY which this event, more than any other in our history, was the means of establishing and perpetuating.

In times like these, when the principles of our Forefathers are being assailed on every hand, it is especially needful for us to bear in mind from whence sprung our Constitutional form of Government; and nothing contributes more to aid us in keeping in remembrance those momentous passages in our history than faithful representations by great Masters. And certainly no Historical Subject has been more ably treated than the above event by this celebrated Painter.

In presenting this Picture to the Protestant Community, and especially to those who are more feelingly alive to the vast benefits conferred on us by the ever memorable events of 1690, the Publishers feel every confidence that their efforts will be fully appreciated, and that this Picture will find an honored place in every Protestant home in the British Provinces.

AMERICAN
Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering
SEWING MACHINE!
COMPANY,
627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses, thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produces a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c., &c., it is indispensable: it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c., &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where Instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P.S.—A novel patented BUTTON-HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5:00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, etc, opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bizaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

☞ Write your name and address distinctly and say only what is necessary.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong Iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old harp form of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Dunham is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfield,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Barili.
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry.	Charles Fradel

Mr. SEGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical: in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal verisimilitude, that crowning excelence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercced the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Dunham, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

SEWING MACHINES!

FINKLE & LYON'S
NEW PATENT ROTARY FEED
Sewing Machines.

The following facts demonstrate that these Machines comprise the highest improvements in the Sewing Machine Art, viz:

1. Each Machine is guaranteed to give better satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in Market, or money refunded.
2. They have taken many of the highest premiums at the most important Exhibitions and fairs ever held in the United States.
3. They make the lock stitch alike on both sides—thus saving more than half the thread and silk used in the raveling-ridge-seams of the loop stitch and single-thread Sewing Machines.
4. They are adapted to the widest range of heavy and light sewing.
5. They have no rattling wires, or delicate attachments to keep in repair.
6. They require no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "Lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate Machine.

Please call and examine, and demonstrate for yourself, or send for Circular, with samples of sewing.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN
SEWING MACHINES.
EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms, { 536 Broadway, New York, / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nansook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COG WHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it almost impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

But in a more especial manner do we elicit the patronage of

Merchant Tailors,	Corset Makers,
Coach Makers,	Gaiter Fitters,
Hoop Skirt Manufacturers,	Shoe Binders,
Shirt and Bosom Makers.	Vest and Pantaloon Makers.
	Dress Makers.

Religious and Charitable Institution will be liberally dealt with.

One half-hour's instruction is sufficient to enable any person to work the Machine to their entire satisfaction.

OILY PILGRIM.

When Oily Pilgrim comes home again,
Hurrah, Hurrah;
We'll give him a hearty welcome then,
Hurrah, Hurrah;
The boys and girls will all turn out,
And bait their hooks and catch some trout,
And we'll all feel gay,
When Oily comes riding home.

CHORUS—
The boys and girls will all turn out,
And bait their hooks and catch some trout,
And we'll all feel gay,
When Oily comes riding home.

And now we'll kill the fatted calf,
Hurrah, Hurrah;
Oh, how 'twould make the ancients laugh,
Hurrah, Hurrah;
He has struck "oil" and made his pile,
His wife and children, see them smile,
And we'll all feel gay,
When Oily comes riding home.

The old folks too, will shout for joy,
Hurrah, Hurrah;
To welcome home the Oily boy,
Hurrah, Hurrah;
For old and young, and all are glad,
To learn he's caught the golden shad,
And we'll all feel gay,
When Oily comes riding home.

Now echoes far from yonder green,
Hurrah, Hurrah,
A flowing well of Kerosene,
Hurrah, Hurrah;
In one Oil well a sixteenth share,
Has made our Sam a millionare,
And we'll all feel gay,
When Oily comes riding home.

With coach and four he'll put on airs,
Hurrah, Hurrah;
And buy some stock in banking shares,
Hurrah, Hurrah;
Then ask his friends to dine and wine,
And dance and sing and cut it fine,
And we'll all feel gay,
When Oily comes riding home.

THE STORM SCEPTRE.

OR THE HERMIT OF THE CLIFF.

A TALE OF CRIME AND RETRIBUTION.

BY FRANK M. COX.

CHAPTER I.

THE STORM—THE HERMIT'S CAVE.

Some few years ago, I had occasion to visit the village of London, which stands at the foot of the cave mountain, a range of the Alleghanies. A pleasant place is London with its one wide street, lined with pretty white cottages, shaded by thrifty locust trees on either side, presenting such a pleasant and home like appearance, that it conveys the idea to the beholder, that they who dwell here cannot be aught else than happy and contented. West of the village looms up in gloomy grandeur the "Cove Peak" which throws its shadows over the village long before sundown. To the north stand two cliffs, one of them looming up some two hundred feet higher than the other, the western and south sides of these cliffs, are nearly perpendicular, and rise from the base several hundred feet.

It was in the balmy month of June, when nature is clothed in her bright emerald robes. The mountains to the westward, present a picture of once beautiful and grand the grey peaks peeping above the green foliage, crowned with the sighing pine; while the waving fields of grass and grain, the grazing herds and farm houses to the east and, presented a no less striking picture of quiet beauty.

Then there was nine host of the village fun, who so genial humor, good stories, and goodly fare all combined to make me loath to leave this quiet haven, and after I had concluded the business which brought me there, I still tarried.

It was on a beautiful afternoon of the day previous to which I was to take my leave of the pretty village and its hospitable inhabitants that I was sitting in company with some host beneath the grateful shade of the locust which stood before the door, smoking our pipes and listening to the rustling of the leaves above us; when the old man called my attention to the two cliffs north of the village, by saying:

'I had an adventure there some thirty years ago, which I will relate to you, if you have no objection.'

I said that I would hear the story with pleasure.

'That you may better understand it, I will have to describe some peculiar features of the cliffs which you cannot observe from here. Up the eastern side of the cliff there is a dangerous foot path, which leads to the summit of the high cliffs, and from thence to the lower one, which is the only accessible way to it.

'Some thirty years ago, I came to this village to reside and began to work at my trade. At times when business was slack, I was in the habit of going on hunting excursions to the mountains, a sport I was very fond of, sometimes I would stay for a few days.

One sultry afternoon I was returning from one of these excursions. As it was some distance I had to walk to reach the village, I took a bye path, which would cut off a few miles, and which led directly to the summit of the high cliff.

'The sun cast down his burning rays the air was very still, not even a whispering zephyr to rustle the leaves; all was hushed even the birds whose glad songs are heard in the broad sunlight were silent, occasionally one would strike up a melody, but it ended in a mournful wail. I walked as fast as I could under the circumstances for I wanted to reach the village ere nightfall, for there was every prospect of having a storm, and it was anything but agreeable to be out in the mountains during a storm, and the path down the cliff would be dangerous to travel at night.

'I found night was approaching, and I was yet some miles from the village, great black clouds were gathering and rising in the west, a faint breeze now sprung up and rustled the leaves, then it came in fitful gusts, then died away again, and all was still. Bye and bye the dark clouds covered the clear blue sky all around, and the low, hoarse murmurs of distant thunder came to the ear. As night closed around, the thunder grew more loud, the black clouds opened ever and again, and from their gloomy depths flashed forth lurid lightning. The wind rose suddenly, it howled, and moaned among the trees, and then went yelling away among the mountain peaks.

By the time that I had reached the cliff, the storm had increased in its fury, loud claps of thunder rolled away among the mountains, the surrounding scenes were lit up by vivid flashes of lightning, and the rain came down in torrents.

'It would have been madness to venture down the cliff on a night like this, and I was just turning around to seek for a shelter from the violence of the storm, when I caught the faint glimmer of a light through the darkness of the night, which seemed to be on the top of the lower cliff.

'I started down the path towards it, and had taken but a few steps when the light disappeared. I walked on down the path to the lower cliff, and went stumbling over the rocks, till I began to think that I had been deceived by a "will o' the wisp" we end I suddenly came to the mouth of a cave, the existence of which I was not aware of before, dimly lighted within. I resolved to ask for shelter for the night, and sung out:

'Hallos, within!'

'I was immediately answered, by a voice so strange and hollow, and unearthly in its tonation that I never will forget it.'

'Who is it that is wandering among these dangerous cliffs, whom the spirits of the storm are abroad?'

'I am a benighted traveller, and seek shelter from the fury of the storm.'

'Come in then,' said the voice, and the form of man appeared at the entrance of the cave. I entered the low narrow door, and found myself in a small cavern, some fifteen feet square, a lighted lamp of the rudest construction threw a sickly light around the interior of the cave. It was void of any thing in the shape of furniture; a pile of leaves in one corner looked as if it might be used for a bed. These things I observed at a single glance, and then turned to my strange host who was gazing at me intently with eyes so intensely bright and such a panther-like expression, that I could not stand their gaze; his hair and beard were long and white, and appeared to be many days since a comb had been used, he was clothed in rags, which hung loosely around his attenuated form.

'This is a fearful night,' I said, to break the silence.

'Fearful,' he exclaimed, turning his inane-like gaze out in the darkness. 'Oh yes, it is a fearful night. Hark there, don't you hear the voices of the storm spirits,' he exclaimed, grasping me by the arm in a vice like grip, as a peal of thunder reverberated among the mountains.

I began to wish that I was away from this place and my face must have expressed my fears, for he continued.

'Fear not, I am not mad; would to God I were; I would that my mind were buried in the lowest depths of oblivion; yes, I am mad, but 'tis the madness of remorse and despair. Stranger you see before you one of the most miserable wretches that God ever cursed with the burden of life. I feel impelled by an irresistable influence to unfold to you, that which has never been breathed to mortal man. I feel within my soul that my days are numbered.'

CHAPTER II.

THE HERMIT'S TALE—STORM SPECTRE.

For a few moments he was silent, during which his face was contorted as if by some fearful inward agony, calming himself, he began—

'For fifteen long weary years, I have lived in this lonely cave, suffering the agonies of ten thousand deaths, praying for death, which would not come. I was born in this neighborhood. My father was connected with one of the numerous bands of robbers which infested the mountains at that time. My mother died when I was but a child, she died of a broken heart; had she lived, I might have been a better man. But I was reared among a wild and lawless set of men, who regarded no law either human or divine. Brought up amid these influences, and the example of evil ever before me, 'tis no wonder that at the age of manhood I was as hardened a villain as these mountains gave shelter to. It was at out thirty miles from the cave in the settlement that I made my home, when not in the mountains.

'There came to live in the neighborhood a family by the name of Randolph, one of the members of which was a fair young girl; she was very beautiful. The first time I beheld her, I loved her as much as my wicked nature would allow me. I sought her society, but she ever shunned me, for my reputation was bad in the neighborhood, but I resolved not to give her up, and persevered. And at last I found her alone in the garden one day, and there told her my love. But she treated me with withering contempt, and told me never to insult her again by addressing her under the penalty of receiving a horsewhipping for my pains. My worst passions were aroused by these words, and I swore a fearful oath, to possess and dishonor her though the spirits of earth and air stood to bar my way.

I had discovered this cave, some few months before, and its existence was known only to me. It was to this place that I intended to bring her, and here consummate my hellish work.

She had been betrothed to a young man previous to the time she came to my neighborhood and the wedding was to take place in a few weeks but I determined it should never be.

So I prepared myself, and lay in readiness to carry her off, the first opportunity I had. I lay in wait for several days, and did not succeed till the eve of the wedding. The sun was just disappearing behind the mountain, when I caught a glimpse of her walking in the rear of the garden. It was but the work of a few minutes to glide up behind her, seize and bear her to where my trusty horse was concealed, mount his back and gallop away; this I did without creating any disturbance. Suddenly it became intensely dark, and for the first time I observed that the sky was overcast with dark clouds. I chuckled to myself, and said that the spirits of darkness favored my designs.

On I went, rushing madly along the level road towards the mountains, my victim lying helpless and fainting in my arms; now and then, dull glances of light overspread the sky, followed by hoarse murmurings of distant thunder, then all would be still save the wail of the wind.

As I neared the mountains, the storm became more fierce, the lightning came in blinding and vivid flashes, the thunder rolled and reverberated from cloud to cloud, from hill to hill, as if the God of nature were pronouncing the perdition of my ungodly soul.

But I heeded it not, and spurred on through the storm and darkness, till I came to the foot of the cliff, where I dismounted and laid my still senseless burden down on the ground, and secured my horse, then took her up in my arms, and toiled up the difficult and dangerous path till I reached the summit of the cliff, where I tyed her down to rest a few moments.

By this time, the storm seemed to be gathering in all its might around those cliffs, the lightning was incessant, and the thunder was deafening, and seemed to sway the cliff on which I stood.

I turned around, and walked away a few steps, and when I turned again, there came over me for a moment a mortal terror; the cool wind had revived her, and there she stood like an avenging spirit, on the very edge of the cliff, her long dark hair, and white robe flowing wildly in the gale. I recovered in a moment, and started towards her when a flash of sightening, more vivid than before revealed my presence to her; with one wild, piercing shriek, which was heard distinctly above the yell of the storm, she disappeared over the cliff; a violent crash of thunder at that moment seemed to shake me down, and I knew no more till morning when I found myself in the cave. I awoke as from a deep sleep, the events of the past night seemed like a frightful dream. The storm had passed away, and the sun shone out brightly, I went to the edge of the cliff, and looked over, and there beheld the form of Mary Randolph, a shapeless and mangled mass. An unutterable horror took possession of my soul. I made my way to my horse, mounted him, plunged the spur into his flanks, and knew no more.

When I came to, I found myself in one of the caves frequented by the robbers, so weak and helpless that I could not turn in my bed. I was informed that I had been there three weeks, and had arrived on my horse in night time, in a state of delirium, my horse had carried me more than fifty miles from the scene of that fearful night. I also learned of the sudden and mysterious disappearance of Mary Randolph, and her body being found after the search, thirty miles from home.

As soon as I was sufficiently recovered to leave the cave, I resolved to leave the country. With that purpose, I started, but an influence which I could not resist, turned my steps towards these cliffs. I endeavored to break the spell, and flee from the spot, but it was in vain.

At the end of a week, I found myself again an inmate of the cave; and here I have remained for fifteen long and weary years, often have I tried to escape, but I cannot. I am guarded by invisible spirits, and am doomed to dwell among the scenes of my crime. There is no escape but in death, no refuge but the grave.

And then—and then!' he murmured to himself.

'A crash of thunder startled him, and he rose up and clutched wildly at the vacant air; but calming himself, he continued—

'And I am doomed to witness that scene enacted over again, every time a storm sweeps over these mountains. I shall see it again to night. I will hear the death shriek of agony, I will see the cruel stone plantom,' he continued wildly; just then, there came a flash of lightning, as fiery tongue seemed to lick our very forms, followed by a clap of thunder which shook the rocks around us.

'Come! Come! They are calling me,' he shouted wildly, grasping me by the arm, and dragging me out in the storm.

The scene that met my gaze, was grand, terrific, and sublime. The horizon all around, seemed to be one sheet of flame; the tops of the tall peaks were enveloped in a shroud of fire.

'Look! look!' he exclaimed, stretching his arms towards the top of the high cliff. I did look and there beheld a scene, which, though in a measure prepared for it, froze the blood in my veins.

Standing on the summit of the cliff, her long black hair, and white robe flying wildly in the gale stood the form of a young girl; then with a cry that rose high above the roar of the storm, she disappeared over the cliff.

'Come ye fiends, and claim your own. Come, come!' he yelled, and rushed towards where the phantom was seen.

There came a deafening crash of thunder which seemed to shake the foundations of the whole world, and I fell senseless to the ground. When I came to, a torrent of rain was coming down. I crawled into the cave, and immediately fell into a deep sleep, from which I did not awake till the morning was far advanced.

The first object that met my gaze, on emerging from the cave, was the corpse of the Hermit, cold in the arms of death. There he lay a fearful example of the retributive justice of God.

I proceeded to the village, and told my story, and there was informed that that which had been a dark mystery for years was cleared up.

The Hermit was buried near the cave on the cliff.

Reader, I have done.

I've told the tale as 'twas told to me.'

MAKING MUTTON.

Beginners usually fail in one very important particular in making mutton, which is, allowing sheep to grow poor when passing from grass to hay. We desire caution on this subject in good times to avoid it. As soon as grass begins to fall in late autumn, mutton sheep should be fed a little grain daily. Feeding troughs should be prepared before winter; and, as soon as sheep do not fill themselves well on grass, each one should receive not less than half a pound of grain at a feeding. This amount will be large enough to begin with while there is a limited supply of grass. If mutton sheep are fed good hay after grass has failed, and allowed free access to straw, a half pound of grain daily, per head, will keep them improving until February or March, when the quantity of grain should be increased. When the chief fodder is straw, with a limited quantity of hay every day, each sheep should be fed not less than one pound of grain, consisting of equal quantities of Indian corn and buckwheat, or corn meal and oil meal. It is more profitable to sell oats and purchase oil meal, or Indian corn, for feeding mutton sheep, than to feed that kind of grain. Oats, or oat meal mingled with barley or buckwheat, will make excellent feed for ewes or lambs, but is not so profitable for mutton sheep.

All sheep need protection during the cold storms of October and November as well as in winter. Therefore, sheds should be erected before the ground is covered with snow.

The number of sheep in a flock should not exceed 100. If a man have 150 mutton sheep they will thrive better to keep them in two flocks than in one.

Sheep that subsist chiefly on straw and grain must have free access to water, or they will suffer more or less from a disease known as the "straeches." To sum the matter up in a few words, we would say to our correspondent:—Prepare straw racks and grain troughs immediately. Feed the sheep a few mouthfuls each of hay or cornstalks daily, in addition to straw. They are more fond of a variety of feed than any other dome tic animal, as has been proven by experiment. Let them have plenty of straw to nibble among all day. Clean out the straw racks every time the sheep are foddered. Feed the grain at noon, if convenient. Give them a feeding of roots or apples, at least once a week, and keep a tub of salt in the corner of the shed. Let them have a dry place, well littered with straw, where they may enjoy quiet rest and rumination when they are not feeding; and we will assure any one that by means of such treatment excellent mutton may be made.

But do not get frightened before the winter is half over and sell your sheep at a sacrifice. Feed them well, with regularity, till grass appears. Then let them graze about two weeks, not omitting one pound of grain or meal daily per head. Such sheep will sell for what they are really worth. "Finishing up" mutton sheep is the process that tells on the profits of feeding.—Observer.

USEFUL PLANTS.

According to a German author, the number of useful plants has raised to about 12,000; but it must be remembered that these researches has been completed only in certain portions of the earth. There are no less than 25000 known economic plants, among which are reckoned 1,100 edible fruits, berries and seeds; 50 cereals; 40 uncultivated edible grammaneous seeds; 23 of other families; 200 eatable rhizomes, roots, and tubers; 37 onions; 420, vegetables and salads; 40 palms; 32 varities of arrowroot; 31 sugars; 40 salops.—Vinous drinks are obtained from 200 plants; aromatics, from 260. There are 50 substitutes for coffee; 129 for tea. Tannin is present in 140 plants; caoutchouc in 96 gums perchin, in 7; resin and balsamic gums, in 389; wax, in 10; grease and essential oils, in 220; 88 plants contain potash, soda and iodine; 550 contain dyes; 47 soap; 250 fibres which serve for wearing; 14 for paper making; 48 give materials for coloring; 100 are employed for the bullies and there are 615 poisonous plants. According to Endlicher, out of the 278 known natural families, 18 only seem up to the present time, to be perfectly useless.—Cosmos.

FOLLY OF SWEARING.—The absurdity and utter folly of swearing is admirably set forth in the following anecdote of Lord Erskine and his tops; The latter went out one morning, each to command his set of men—one the murders, another of liars, another of swearers, &c. At evening they all stopped at the mouth of the cave. The question arose between them as to who commanded the meanest set of men. The subject was debated at length without coming to a decision. Finally his Majesty was called in to settle the dispute. Whereupon he said: The murderer got something for killing, the thief for stealing, and the liar for lying; but the swearer was the meanest of them all, he served without pay. They were his Majesty's best servants for while they were endless their name was legion, and presented the largest division in his employ.

A man who bumps his head against that of his neighbour, isn't apt to think that two heads are better than one.

There are three things a man never gets tired looking at:—The sky, the sea, a woman's face.—Because they are never two days together alike.

An editor received a letter, in which weather was spelt "wethur." He said it was the worst spell of wether he had ever seen.

"I live by my pen," said a vulgar author, to a lady. "You look, sir, as if you ought to live on a pen."

A wise man may be pinched by poverty, but only a fool will let himself be pinched by tight shoes.

If you observe a gentleman with his arm around a young lady, it is morally certain they are not married.

NOVEL REMEDY.

A good story is told of a fellow, who put up at an Indian cabin on the Wabash; and who, after eating an enormous supper of cucumbers, was attacked by the colic.—The woman of the house, upon being consulted said:

'I'll go and fetch mother, cause stranger I do reckon she's the awfulest best hand for curin' colic in the Wabash bottom"

She went into another part of the house, and ten minutes after one of the ugliest, sallowest, littlest old women I ever saw in any part of the civilized world came hobbling in. Her gest was hardly a decent hobble, it was more that of a rheumatic ostrich. Her nose and chin almost met over the shrunken cavity doing duty as a mouth, and as she shuffled towards me she mumbled as if chewing tobacco. On the end of her nose was a great wart, with four or five grey bristles straggling from it.

'Stranger,' said she, 'Betsey Jane tells me she reckons you've got the colic powerful. Now, I've bin so myself nigh to a hundred times I reckon, in the cowcumber seasons, and Betsy Jane, she's bin that way; Richard he's bin that way, and the biggest end of the rest of the family.'

Producing a musket ball—an ounce bullet of lead—she assured me I would be all right in five minutes after swallowing it; that lead was death on 'colics.' Being terribly racked and hardly knowing what I did, I seized the bullet, and, with a single gulp, down it went. No sooner was it down, than I repented of having swallowed it. I remembered to have heard that lead was poisonous. Starting up, I cried out:

'You old wretch, you have killed me! Lead is a deadly poison. I can feel it cold in my stomach now. It will kill me.'

'Ha, ha, ha! he, he, he!' laughed the old crone, in shrill cracked voice. 'Kill yer! don't pester yerself with the idea.—Why, stranger, that bullet's bin in the family nigh on to forty years. Richard he's swallowed it, and I've swallowed it nigh on to forty years.'

'You!' I cried, starting from my seat; 'You've swallowed this same bullet ?'

'Sartin! that same bullet every cowcumber season for nigh on to forty years.'

'You old wretch!' I cried, as I rushed from the house.

THE SHORTEST WAY.

Some twelve years ago, Napoleon, Ind., was celebrated for two things; one for the carousing propensities of its citizens, another for the great number of cross roads in its vicinity. It appears that an eastern collector had stopped at Dayton to get some information relative to his future course. During the evening he became acquainted with an old drover, who appeared well posted as to the geography of the country, and the collector thought he might as well inquire in regard to the best routes to different points, to which he was destined.

'I wish to go to Greenfield,' said the collector; 'now, which is the shortest way?'

'Well, sir,' said the drover, 'you had better go to Napoleon, and take the road leading nearly north.'

The traveller noted it down.

'Well, sir, if I wish to go to Edinburg?'

'Then go to Napoleon and take the road west.'

'Well, if I wish to go to Vernon?

'Go to Napoleon and take the road south-west.'

'Or to Indianapolis?' asked the collector, eyeing the drover closely, and thinking he was being imposed on.

'Go to Napoleon and take the road northwest.'

The collector looked at his note book; every direction had Napoleon on it; he began to feel his mettle rise, and he turned once more to the drover with—

'Suppose, sir, I wanted to go to his Satanic Majesty?'

The drover never winded, but scratched his head, and after a moment's hesitation said:

'Well, my dear sir, I don't know of any shorter road you could take than to go to Napoleon.'

LORD PALMERSTON DEAD.

On Wednesday, the 18th of October, this eminent statesman breathed his last within two days of his 81st year. He had been suffering for some time from the gout, and having a severe cold, he sank under it. The nation is said to be in great mourning for the loss of its most eminent and respected statesman, who has guided her affairs for about 12 years, and had been very prominently connected with the foreign policy for about sixty years. Lord Palmerston was born in 1784; when he was about 21, he entered on a political career, which he has continued to his decease. As early as 1806 to 1811; he occupied a prominent place in the events of the day; and almost ever since his name has been intimately connected with the leading events of English history, and English legislation. The death of Lord Palmerston will lead to several changes in home affairs. Earl Russell and Earl Granville are each spoken of as his successor; but many are of opinion that Mr. Gladstone will be the new Premier.

NORTH WENTWORTH ELECTION.

This County has proved true to its former antecedents, and returned the Reform candidate by a majority of 14. This may, to some, seem a small majority; but if it be considered how late Mr. McMonies entered the field, and how energetically his opponent worked, how unscrupulous Mr. Brown was in entering on the contest ere Mr. Notman was cold, how every effort was put forth by the opposition to gain this County, it is not by any means to be wondered at. It is a matter of satisfaction, however, that it has resulted in the defeat of Mr. Brown; not, withstanding all his popularity, and notwithstanding how closely he came in at the heels of the late candidate. This election will fulfil a two-fold object. It will let the public see how cunningly the Tory party work, and will afford Reformers a useful lesson to be prepared for every emergency. Every effort is being made by that party to crush Confederation, and thus curse the country with the maladministration of the past. It is only by continuing the blundering and mismanagement of the past that that party can hope to maintain the position it has so long occupied of throwing in its weight with the enemies of Upper Canada that thus they might divide the spoil. They begin to see that if the constitutional difficulties over which the parties have been contending for so many years are now settled, the hopes of their gains are gone: and hence the death like struggle that is now being made to gain control of political matters in the Province. The vain cry had been raised that Reformers were weary of their leaders, and desired but the opportunity to cast them off; is now shown to be a false report, got up by the rabid Tory press to lull the unwary. In this they may have partially succeeded; but this defeat will show them that Reformers are still alive to their principles, and will not so easily forsake those who have so often led them to victory. The report that there is a general or an increasing dissatisfaction towards the Reform leaders in the Government is not true. There exists now, even greater confidence in those leaders, than at any time since the Coalition was formed. That the Hon. Wm. McDougall was beaten once or twice, at a time when political excitement ran very high, is nothing to be wondered at, more especially when we consider that he was an outsider and opposed by a resident. But their best efforts have failed to alienate one County, when anything like equal circumstances existed. North Wentworth is a proof of this. A stranger might have been selected; but when the candidates are both residents, Reformers are found supporting the right man. This election will show the weakest points in both parties: and a little respite will afford time to complete plans for future political campaigns. We trust that every Reform constituency in Upper Canada will awaken to their duty, and be always ready. We had an instance here, a year or two ago, when, for want of having a candidate ready, we were forced to submit to one not as all desired by the majority of the electors. This was almost re-enacted in Wentworth, as may be drawn, from the few days that transpired from the issue of Mr. McMonies' address till the election. We advise, therefore, being in readiness, and that always.

The following is the state of the polls, at the close of the second day:

	McMonies	Brown.	Total.
Dundas Town	180	254	434
Flamboro' West	220	234	452
Flamboro' East	169	247	416
Beverly	471	239	656
Majority for Mr. McMonies	141

The votes polled at this election, in contrast with the election of 1863, were as follows:—

	1863.	1865.
Dundas	301	434
Flamboro' West	442	452
Flamboro' East	347	416
Beverly	608	656
Total votes	1,727	1,958
Increase in 1865	231 votes.

Missionary Meeting in the Sabbath School Room of St. John's Church.

On Monday evening a meeting was held in the above School Room, for the purpose of laying the claims of the Sabrevois Mission before the public of this parish. The chair was occupied by the Rev. Mr. Beck, Rector of Peterborough. Dr. Sweet, of Port Hope, was present, and the Rev. Mr. Fortin, a missionary from the field of labour. We also noticed the Rev. J. M. Roger among the audience. The room, which might seat 120, was scarcely filled.

The Rev. Mr. Beck opened the meeting by prayer; after which he made a few introductory remarks in relation to the objects of the mission. The reverend gentleman said that one object of the mission was to place before the Roman Catholic French Canadians the Church of England. The Roman Catholics held that their Church was the oldest, having descended from the Apostles and followers of Jesus Christ; and consequently held that in the missionaries offering them the Church of England, and desiring or persuading them to accept it, they were being offered something not either as ancient or as venerable as what they already believed; while, on the contrary, they who were instructed in history knew that the Church of England was as old, if not older, than the Romish Church, being believed to be founded by St. Paul, or at least during his day, and that they had received their Bishops, &c., from the Asiatic Churches, instead of from Rome. The object of the mission was, therefore, to place this before the Roman Catholic Canadians, and also to present to them the teachings and the doctrines of the Church, which were believed to be according to God's Word, and infinitely superior to the teachings of the Romish Church.

The Rev. Mr. Fortin being called upon to explain the operations of the mission, said:—That it had been commenced about 20 years since, but had been inadequately worked, being almost neglected, unless as regards the labours of one minister, until the year 1854, when, by the efforts of a few ministers in Montreal, funds were obtained to commence a mission, and labourers employed to commence the work. At the present time, there are about four labouring ministers in the mission, besides catechisers. These, from their fewness, had to extend their labour over a large field, which they did by making from one to two tours over the country monthly, or as often as they could. Mr. Fortin, explained some of the difficulties the missionary had to encounter, not the least of which was the opposition of the priests to the reading of the Word of God. Yet, notwithstanding their opposition and threats to excommunicate those who read the Scriptures, many were doing it, and thus the work goes on, although slowly. The Scriptures were being read; and many were beginning to wonder why their priests forbad them the use of the Bible, or refused to allow them to understand the foundation of their religion. Through the efforts of this mission a school had been established, at which there were 20 boys, and also a female department at which there were 10 girls: but that they had to refuse many admittance to school, because of the want of room. They could accommodate no more, and therefore were cramped where they must needed aid; as it was from the work of instructing the young, they expected the greatest reward. The reverend gentleman thanked the people of this parish for the interest they had already taken in the mission, and hoped they would still continue to work, as it was meet to send the word of God not only to French Roman Catholics, but also to Protestants who had settled in Lower Canada, and marrying and intermarrying, had cast off all religion and were now as bad as the Roman Catholic. These were saying, "Come over and help us," and he trusted the call would be warmly responded to.

Dr. Short referred to the work in Ireland, and its glorious results; showing what the result of missionary effort on the west and south of that land had effected; so that Protestantism was largely on the increase, where once nothing but Roman Catholics were to be found. And he remarked that if the Irish Roman Catholic could thus be reached, who it was acknowledged was most difficult to reach, what might be expected from similar labours among the French people, who were so much more accessible and so much more easily reached from their agreeable and vivacious manner. He (Dr. Short) thought they had great encouragement to go on, as much good had been done, and although it might yet be considered the day of small things, the work would increase until the little one would become a thousand. He remarked further, that although the Church of England had not been the pioneers in the work, yet the work appeared to be easier for them than other parties who were engaged energetically. The Roman Church and the Church of England held so many things in common that the French Canadian would not feel that he was giving up everything. Yet they differed so much in the vital points of religion that it was necessary to try to take the pure Word of God, as taught in the Church, to them, to enlighten them and save them from the errors in which they were at present. He praised the efforts that had been made in Peterborough, stating that one-half as much had been raised here for the work as had been in either Toronto or Hamilton; and hoped that while the wants of the Parish, and also of the Diocese, should—and he believed would—be attended to, yet that the Sabrevois Mission would not be neglected. He recommended the wisdom of systematic benevolence as the best for the Parish, Diocese, and for everything connected with the work of God.

A. H. Campbell, Esq., Peterborough, then in a few well timed remarks referred to the mission in a political point of view, stating that even from that stand point it would be seen to be for the advantage of Upper Canada to educate the French Catholics, as it was well known that in their ignorance they did whatever the Priest told them—the Priest was the servant of the Church and of the Hierarchy—and thus at the bidding of the Hierarchy of Rome such men were returned to Parliament as were most subservient to the interests of the Church of Rome, and hence on every point affecting the Church they voted as one man. By this means they had been oppressing Upper Canada heretofore, as was well known. Yet the only way to get free was to educate the mass of the people, and then they would throw off their chains and become freemen. Political differences would be done away with especially those that arose out of religious differences, and the people would then be ready to receive the pure word of God.

After singing Bishop Heber's beautiful hymn, a collection was taken up, the amount of which was over $20.

The amount raised here will be over $100 this year which certainly speaks well for those engaged in the work.

Benediction being pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Beck, the meeting dispersed. The whole proceedings were instructive and entertaining, and will no doubt increase the energy of those engaged in the good work here, which we believe is mainly carried on by a few pious Ladies, who cease not to labour earnestly for the advancement of the truth as contained in God's word.

We cannot drop this subject without paying a tribute of praise to the untiring energy of the pious ladies of Peterboro'. Through their efforts, the "Ladies' Bible Society" was commenced, and is now being carried on successfully—the ladies taking their divisions of the town, for visiting purposes, and offering the Word of Truth to all who will purchase, and giving to those who are too poor to do so. The Protestant Home is also the result of their labour—a work which we trust and believe will be more lasting than brass, as there the naked will be clothed, the hungry provided for, and the homeless find a resting place. These are acts that will be remembered here, and that will be remembered in Heaven, for "their works do follow them." The general Sabbath missionary work, besides numerous others, all attest to the zeal of the ladies of this place.

There is a work yet, however, that requires effort—and laborious effort, too—the poor outcasts who frequent the corners of the streets at night. They may not have been wholly neglected; but the work is so much needed, and requires so much zeal, that perhaps this word from us will be taken in good part. They are often sent to Jail, but we have never heard of any attempt to snatch them from their vice, and, if possible, from eternal ruin. We trust, however, something will be done.

Our Magnanimous, Generous, Noble-hearted Contemporary, the Peterboro' Review.

Our very generous contemporary has a very large and benevolent heart! Truly he is a rare specimen of the genus of newspaper men. In the last issue of the Review, is to be found a mutilated report of the prize-list of the County Show. Mutilated, we say, for that whose soulless fellow cannot afford to allow anything to get into his column that may be favourable to his neighbour of the same profession. Among the things recommended by the Judges as "worthy of special notice," was "Printing by Graham & Stratton." It came in at the last of the things worthy of special notice; but, to our astonishment, the Review did not publish it! because, forsooth, it was favourable to the Examiner printing establishment! We can afford to allow it to pass unnoticed in that trustworthy (?) sheet; but the public will be thus able to judge what dependence they can put in what appears in the Review, when the interests of the proprietor are at stake. May we be saved from the shadow—he cannot be a man.

Pugilistic.

We understand that a few of the sporting circle of Otonabee and Peterborough had a little fun last week, very near the town, some place near Mr. Joseph Hunter's farm: Ned Maher, of Otonabee, and John Howden, of Peterborough, being the pugilists. We did not hear how many witnessed the scene, but have no doubt that there are many who would gladly avail themselves of such fun. After a few severe strokes, some blacks marks, a drawing of the crimson, and a closing of the peepers, the sponge was thrown up by Maher's party, thus acknowledging defeat. It is rather disgraceful that within hearing almost of the Market Square—at least not far beyond the suburbs of the town—such should be allowed to take place; and it indicates either carelessness on the part of officials, or great secretiveness on the part of those engaged in the affair. We trust, however, that those engaged will see the folly of such enterprizes, and in future refrain from the violation of law, both civil and divine. We understand that the challenge had been sent by Maher, to any one of the Hoidens, or the two brothers together. What a pity that this had not been made known, and the aggressor made to suffer the penalty of thus violating the moral feeling of the law-abiding citizens of the neighbourhood. As it is, the disgrace of defeat may deter him from inciting a contest again, and bring him to a better and more quiet state of mind. Let us hope that both will learn wisdom, and leave themselves from further disgrace.

Fenians Again.

This class of our fellow-creatures are again attracting some notice: they having been holding great meetings in Philadelphia, at which several eloquent speeches were made. Nothing now but the liberty of Old Ireland, will satisfy the friends (?) of that beautiful island. They have been sending home some of their leaders, who have met with a more cordial reception from the constabulary of the country than they had anticipated. The Irish People new-paper has been suppressed, and the managers brought to trial for publishing treasonable articles. Dublin and Cork have now become a little notorious for seizures and trials of suspected Fenians. Parties from America, ere they are aware, are taken into safe keeping, and saved from further trouble. America is the hot-bed of Fenianism just now: there the system was organized, and from that source the money is to be obtained to carry on the war for the liberty of the Green Isle. There can be no doubt but that these Fenians are Ireland's greatest enemies, as well as their own: and only a few months will show the futility of all their designs. The leaders had better apply themselves to their wonted labours, rather than court the destruction of their already benighted countrymen.

HALLOW E'EN.

This evening is generally a season for fun and foolishness; and perhaps a little folly now and then may be palatable and bearable, but when said folly goes so far as to annoy and injure quiet people, it then becomes intolerable and should not be permitted. It appears that on Tuesday night several unoffending parties had their gates removed and placed where they had some difficulty in finding them—some will perhaps never be found. The pleasure of this part of it, we are not able to see clearly. The blowing of horns, the ringing of bells, and the confusion of shouting, would certainly have been enough to warrant the commitment of a few to the lock up for a night. The bars and shutters of some Shops were also removed—a something which ought not to be tolerated, and that more especially at a time that burglars are so numerous and so bold in other places. To allow this, has the appearance of remissness somewhere.

Victoria.

At the Fall Assizes in the County of Victoria, there were four cases for larceny, one for perjury, and one for rape. Wm. H. English, of Emily or Omemee, was found guilty of the attrocious crime of rape—the abused being an old maiden lady of about sixty years. He was sentenced to be hung on the 29th day of December next. The condemned man, it appears, has been what might be called a hard case, having been only lately out of the Penitentiary, after a service of over three years. But his imprisonment did not effect any reform, it would appear; he did not quit his bad company, nor the accursed bowl, as he declares he was pretty drunk at the time of the deed, and knew nothing of the affair until he was arrested. When will men take warning and shun the path of vice, which leads so often to the gallows?

Fatal Accident.

On Friday week, the only son of Mr. Wm. Deacon, Ashburnham, met with an accident that proved fatal. The lad was letting down a bucket into the well; the bucket was attached to a windlass, and was usually allowed to run into the well, the operator merely regulating the speed by the hand rubbing on the windlass. It is supposed that the boy allowed his hand to be caught in the rope, and thus was dragged in; his head became entangled with the pail, and received several severe cuts in the descent, his skull being terribly fractured, his sides bruised, and his back injured. He lingered about eight days, when death relieved him of his sufferings. He was eight years and seven months old.

Murder in Kingston.

About a week since, a tavern-keeper named Michael Gethins was murdered by his son-in-law, John O'Toole. The murdered man was stabbed in the heart with a knife. The evidence at the inquest fixes the murder pretty plainly on O'Toole. When O'Toole Returned to the tavern, after perpetrating the foul deed, he gave a knife covered with blood to the servant girl. The altercation that induced the murder arose from O'Toole being refused whiskey, which caused him and Gethins to get in a struggle, the result of which was the life of a human being. Another victim! John O'Toole had been drinking the previous day.

Emily Murder Case.

The Omemee Warder says that the O'Briens, who were charged with the murder of Mattimore, were discharged at the Assizes, the evidence not being sufficient to warrant the Grand Jury in finding a "true bill" against them.

Peterboro' Literary Club.

We are requested to state that in addition to the debate this evening, in the Firemen's Hall, Mr. Crerar has volunteered to read the very laughable comedy entitled "Little Toddlekins." Doors open at eight o'clock.

Temperance.

S. T. Hammond, Esq., one of the appointed lecturers of the Good Templars of Canada, will deliver a lecture in the Good Templars' Hall, Peterborough, on Friday evening, at eight o'clock. The public are earnestly invited to attend.

Fenians in Canada.

Mr. Perrault, in addressing his constituents at Sorel, said that the Fenians were to march on us and take Upper Canada, and then make war on England by ships.—The ships! where are they?

Mr. J. S. Peter, announces a new Book and Stationary Store in Hunter Street, where goods will be sold cheap for cash. A call is solicited.

We would invite the attention of those interested to the sale to-day of well bred cows and horses at Merino Farm. See advertisement.

A man in Point St. Charles, when intoxicated, struck his wife with a hammer on the back of the head and pitched her out on the street, almost dead. She declined to prosecute him.

The Jury in the Saunders case could not agree, and were dismissed. The prisoner was then re committed to Jail, and perhaps will lie their till spring.

Mr. John Lovell got a silver medal at the Dublin Exhibition for cheap and good educational works.

Paris papers say that the cholera is carrying off in that city, about 200 persons a day.

The Rochester Democrat says that horrible murders are of daily occurrence in Nashville.

THE MARKETS.

From the Trade Review, it appears that Bread-tuffs in Montreal are dull this week, dealers holding back for higher prices; yet there are strong fears of a lower range of prices ere long. At present, prices range higher in Canada than either in Britain or the United States. Butter in the United States is being held back, without any prospect of an increase. A remarkable feature in this trade is, that while the idea prevails here that the prospect of demand in Britain induces the high prices here, 500 kegs have been purchased in Liverpool and shipped to New York.

Flour in Montreal—Supers, $6 20 to $6 40; strong of moderate color, declined, $6 30 to $6 20; superior extra, $6 00 to $6 25; extra, $5 50 to $6 00; fancy, $5 00 to $5 50; bag, $3 40 to $3 45. Spring Wheat, $1 25 to $1 27½; Oats, dull; Pease, per 66 lbs 80c; Barley, little on the spot; Butter, choice, 24c to 25c; inferior, 20c; Lard, 20c to 21c; Cheese, 1c higher, and a good demand.

PETERBORO' MARKETS.—Prices are high, and a ready sale for almost every article. Pork, $8 00 to $10 00; Beef, $5 50 $7 00; Mutton, per lb, 5c to 7c; Butter, 20c to 24c. But how these prices can stand, with Butter in Montreal at same rates, we cannot divine. Potatoes, very few offered, these going at 25c to 40c, as the supply is limited or full; Geese are now coming in freely, and are easily disposed of at 35c to 40c; Turkeys, 40c to 60c; Wood, not much offered, $2.00.

A MAN KILLED AT STRATFORD.—On Tuesday last, a carpenter named McDonald was killed by his apprentice, with a stroke of a hammer. McDonald had whipped his apprentice for insolence, at which the boy ran up stairs; McDonald went to follow him, when the boy lifted a hatchet-hammer and struck McDonald on the forehead, laying it open.—Globe.

TOTAL SUPPRESSION.

We have much pleasure in announcing the visit to Peterborough of Mr. John Campbell, the Registration Agent of the United Canadian Alliance. Mr. Campbell is bent to advocate the object of the Alliance,—the total suppression of the Liquor Traffic,—and to receive the names and contributions of those willing to assist the cause. His intention is to visit from house to house, and to endeavor by argument to establish the justice and propriety of the society's object. Those becoming members of the Alliance, besides the payment of a small fee, subscribe to the following principles:—

1.—That it is neither right nor politic to afford legal protection and sanction to any traffic or system that tends to increase crime, to waste the resources of the province, to corrupt the social habits, and to destroy the health and lives of the people.

2.—That the traffic in intoxicating drinks as common beverages, is inimical to the true interests of individuals, and destructive to the order and welfare of society, and ought therefore to be prohibited.

3.—That the history and results of all past legislation in regard to the liquor traffic, abundantly prove that it is impossible, satisfactorily, to limit or regulate a system so essentially mischievous in its tendencies.

4.—That no consideration of private gain or public revenue can justify the upholding of a system so utterly wrong in principle, suicidal in policy, and disastrous in results, as the traffic in intoxicating liquors.

5.—That the legislative prohibition of the liquor traffic would be highly conducive to the development of a progressive civilization.

6.—That, rising above class, sectarian, or party considerations, all good citizens should combine to procure its enactment prohibiting the sale of intoxicating beverages as affording most efficient aid in removing the appalling evil of intemperance.

The reasonableness and propriety of the above will at once be admitted, but the plan of successfully carrying it out is a matter for careful consideration. It is admitted that something must be done, if the cause of Temperance should prosper, and Prohibition should be brought about. Labour is required, but labour cannot be obtained for nought. Hence the necessity to subscribe a little to carry on the good work. Mr. Campbell comes here to lay the matter before the people and as he intends to visit from house to house, we will allow him to tell his own story, we ask for him a kind reception, and a little of the needful to aid in this good work.

WORTHY OF IMITATION.

In Canada, where newspapers men are but very poorly remunerated for their arduous labours, and where it is considered a meritorious act to keep everything possible from them, the following action of the Board of Supervisors of Monroe County, N. Y., would be well worthy of imitation by similar Boards on the north side of Lake Ontario. This Board, it may be remarked, is the same as our County Council, consisting of the Reeves of the different Townships, or, as they are called, Towns.

From Report in Rochester Evening Express.

October 13th, 1865.

By Mr. Lansing—Resolved, That the Committee on Printing be instructed to execute a contract with D. D. S. Brown & Co., to publish 2,000 copies of the proceedings of this Board in pamphlet form, in accordance with the terms of their proposal as submitted by said committee to this Board, provided D. D. S. Brown & Co. will agree that said pamphlet be completed and ready for delivery, within thirty days from time that the copy is entirely delivered to them.

Mr. Stilwell moved to lay the resolution on the table until the Committee on Printing could ascertain and report to the Board the expense of publishing 1,000 copies.

Motion lost.

Mr. Lansing's resolution was then adopted.

Mr. Bronson moved to take from the table the subject of printing the daily proceedings of the Board.—Carried.

The substitute offered by Mr. Keyes on the third day of the session, and under consideration of the Board, when the motion to lay the whole subject upon the table was carried, and which was in effect to authorize the Committee on Printing to contract with the three Rochester daily papers at $200 each, with the German papers at $250 each, and with the Brockport Republic at $100, was then taken into consideration by the Board.

Mr. Keyes withdrew his substitute, and offered the following in its place:

Resolved, That the Printing Committee be authorized to contract for publishing the daily proceedings of this Board in the daily and weekly issues of the following papers and at the following prices, to wit: With the Rochester Evening Express, Rochester Daily Union and Advertiser and Rochester Daily Democrat,—for the sum of $200 each; with the Observer and Volksblatt,—two German papers—at $150 each; and with the Brockport Republic for the sum of $100.

Mr. Beach moved as an amendment to the substitute offered by Mr. Keyes, to strike out all after the word "Resolved" and insert

That the daily proceedings of this Board be published in one daily paper only, to wit, in the and in the weekly issue of said paper, at an expense not exceeding hundred dollars.—Lost.

Mr. Cornes presented the following:

Resolved, That the whole subject of printing the proceeding of this Board be referred back to the Committee on Printing, with instructions to use from the lowest terms for which the two German papers and the Brockport Republic will publish the same, and the Committee report on Monday next, at 2 P. M.

Mr. Jones moved to amend by inserting in place of "Monday next," in said resolution, the works "this afternoon."—Carried Upon motion of Mr. Wright, Board took a recess until 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION, 2 P. M

Mr. Lansing, from Committee on Printing, made a verbal report to the effect that the proprietor of the Volksblatt would publish the daily proceedings for $150 without translating, or for the sum of $200 translated.

That the proprietor of the Observer was out of town, and that the proprietor of the Brockport Republic would publish the proceedings, if the Board refused to allow him but $100, but that he considered that sum was wholly inadequate to remunerate him for the service performed.

Upon motion the report was accepted.

The question recurring on the substitute offered by Mr. Keyes, Mr. Corn amoved to amend it by inserting $150 as the sum to be allowed the Brockport Republic, in place of $100.

Lost by following vote:

Yeas—Messrs. Parmard, Bauer Borst, Conolly, Cornes, Estes, Hubbie, Jeffords, N. Lewis, S. Lewis, Little, Webster and Wood—13.

Nays—Messrs. Beach, Billings, Bronson, Gould, Harris, Hill, Jones, Keyes, Lansing, Malloch, Malone McNaughton, McWhorter, Partridge, Stilwell and Wright—16.

Mr. Wood offered the following as an amendment to Mr. Keyes' substitute:

To strike out and insert so that it shall read, Resolved, That one of the Republican papers, to be determined by ballot, shall receive $300 for publishing the proceeding of this Board; also one of the German papers to be selected in the same manner, shall receive $2 0 for same services, and that the Brockport Republic allowed the sum of $145 for publishing said proceedings.

Mr. Cornes moved to postpone the whole matter until Monday next, at 2 p. m.—Lost.

Mr. Bronson moved to postpone the special order of business, to wit, consideration of Mr. Keyes' substitute, until the Board select two papers to publish the laws.—Carried.

Mr. Bronson moved that the Board proceed to select by ballot two papers to publish the State laws.—Carried.

Upon motion Messrs. Cornes and Harris were appointed tellers.

Result of ballot as follows:—

Whole number of votes cast 29, of which Rochester Daily Union and Advertiser received. 14

Rochester Evening Express received 6

Rochester Daily Democrat received 9

The Rochester Daily Union and Advertiser and the Rochester Daily Democrat were declared selected.

Mr. Beach then presented the following amendment to the substitute of Mr. Keyes:

Resolved, That the Rochester Evening Express be and the same hereby is selected as the paper in which the daily proceedings of this Board shall be published at and for the price of $300, pursuant to the proposition of its proprietors, on condition that said proceedings are also published in the weekly of said paper.—Lost.

The question then recurring upon Mr. Keyes' substitute Mr. Conolly moved to amend by giving the Observer $200 for publishing and translating the proceedings.—Lost.

Mr. Bronson moved to amend by giving the manuscript copy to the Rochester Evening Express.—Carried

Mr. Cornes moved to amend Mr. Keyes' substitute by allowing the Brockport Republic $145 00.—Lost.

Mr. Cornes moved to amend by allowing the Brockport Republic $125 00 for publishing the proceedings.—Lost.

Mr. Jones moved to strike out all in the substitute offered by Mr. Keyes after the word "Resolved," and insert—

Resolved, That the Committee on Printing be authorized to contract with the proprietors of the Rochester Evening Express for the publication of the daily proceedings of this Board, at and for the sum of $, as per report of said Committee.—Adopted

The substitute offered by Mr. Keyes as amended was then adopted.

THE FENIAN CONGRESS.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct 17

In the Fenian Congress to-day, reports from the committees on credentials, permanent organization, and rules and regulations were received. The Committee on Permanent Organization reported the following officers of the Congress, who were elected:

President—John O'Mahony.

Vice Presidents—Col. W. R. Roberts, of New York; James Gibbons, of Pennsylvania; P. Bonnan, of Kentucky; Michael Scanlin, of Illinois.

Secretaries—P. A. Sonnet, of Boston; P. A. Collins, of Boston; T. K. Barret, of Indiana; J. C. O'Brien, of Rochester, N. Y.

The Central Council made a report, giving reasons for the call of this Congress, and it was referred to a special committee of one from each State.

The delegates to the Congress are arriving hourly. There are now present 700 or 800 from all sections, and the hall is so crowded that it has been impossible to get into proper working order.

Another mass meeting was held this evening. Large numbers could not obtain admittance. Eloquent speeches were made by B. B. Daly, State Center, of Indiana, Mr. Dalney of Connecticut, Jas McDermott, of New York, and John E. Finnity, of Chicago.

Mr. Daly said a part of the purpose of the Fenian organization had already been accomplished. They had cemented in one tie of brotherhood and sympathy, Irishmen abroad and at home. On their banner was written the word "Onward," and they would never stop till they had accomplished the end, the freedom of Ireland. They had buried all the personal animosities and local feuds which had prevented the liberation of Ireland and all Irishmen of all sects and classes were being gathered together for their mutual good. We have men at home who are willing to drive the invaders from their shores if we will only furnish the means. Once of these will, we will. He abored in doing this they were not pronouncing their allegiance either to their adopted country or any system of religion. If those eminent priests Father Roach and Vinegar Hill and father Murphy of Kenisenny, did not break any laws of the church in assisting in establishing this republic, why should we not battle against them to-day. He believed the cause he had the sympathy of the American people, and that when the struggle came America would reserve at least a strict neutrality.

Mr De Laney was severe in his strictures on those Irishmen who though professing to sympathize with them did not aid them. Those who say that Ireland is too weak, do not know the extent of the Fenian organization.

No speeches, but the sword alone, can carve Ireland's way to liberty; and if it is not done in this generation it never will be, as by the present ratio of emigration in twenty-five years only a million and a half will remain at home, and the opportunity may pass from us forever.

Mr. Mc ermott said the Fenian brotherhood were only an advanced guard of the grand army. The hearts of the Irish people were with them. He showed by historical facts that revolutions have often been successful under much more disadvantageous circumstances than surrounded them. Doubt rs are our most bitter enemies, who will live to regret the day when they ridiculed us.

Mr. Finnity said the Congress assembled was composed of the united wisdom of the brotherhood in this country, and prudence and wisdom guide their deliberations. If co-centration of action cannot make Ireland free, it will not be their fault. The Irish in this country were united. There could be no doubt of success, as the prospect looked very bright.

The meeting was very enthusiastic.

(Special to the Herald.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.

It is now positively known here that the trial of Jeff Davis has been decided upon, and the arrangements have been nearly completed. The trial will be for the crime of treason, and will take place either in this city or Richmond, and before the U. S. Supreme Court. The counsel for the Government have been selected by the Attorney-General, and the friends of Mr. Davis have selected and retained counsel for him. Now that the Writ of Habeas Corpus has been defied, it is supposed that Davis will immediately follow.

The Secretary of the Navy has just directed that all the available steam vessels of war shall immediately be got ready for sea. It is supposed to be the intention of the Government to be prepared for any eventuality in any quarter of the world.

The Naval Court Martial, with Vice-Admiral Farragut as President, to convene in Washington on the 1st of November, will try Commodore Craven under the 10th section of the third article of war which requires an officer to do all in his power to overtake and capture or destroy any vessel which it is his duty to encounter. He is charged with neglecting this, the rebel ram Stonewall having been in the harbor of Teroul while he was commander of the Augusta he being in close proximity, and the Sacramento and another ship of war being in port at the same time and with him. It is said he Stonewall sent a challenge which he declined to accept.

Lieut. Col. A. C. Hamlin, U. S. A., who has made several inspections of the Andersonville prison has made a very long and interesting reports on the prison, and states that the lives lost at that place by starvation and cruelty outnumbered the killed and wounded in the British army in all the great battles of the Peninsula war. The report could not be received in evidence at the Wirtz trial on account of its being closed before the Colonel reached this city.

An addition to Louis Napoleon's naval fleet in our harbor was made yesterday by the arrival of the French gunboat De Estaing, Captain de Bonsange.

The steamer New York, which arrived from Panama yesterday, brought some specimens of gold ore taken from the newly discovered Isthmus deposits near the line of the Panama railroad. More extensive discoveries are expected to follow, and the Panama and Aspinwall people are anticipating a great rush to the new diggings, and a consequent animation in business generally

DREADFUL ACCIDENT.

EXPLOSION OF A STEAMER AT NEW YORK.

29 PERSONS KILLED AND OVER 100 WOUNDED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29, 1865.

The steamer St. John, plying on the Hudson river between here and Albany, exploded her boiler at her dock, foot of Twenty third street, this (Sunday) morning. There was a large number of passengers on board at the time, and twenty or twenty five persons were killed and one hundred or more wounded. The explosion was terrific, and the scenes that followed were of the most harrowing description. A great deal of excitement has been created by the accident, the cause of which has not yet been positively ascertained.

A pair of dwarf elephants, not much larger than Newfoundland dogs, recently arrived in London from the interior of Africa. They are extraordinary curiosities, and the first of the breed ever brought to England. One of them was bought by the Royal Zoological Gardens, Regent's Park, London, and the other was purchased by Mr. Barnum's agent for his new Museum. The cost of this little creature was £1,600. The curious animal left London for New York in charge of its keeper, in the ship Daniel Webster, on the 18th of September.

Champ Ferguson on the Scaffold.

A dispatch from Nashville Oct. 20, thus describes Champ Ferguson's execution at that place:

Champ. Ferguson was executed at noon today, at the Penitentiary grounds just outside the city. He died game on the gallows, evincing no emotion until the rope was placed around his neck, when his face turned very red and broke out into profuse perspiration, attended with a strong quivering of the lips. He stood composedly on the drop some twenty minutes, while the charges, specifications and sentence were read by Col Shafter. He noticed recognition to several persons in the crowd, and shifted his position in an impatient manner while the sentence was being read. To some specifications he inclined his head to assent. To others he shook his head. That about Elam Hill desire caused him to say, "I can tell it better than that." When the speaker read, "To all of which the prisoner pleads not guilty," he said, "I don't know."

After a prayer by his spiritual adviser, he was then asked if he had anything to say before proceeding with the execution. He replied, "Nothing to say particularly at all. No, I don't think I have."

The noose was then placed around his neck, and then, for the first time, he gave signs of emotion, and his face blushed to a deep scarlet. The perspiration broke forth profusely from his face, and his lips closed with a convulsive quiver. The realization of his awful situation seemed to have flashed over his mind in all its fullness, overpowering his fortitude.

Colonel Shafter wiped the sweat away, and the prisoner gradually recovered his equanimity. He expressed himself as much opposed to having anything placed over his eyes, when a handkerchief was called for. Then he volunteered the statement:

"I don't know some things in these specifications. But I don't deny anything I ever done."

For a moment or two he seemed to be expressing an impulse to make fuller remarks. After a brief pause, he added:

"I want to be sent to my family. I don't want to be cut up."

Here Col. Shafter answered: "You shan't Mr. Ferguson."

A short silence followed, when the prisoner again spoke:

"I want to be put in that thing," pointing to his coffin, "and taken to Wayne County, where I can leave my family around me. If I had only had my way, I wouldn't have been here. Whenever you are ready, I am done. My last request is to be sent away with my wife."

His last words were: "O! Lord, have mercy on me I pray thee."

At seventeen minutes to eleven o'clock the drop fell, and life was extinct in sixteen minutes.

Dreadful Suicide Through Disappointed Love.

On Monday Dr. Lankester held an inquest at the Royal University College Hospital on the body of John Andrew Paul, son of Dr. Andrew Paul, of 22 Mecklenburgh Street. The deceased, it was alleged, had shot himself through disappointment in love.

From the evidence it appeared that at three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon the deceased entered his lodgings, at 4 Ford Street, Bedford Square, and shortly afterwards the mistress of the landlord heard, as she thought, the report of a pistol, but upon going up stairs she found everything apparently right, and delivered a message to deceased which had been sent by the man to which he belonged. At nine o'clock she took him his supper, when he was sitting at a carte de visite, and appeared very restless, and asked the time. She had hardly left the room when she heard the report of a pistol, and before she could return the bell rang violently. Upon opening the door of the room the young woman was horrified to find the deceased lying on the floor, bleeding from the left side. An alarm was raised, and two gentlemen who lodged in the house immediately ran for a cord to render assistance, when it was perceived that deceased was holding a silk purse over the wound. The purse afterwards found to contain a carte de visite and a letter from a young woman, of which the following is a copy of that part which was read in court:—

"Kind sister Saturday.

"Andrew—I was much surprised at receiving such a letter from you after what I told you on Tuesday. I thought that would have been quite sufficient. I now repeat that I am too young to think of an engagement with you or any one else. When I made the arrangement with you it was without a thought. I did not know my own mind. I like you very well as a friend, but cannot be any more to you. Were I to say that I am greatly in love with you I should be telling a falsehood. I am not in love with you, and never should be. It is quite enough for me to tell you that I am not in love. &c. It would be foolish of me to make myself miserable for life," &c.

The letter was signed "Annie ——," the surname being withheld by the Coroner. In explanation to one of the gentlemen passengers found, the unfortunate young man exclaimed "O! S— was the cause of it!" and he then asked for his father, mother, and sister. While he was in the hospital he exclaimed to Mr. Asher, "Father, for one me; she was the cause of it. I was mad and jealous!" On Saturday evening last he died. He was 22 years of age. The jury rendered a verdict to the effect that deceased committed suicide whilst in a temporary fit of insanity.—Daily News Paper.

ORIGINAL MUSIC, worth $3 a year. Other Magazines publishes old worn-out music; but the subscribers to Godey get it before the music stores.

OUTDOOR FOR LADIES.—Another peculiarity with Godey.

Fashions from Messrs. A. T. Stewart & Co., of New York, the millionaire merchants, appear in Godey, the only Magazine that has them.

Ladies' honours. We give more of them in a year than any other Magazine. In fact, the Lady's Book enables every lady to be her own bonnet maker.

MARION HARLAND,

Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemesis," and "Marian,"

writes for Godey each month, and for no other magazine. A new novel by her will be published in 1866. We have also retained all our old and favorite contributors.

A COMMON SCOLD.

We take the following amusing instance of O'Connell's voluble ingenuity from a work titled "Recreations of Ireland," by T. M. O. Maiden:

One of the drollest scenes of vituperation that O'Connell ever figured it took place in the early part of his life. Not long after he was called to the bar, his character and peculiar talents received rapid recognition by all who were casually acquainted with him. His talent for vituperative language was perceived, and by some he was, even in those days, considered matchless as a scold. There was, however, at that time in Dublin a certain woman Biddy Moriarty who had a huckster's stall on one end of Bridge, nearly opposite the Four Courts. She was a virago of the first order, very powerful both her fists, and still more formidable with her tongue. From one end of Dublin to the other she was notorious for her powers of abuse, and even in the provinces Madame Moriarty's language had passed into a proverb. The dictionary of Dublin slang had been greatly enlarged by her, and her name in a rapid one had almost become proverbial. Some of O'Connell's friends, however, thought he could beat her at the use of her own weapons. Of this, however, he had some doubt himself when he had encountered once or twice to some minor specimens of her billingsgate. It was mooted who of the two should encounter her and some one of the company (in O'Connell's presence) rather doubted the idea of his being able to meet on terms Madame Moriarty. O'Connell never liked the idea of being put down, and he confessed his readiness to encounter her, and even backed himself for the match before measures were taken; it was decided that the matter should come off at once.

The party adjourned to the huckster's stall, and there was the owner herself, superintending the sale of her small wares. A few beggars and ragged idlers were hanging around the stall, for Biddy was a character, and, in her way, was one of the sights of Dublin.

O'Connell was very confident of success. He had laid an ingenious plan for overcoming his rival, with all the anxiety of an ardent experimentalist, waited to put it in practice. At this time O'Connell's own party and the beggars about the place formed an audience quite sufficient to rouse Mrs. Moriarty, on a like provocation, to a due exhibition of her powers. O'Connell commenced the attack—

"What's the price of this walking stick, Mrs. What's your name?"

"Moriarty, sir, is my name, and a good one it is, and what have you to say again it? and one and six-pence's the price of the stick. Tenth, it's cheap as dirt, so it is."

"One-and-sixpence for a walking stick! whew! why, you are no better than an impostor, to ask one and six-pence for what only cost two pence."

"Two-pence your grandmother!" replied Miss Biddy; "do you mean to say it's cheating the people I am? Impositor, indeed!"

"Ay impostor; and it's that I call you to your teeth."

"Come, cut your stick, you cantankerous jackanapes."

"Keep a civil tongue in your head, you old dragonal," replied O'Connell, calmly.

"Stop your jaw, you pug nosed badger, or by this and that," cried Mrs. Moriarty, "I'll make you go quicker than you came."

"Don't be in a passion, my old radius; anger will only wrinkle your beauty."

"By the hokey, if you say another word of impudence, I'll tan your dirty hide, you basely common scrub, and sorry I'll be to soil my fist with your carcass."

"When! boys, what a passion old Biddy is in. I protest, as I am a gentleman——"

"Jintleman! jintleman! the like of you a jintleman! Wishaw, by gor, that bangs Banagher. Why, you potato-faced pippen-sneezer, when did a Madagascar monkey like you pick enough of common Christian decency to hide your Kerry brogue?"

"Easy now, easy now, cried O'Connell, with imperturbable good humor; "don't choak yourself with fine language, you old whiskey-drinking parallelogram."

"What's that you call me, you old murderin' villain?" roared Mrs. Moriarty, stung into fury.

"I call you" answered O'Connell, "a parallelogram, and a Dublin judge or jury would say it's no libel to call you so."

"Oh, tare an ouns! Oh, holy Biddy, that an honest woman like me should be called a parrybellygrum to her face. I'm none of your parrybellygrum, you rascally gallowsbird; you cowardly, sneaking, plate-licking blaggard!"

"Oh, not you, indeed," retorted O'Connell; "why, I suppose you'll deny that you keep a hypothenuse in your house!"

"It's a lie for you, you bloody robber. I never had such a thing in my house, you swindling old thief."

"Why, all your neighbours know very well that you keep not only a hypothenuse, but that you have two diameters locked up in your garret, and that you go to walk with them every Sunday, you heartless old heptagon."

"Oh, hear that, ye saints in glory! Oh, that's bad language from a fellow who wants to pass himself off for a jintleman. May the devil fly away with you mither from Munster, and make celery from your rotten old limbs, you mealy-mouthed rascal."

"Ah, you can't deny the charge you miserable submultiple of a duplicate ratio."

"Go since your mouth in the Lully, you nasty tickle-pitcher; after all the bad words you speak, it ought to be fitter than your face you dirty chicken of Belzebub."

"Rince your own mouth, you wicked old polygon; to the dense I pitch you, you blustering intersection of superficies"

"You saucy tinker's apprentice, if you don't cease your jaw, I'll——"

But here she gasped for breath, unable to hawk up any more words, for the last volley of O'Connell had nearly knocked the wind out of her.

"While I have a tongue I'll abuse you, you most inimitable periphery. Look at her, boys! there she stands—a convicted perpendicular in petticoats! There is conflagration in her circumference, and she teems bites with guilt down to the extremities of her corollaries. Ah, you're found out, you rectilinear antecedent and equianguiar old hag! I'll you the devil will fly away with, you porter-swiping assiduate of the bisectest of a vertex."

Overwhelmed with this torrent of language, Mrs. Moarty was silenced, Catching up the sauce pan, she was aiming it at O'Connell's head, when he very prudently made a timely retreat.

"You have won the wager, O'Connell—here's your bet," cried the men who proposed the onset.

RHYME AND REASON.—While thousands fall by clashing swords, ten thousands fall by corset boards; yet giddy females, (thoughtless trash!) for the sake of fashion, yield to pain.

RULING POWERS.—The Press, the Pulpit, and Petticoats—the three ruling powers of the day. The first spreads knowledge, the second spreads morals, and the last spreads considerably.

The Great Original Painting

OF THE

BATTLE OF THE BOYNE!

By BEN. WEST, Pres. Royal Academy.

SPARKES, BOURNE & Co., would respectfully announce that they have now ready for delivery a splendidly got up COLORED Lithograph of this magnificent HISTORICAL PAINTING, representing the Battle at the moment of the death of the gallant DUKE SCHOMBERG; and which is published on the finest paper—size 22 x 18 inches.

This Picture—a faithful copy of the great Original—will be found incomparably superior to anything ever offered to the public either in this country or Great Britain. It has been executed by the first Artists of the day, and no trouble or expense has been spared to make it worthy of the justly celebrated Painter, and the GREAT HISTORICAL FACT which it represents; and which ought never to be forgotten by those who now enjoy the CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY which this event, more than any other in our history, was the means of establishing and perpetuating.

In times like these, when the principles of our Forefathers are being assailed on every hand, it is especially needful for us to bear in mind from whence sprung our Constitutional form of Government: and nothing contributes more to aid us in keeping in remembrance those momentous pa-sages in our history than faithful representations by great Masters. And certainly no historical Subject has been more ably treated than the above event by this celebrated Painter.

In presenting this Picture to the Protestant Community, and especially to those who are more forcibly alive to the vast benefits conferred on us by the ever memorable events of 1690, the Publishers feel every confidence that their efforts will be fully appreciated, and that this Picture will find an honored place in every Protestant home in the British Provinces.

Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering.

SEWING MACHINE!

COMPANY,

627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLES made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-holes possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to braid and cover it in a manner indistinguishable for button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produces a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c., &c., it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as Pianis, Embroiderers, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c., &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to build a themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in TUNE than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrumen is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong; iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old-fashioned system of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Parili,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Asst. Henry Fry,	Charles Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Pianos-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune, says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Forte. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in tone and workmanship they are unexcelled, that crowning excellence which enables the pianiste to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5.—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument, and no rare player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they resist speedily supersede the old styles.

The Times:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

SEWING MACHINES.

EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

Salesrooms, { 536 Broadway, New York, / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will not tear or rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nonsuch Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COG WHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and wonderful simplicity of construction renders it alm st impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply the natives with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

But in a more especial manner do we elicit the pet enmity of

Merchant Tailors,	Corset Makers,
Coach Makers,	Gaiter Fitters,
Hoop Skirt Manufacturers,	Shoe Binders,
Shirt and Bosom Makers,	Vest and Pantaloon Makers,
	Dress Makers.

Religious and Charitable Institutions will be liberally dealt with.

One Half hour's instruction is sufficient to enable any person to work the Machine to their entire satisfaction.

Agents wanted for all Towns in the United States, where agents are not already established. Also for Cuba, Mexico, Central and South America, to whom a liberal discount will be given.

The Martial Music of Britain.

BY JUDGE HAGARTY, OF TORONTO, C. W.

The martial notes of Britain!
By mountain, vale and river—
O'er the wild deep, through the broad world sweep,
Bold freedom's music ever!

A thousand triumphs swell the strain,—
A thousand breathings high—
Worth, Honour, Chivalry, Domain,—
Britain and victory!

No lonely sea, no savage zone,
But echoes back the conquering tone,
While in the free Heaven smiles—
As stirred with the triumphant notes,
On high the battle glory floats—
The Red-Cross of the Isles!

'Tis morn on green Australia's woods,
The broad Pacific's kindling floods
Flushed with warm sunlight glow;
A trumpet wakes the silent dawn—
The war drum sweeps the summons on—
Far, far the glad sounds flow.

O'er spicy wave and Indian Isle,
Such strains still greet the day-god's smile—
Breaks the bold Briton's rest;—
Fort William's storn recettle beats—
O'er realm and main the brave sound fleets,
O'er the wild Afghaun for retreats
To Ghuzuee's vanquished crest.

Awake, pale giant of the Cape!
The sunlight gilds thy phantom shape;
Wake, Mount of Lions, stern and hoar,
'Tis morn on Africa golden shore,
Then the bold echoes ring—
Answers the Spaniard's aerial bright—
Grey Malta's tempest-recalling night—
Hear the wild music sing.
Nor silent sleeps the Atlantic wave—
The chorus bursts once more,
Up from the Gallic thunder's grave,
Bermuda's summer shore.

Fair Britain's voice is swelling now,
Round old Quebec's embattled brow—
On, on, the war-strains sweep!
O'er Erie's wave, and gulf St. Clair,—
Fresh clarions waft the burden there
O'er Huron's giant deep;—
Lone wood and lake the glad sounds wake,
Till Columbia's ru-hing river
Sweeps the tribute song to the main along—
Old Britain's might forever!

The martial notes of Britain!
They have a nobler tale
Than the charging word, the flashing sword,
Or the foeman's cloven mail!
Wherever their joyous breath is heard,
There Tyranny's dark throne is rived;
There man's worst despots fly;—
Upsprings the slave—his chain is riven!
The Christian altar points to Heaven,—
Bright Freedom's triumph's high!
And while a dwelling rests on earth
For genius, chivalry or worth,
Shall grateful millions pray;
Let victory bless fair Britain's clime—
Darling of Fame's heroic rhyme!
And perish but with failing Time
The Christain Empire's sway!"

Literature.

The Clergyman's Adventure.

A CAPITAL PRUSSIAN STORY.

On a dreary day, in the reign of Frederick William, a heavy traveling carriage was slowly lumbering along the muddy road from Potsdam to Berlin. Within it was one person only, who took no heed of the slowness of the traveling; but leaning back in a corner, arranging a multiplicity of papers contained in a small pocket book. Since he was dressed in a plain dark military uniform, it is fair to suppose that this gentleman belonged to the Prussian army, but to what grade of it nobody could determine, as all tokens of rank had been avoided. A chilly November evening was closed in, and though the rain had for a time ceased, yet dark masses of clouds flying through the sky, gave warning that a 'sweeping' darkness was at hand. The road grew heavier, at least so it should have seemed to a foot traveler who was plowing his way through the mire; and so doubtless it seemed to the carriage horses who floundered along so slowly that the pedestrian whom they had overtook kept easily by the side of the coach, the occupant of which looked out of the window, and perceived the stranger called out in rather an authoritative tone of voice:

'Halloo young man, whither are you bound this stormy looking night?'

'That is more than I can tell you, not being at home in this part of the world. My wish is to reach Berlin; but if I find a resting place before I get there, to that I am bound, for I am very weary.'

'I should think you must have two hours' walk before you,' was the unsatisfactory remark that followed.

The young man made no reply, and after a short pause the stranger said:

'If it please you to rest on the step of the carriage for a few minutes, you are welcome so to do. Herr, what's your name.

'My name is Heinrich Meyer,' replied the young man, 'one of those who never refused the small benefit, because the larger one is not obtained."

From inside the window the next question put to Heinrich was:

'What are you going to Berlin for?'

'To hunt for some cousins,' was the answer.

'And pray who may they be?' asked the unknown.

'Well, to tell the truth, I have not an idea who they are, or where to look for them indeed it is very doubtfull whether I have so much as an acquaintance in Berlin much less a relation.'

The questioner looked amazed, and he said,

'Surely there must be some other motive for your going to Berlin, or what could have put this idea into your head?'

'Why, replied Heinrich, 'I have just become a clergyman, without the smallest chance of getting anything to do in my neighbourhood. I have no relative to help me, and not quite enough to find me in necessaries.'

'But,' said the Prussia, 'what on the earth has this to do with cousins in Berlin?'

'Well, now, who knows? Many of my fellow student have got good appointments, and when I ask them to let me know how it was done, the answer always is. 'A cousin gave it to me,' or, 'I got it through the interest of a cousin who lives in Berlin.' Now as I find none of these useful cousins live in the country, I must go without their help or hunt them in Berlin.'

This was said in a comical, dry way, so that his listener could not refrain from laughter, but he made no comment. However, he pulled out a piece of paper, and began to write upon it. When he had finished, he turned to Henrich, saying that he observed he had been smoking, and that he had felt inclined to do the same, but had forgotten to bring tinder with him. Could Herr Meyer oblige him with a light?

'Certainly, with great pleasure,' was the prompt reply; and Heinrich, taking a tinder box out of his wallet, immediately began to strike a light. Now the evening was damp, so damp that there seemed little enough prospect of the tinder's lighting; moreover the wind blew the sparks out almost before they fell.

'Well, if your cousins are not more easily got at than your light is, I pity you, young sir,' was the sole remark to which the stranger condescended, as he watched Heinrich's laborious endeavors.

'Nil desperandum is my motto,' answered the young man; and when the words were scarcely uttered, the light had been struck. In his delight at succeeding, Heinrich jumped up at the carriage step; and leaning through the window, thrust the tinder eagerly in the direction of the gentleman's face. 'Hurrah, sir, puff away.

After a short pause, during which time the stranger had been puffing at his pipe, he removed it from his mouth, and addressed Heinrich in this way:

'I have been thinking over what you have been telling me, and perhaps, in a humble way I might be able to assist you, and thus act the part of the cousin you are seeking. At all events, when you get to Berlin take this note,' handing him a slip of paper on which he had been writing; 'take this note to Marshal Grumkow, who is somewhat of a friend of mine. But mind! Do exactly as he bids you, and abide strictly by his advice. If he says he will help you, [illegible] will as [illegible] word; but he is rather eccentric, and the way he sets about doing a kindness may perhaps seem strauge to you. And now, he continued, 'as the road improves I must hurry on my horses; and so bid you good evening, hoping you will prosper in your new career.'

As Heinrich began to express his thanks for the good wishes of his unknown friend, the signal was given to increase the speed of the horses, and before he had any time to make any acknowledgments, he found himself alone again. The young man was not a little astonished at what had taken place; and as he gazed on the slip of paper he could not help wondering whether any good would come from it. These were the only words on it:

'Dear Marshal:—If you can forward the views of the bearer, Heinrich Meyer, you will oblige your friend. Let me know the result of the interview with him.

'Time will prove this, as it does all other things,' thought Heinrich, as he proceeded on his way. Somehow or other the road appeared less wearisome, and he felt less tired and footsore since receiving the paper. Hope was stronger with him than she had been for many a day; and quickening his pace he reached Berlin before nightfall.

'The noise and bustle of the capital was new to him, and he had some little difficulty in making his way to an inn. He found one at last and after a frugal supper he retired to rest. After breakfast he spent some time in searching for the residence of Grumkow. The house was, however, gained at last, and having delivered his missive to a servant Heinrich awaited the result in the hall. In a few minutes the servant returned and requested him, in a most respectful manner, to follow him to the Marshal's presence. Arrived there, he was received most courteously; and the Marshal made many inquiries as to his past life and future prospects; requested to be told the name of the village or town in which he had been educated; at what inn he was living in Berlin, &c. But still no allusion was made either to the note or to the writer of it. The interview lasted about twenty minutes, at the end of which time the marshal dismissed him, desiring that he would call on that day fortnight.

At last the time appointed for his second visit to the marshal arrived. His reception was again most favorable. The marshal begged him to be seated at the table at which he was writing, and proceeded at the same time to business. Unlocking a drawer and bringing forth a small bundle of papers, he asked Heinrich, as he drew them forth one by one, if he knew in whose handwriting the various superscriptions were.

Heinrich answered, that to the best of his belief, one was that of Herr of Madel, his former schoolmaster; another that of Dr. Von Hummer, the Principal of such a college and so on.

Quite right,' remarked the marshal; 'and, perhaps it may not surprise you to hear that I have written to these different gentlemen to inquire your character, that I may know with whom I have to deal, and not be working in the dark.' As he said those words the marshal fixed his eyes on Heinrich to see what effect they had, but the young man's countenance was unbanned; he evidently feared no evil report. 'I feel bound' continued the marshal, 'to tell you that all they say of you is most favorable and I am equally bound to believe and act upon their opinion. I have now to beg you to follow me to a friend's house.'

The marshal descended a private staircase leading to the court yard, which passed through a gate in the wall into a narrow side street, down which he conducted Heinrich, till they arrived at the private entrance to the palace. Heinrich began to be exceeding nervous; the conviction that this idea was not a mere trick of the imagination became stronger. Could he have had his own wish; Heinrich would at that moment have been 40 miles from Berlin. At last he found himself and Grumkow even in the palace, and he could not refrain from exclaiming

'Indeed Herr Marshal there must be some mistake!'

No answer vouchsafed as the marshal continued to lead him through various galleries and apartments, until at last they reached the door of one situated in a corner of a wing of the palace, where the marshal's knock was answered by a short come in. As the door opened one glance sufficed to convince Heinrich that his friend in the mud and the king were the one and the same person. The poor cousin seeker, greatly confused knelt before Frederick William, and began faltering out many contrite apologies.

After re-assuring Heinrich, the king told him that he was prepared to do what he could to push him forward in the profession he had chosen.

'But first,' he said 'I must hear you preach. On Sunday next, therefore, you shall preach before me; but mind, I shall choose the text. You may retire.'

By the time Heinrich Meyer reached his room in the inn, he had fixed his mind on the fact that he was to preach to the king. The fact was too clear; and all he could do was to set about preparing his sermon as soon as he could receive the text. For the remainder of the day he never stirred out; every step on the stair was to his ear the bearer of the text.

Nevertheless, evening and night passed; and the next day was advanced and still no text.

What was to be done? There was only two days before Sunday; he must go and consult the marshal, but the latter could give him no further information.—All he could do was to promise that if the king sent the text through him, it should be forwarded with the utmost possible despatch.

That day and the next passed, and yet Heinrich heard nothing from either the king or marshal. Only an official intimation had been sent, as was customary, that he had been selected as the preacher on the following Sunday at the Chapel Royal.

If it had not been that Heinrich knew himself to possess no mean powers of oratory, and that he could even extemporize in case of emergency, he would certainly have run away and adjured his discovered cousin. As it was, he abided by the course of events, and fortified himself by prayer and philosophy for the momentous hour.

Sunday morning arrived, but no text. Heinrich went to the Church appointed, and was conducted to the seat always set apart for the preacher of the day. The king with the royal family occupied their accustomed seat.

The service commenced, but no text.—The prayers were ended, and while the organ pealed forth its solemn sounds, the preacher was led to the pulpit. The congregation were astonished, not only at his youthfulness, but at his being a stranger.

The pulpit steps were gained and the thought flashed across Heinrich's mind that possibly he should find the text placed for him on the desk. But as he was on the point of mounting the stair, an officer of the royal household delivered to him a folded piece of paper, 'His majesty sends you the text!'

After having recited the preliminary prayers the preacher opened the paper, and it was blank! not a word was written on it. What was to be done? Heinrich deliberately examined the whole paper, and after a short pause, held it up before the congregation, saying:

'His majesty has furnished the text, for the sermon. But you must perceive that nothing whatever is upon this white sheet of paper. 'Out of nothing God created the world.' I shall therefore take creation for the subject of my discourse this morning.'

In accordance with this decision, the preacher went through the whole of the first chapter of Genesis in a masterly way his style being forcible and clear, and fluency of language remarkable, His audience accustomed to the king's eccentricities, were far more astonished at the dexterity with which the preacher had extricated himself from the difficulty, than at the dilemma in which he had been placed. At last the sermon ended, the congregation dismissed and Heinrich found himself in the sacristy, receiving the congratulations of several dignitaries of the Church, who all prophesied for him a brilliant future.

Heinrich ventured to express his amazement at the singular proceedings of the king but was told that he could only have arrived recently from the provinces, if he had not known that such vagaries were quite common to His Majesty. In the midst of the conversation a messenger arrived to conduct him to the royal presence. Being totally unaware what impression his sermon might have made upon the king, the cousin seeker rather dreaded the approaching audience. But Heinrich had scarcely passed the threshold of the king's room, when his majesty jumped up and thrust a roll of paper into the young preacher's hand, exclaiming, 'Hurrah, sir, puff away, take this for the light you gave me!'

Then, throwing himself back in a chair, he laughed heartily at the young preacher's look of surprise and confusion. The latter scarcely knew what reply to make, or what to do, but just as he got as far as 'Your Majesty,' the king interrupted him, saying: 'Make no fine speeches! go home quietly and examine the contents of your paper.—You came to Berlin to find a cousin; you have found one, who, if you go on steadily, will not neglect you.'

It is hardly necessary to add that the roll of paper contained a good appointment at the University of Berlin, and made Heinrich Meyer one of the royal preachers.

STAYS were quite unknown in Russia until Peter the Great danced with some Hanoverian ladies on his journey to Pontarama. Quite astonished the monarch replied to his suite after the ball. "What confounded hard bones these German women have."

A housemaid, boasting of her industrious habits said quite innocently, that on a certain occasion she rose at four, made a fire, put on the kettle, prepared breakfast, and made all the beds, 'before a single soul was up in the house.'

Abnormal Condition.

That "a little knowledge is a dangerous thing" was curiously proved in the case of Job Lurvy, Esq., and his precocious only son Jonah, a boy of ten years.

Young Jonah had a very grave face, and was a good listener, soft treading, and sly. Having heard his father converse often upon the strange phases of insanity, and declare that all persons were sometimes in an "abnormal condition" of mind, which rendered them irresponsible for any fault then committed, the boy resolved to take the benefit of his father's belief, and see how it would work.

"Come here, Jonah," said Mr. Lurvy, sternly, one day. "I understand you've been robbing a man's orchard."

"Yes, father, I did. I was just going to tell you. When I saw the apples, my brain whirled very, queer. I knew it was wrong, and I don't want the apples at all. But I knew I was in an abnormal condition, for in a few minutes I found myself up a tree."

"Gracious heavens! Hear my boy talk," thought the father, proudly, and forgave him at once. "That boy's got a remarkable mind. A young philosopher. Understands what 'abnormal means'. A mind so forward to use such language, brain whirling at this early age, must be peculiar—overcharged with thought, on doubt, and subject to strange influence, that wouldn't effect common boys. His motives must be pure. It would be cruel to punish him for what he did in an unnatural state of mind; and how simply and yet how eagerly he explained what affected him. I must be careful not to be harsh to my young sonny. He will be a great man yet. 'Abnormal! Ha, he!"

The next day, Jonah had succeeded so well, he indulged in a fight, and was complained of.

"Jonah, you rogue, you're been fighting."

"Yes, father, I won't deny it; but I had another whirl, I was awful abnormal this time."

"I knew you must have been, my son. Go, now, and try and be as normal as you can."

He was next complained of by his school teacher. He had played truant for a week.

"Yes, father; but I went close up to the school house every day; and it seemed, somehow, I couldn't go in Something kept telling me to go away, and I—I guess—I kind of played a little—but I was abnormal, worst kind."

The father thought it very strange, and new complaints now came almost daily: Jonah had put a cat's eye out, been swearing, lying, saucy, breaking windows, and, finally, he was so abnormal as to cut off a horse's tail, and then shot a hog.

This opened the father's eyes, and he gave Jonah a severe shaking.

"You young rascal! Sin is your natural condition. Hereafter, when you do right, which is seldom. I'll believe you abnormal, and won't punish you for that, but when you do evil, I'll consider you to be in your right state; and you show excellent good sense—and I'll beat you like a sack, till you become crazy again. Remember!"

The boy has been "crazy" ever since, and gives no further trouble to his father.

AN ELOPING COUPLE PURSUED SEVEN THOUSAND MILES.—Captain Stansbury, late of the St. Louis Police force, returned on Tuesday evening, having caught in the city of Quebec, a runaway girl, who eloped with a man from her mother in Cincinnatti some two months since. The girl was safely returned to her mother by the Captain, who was amply rewarded for his trouble. The Captain informs us that he travelled seven thousand miles in pursuit of the fair maid.—He said it cost him at least two thousand miles rail and water travel more than was necessary, owing to the fact that the elopement was prematurely published in the St. Louis papers. The young lady got wind that the Captain was in pursuit while she was in Buffalo, and then commenced a race unparalled in police annals. The Captain chased her all over the New England States when he found the fugitive had taken Canada rout. She was then followed to Boonshire Fall, in Canada West; thence to Toronto, Bytown, Three Rivers and Montreal. The Captain got off the scent of the fugitive on the Grand River, owing to the fact that they left the main lines of travel and took to a raft descending the river two hundred and fifty miles. At Montreal, the girl's paramour getting tired out, the latter was left behind, when the girl steamed down to Qubec where she was caught by her perservering pursuer. The girl—who according to the Captain's statement, "is the prettiest ever laid eyes on"—delivered herself up gracefully, and was returned to Cincinnatti to sin no more it is to be hoped. This was her second elopement, she having tried the experiment once before, and was captured at the Planter's House, in this city in company with a gambler, by the same officer who recaptured her the second time.—St. Louis Democrat

A cute lawyer, pleading for a burglar against whom the case was clear, contended that as he had been caught before he had introduced more of his person than the upper part into the house in question, asked, "Can a man be said to enter a house when only one half of his body was in an the other half out?" "I shall leave the whole matter to the jury. They must judge of the law and the facts as proved," replied the judge. The jury brought in a verdict of 'guilty' as to the one half of the body from the waist up, and 'not guilty' as to the other half. The judge sentenced the guilty half to two years imprisonment leaving it to the prisoner's opinion to have the 'not guilty' half cut off or take it along with him.

Difficulties between the Bishop of Montreal and the Seminary.

It is now more than two months since news was received here that the Bishop of Montreal had started from Rome on his way back to his diocese. His latest letters showed him to have travelled through France, Paris, and finally Belgium preparatory to his embarkation, and for a time he was expected to arrive in Montreal by each next steamer. Recently, however, the astounding news came that, instead of leaving for Canada, he had turned back and was once more on his way to Rome. No explanation was given to his diocese of this very strange course. It is now supplied by the correspondence from Rome in a Paris paper, L'Union, which has the following:—

"The Venerable Superior of the House of St. Sulpice, in Paris, is shortly expected in Rome, having been ordered by the Holy Pontiff to come with a view to putting an end to the difficulties which, since many years, exist in Canada between the Sulpicians and the Bishop of Montreal.—The Sacred Congregation having been instructed to examine the grievances of Mgr. Bourget will not be long in pronouncing a definite opinion, and defining in the most precise terms the rights and the duties of each party."

Few people are aware that serious differences existed between the representatives of unity and infallibility in Montreal, namely, the Bishop on the one hand and the priests of the Seminary of St. Sulpice on the other. Fewer still know what is the nature of these differences. The Catholic press of the Province of whatever party has not been bold enough to say anything about this delicate subject, and a foreign priest, L'Abbe Brasseur de Bourgbourg having touched upon it in a book on Canada, the work was proscribed by the clergy; so that no book-seller dared sell it. In spite of the mystery shrouding these differences, which must be held secret for the good of the church and to prevent scandal, something of them is known. Their origin can be traced back to the year 1821, when the Rev. Mr. Lartigue, himself priest of the Seminary, was appointed the first Bishop of Montreal. He claimed that by his election to the Episcopate he had forfeited none of his rights as a member of the Seminary. The priests of this wealthy corporation, however, were very jealous of the authority which one of their peers might hereafter exert amongst them in virtue of his episcopal office. They knew that the See was not endowed, and that their immense property would be very tempting to a poor episcopal master. They urged him to resign his membership, but he would not. They finally refused him a seat in their corporation, and expelled him. They even refused to allow him to use the parish church as a Cathedral, or to have an episcopal chair placed for him in the chair.

The scandal was great, and the poor bishop impotent. He still, however, continued stubbornly to occupy his cell in the Seminary, and would not leave it. He had no Episcopal palace to go to, and did not want any; with profound humility, he preferred to remain one of the Seminary.—But the priests were fearful for their property, and therefore insisted and foiled their Bishop in every way. In vain did the latter invoke, against a rebellious clergy, the authority of the Pope, the council, and traditions. All those infallible claims were outweighed by seigniorial revenues and tithes, which seemed in danger not of being lost to the church, but of being managed by other hands, and for the more general purposes of the diocese.

At last the Archbishop of Quebec came on the scene, and with authority installed the Bishop in the parish church, and had the throne of Mgr. Lartigues placed in the choir, being only a chair a little higher than that of the other priests. The Seminary submitted sullenly, and changing tactics, entered, it seems, into a deep conspiracy to deceive Monseigneur. He was allowed to believe that all the differences were reconciled, and that he would find hereafter only a submissive clergy in the priests of St. Sulpice. He started confidently for a visit through the parishes of his diocese his secretary who escorted him being a young priest, the Rev. Ignace Bourget, now Bishop of Montreal. While he was gone, his throne was removed from the Parish Church, and at his return he found the doors of his house (the Seminary) closed against him. In his absence his books, clothes, and furniture, as well as those of his Secretary, had been packed and carried to the Hotel Dieu; and hither the two humbled gentlemen wended their steps. The good nuns granted them the hospitality of their house until such time as both Catholic and Protestant sympathy, upon which he had to cast himself, supplied the Bishop with funds necessary to build a church and a residence.

The Seminary was too strong and too wealthy to become the subject of the otherwise well-merited episcopal discipline. But it may easily be understood that the relations between the Bishop and the Seminary have never been very cordial since; and Monseigneur Bourget can never forget that he was once very shamefully and cruelly turned out of the Seminary. This also explains his predilections for the nuns of the Hotel Dieu, amongst whom he has often established his residence. Of late yea the precise nature of the differences between the St. Sulpicians and the Bishop have been kept very secret; but there is scarcely a doubt that the principal source of them is the vast property in seigniories, real estate, bonds, mortgages, and other investments held by the order, over which the ecclesiastical superior of the diocese can exert no control, so that for all church purposes he is entirely dependent on appeals to the generosity of his people, and that in the sight of immense wealth which is intended for the same objects. When the Pope has given his decision, the litigants can scarcely do otherwise than abide by his verdict.—Montreal Witness.

CONFEDERATION.

For some time the enemies of this great Constitutional Reform have had cause to rejoice over the check the whole work of the Quebec Conference had received through the action of the maritime provinces. The people misled by wily and artful politicians, appeared determined to reject the work of their leaders, and to be satisfied with things remaining in the status quo of the past.—The enemies of good government in Upper Canada chuckled over this, and used it as a plausible argument against the whole scheme, setting forth that it was only the work of a few, and especially of Hon. Geo. Brown, and for this reason opposed it—some directly, and indirectly.

The Conservatives set forth a Legislative Union as their hobby, while a few of even their leaders, and the great majority of the Reform body sought a Federal union. It has also been sought to be established that reformers did not want Confederation, and imaginary changes in both east and west were pointed to as convincing arguments on their part. At last however, they are being undeceived, or at least their dupes are being enabled to see that the sound judgment and good sense of the people, both east and west are for carrying out the principles of the Quebec Conference or something very like it. Brown has been beaten in Western Canada, and Mr. Fisher of New Brunswick, who was rejected at the last election in the County of York, then because of his confederation proclivities, the other day was returned by a majority of 711, what a mighty change. Mr. Fisher was at the beginning of the year in a minority of 889, now is returned by the overwhelming majority of 711. When we consider that he was opposed by the unanimous rural party there, and further when we consider that of 4 members for York, 3 were Anti-Confederates, and would therefore offer most deadly opposition, and yet in the face of all this the people choose the man they rejected so lately, how will our croakers receive this. Lower Canada is the stronghold of Anti Confederation. Its representatives strengthened by Corruptionists from Upper Canada, and it may be, aided by a part of the press of this province, seek to bind upon us a yoke which neither we nor our fathers were able to bear, but a short time will show them the folly of opposition—nay, the absurdity of it, as the voice of the people from the Atlantic to the far west will ere long demand that which is now only sought for by entreaties. To continue the legislative principle would be madness, after all the misgovernment of the past.—This the people of Upper Canada fully perceive, and the people of the maritime provinces are also being convinced, and are fast unlearning what they had learned amiss.

Rebellion in Jamica.

Intelligence has been received, via Havanna, that a revolt had taken place among the troops in Jamica. The revolt is said to be a serious affair and to have grown out of sympathy with the rebellion in the neighboring Republic of Hayti. Great excitement prevails on all circles of the community.

The Duncan sailed from Halifax with the 17th Regt. a few days since; on her way, it is believed she will call at Bermuda for more troops.

Forty of the revolters have been hung.

The Fenians in Ireland.

Already we hear of 57 arrests, who have been disposed of as follows:—34 sent for trial; 6 bailed out; 2 have become crown-witnesses; 1 transferred to Tuam; 1 discharged; 14 not yet disposed of. There is a sharp look out for the brotherhood and from the well-known character of those engaged in the hopeless scheme, there will be plenty of crown witnesses. Their folly will lead them out.

Query.

Is President O'Mahony, of the Irish Republic, a citizen of the United States or of the Embryo Republic of the Emerald Isle? In the address of the Delegates from the Fenian Convention to President Johnson, W. R. Roberts, the spokesman, said:—"I have the honor of being delegated by the Convention of the Irish American citizens assembled in Philadelphia." What a noble flea, citizens of two nations at the same time!

Cholera.

Thisdisease has been making its ravages in Spain; 500 a day are said to be carried off by it. It is abating in France. A few cases are reported in England. The steamer Atlanta has also brought it to New York; but it is confined to the vessel, and she is compelled to remain in quarantine. No fears are yet entertained of it spreading.

A Rochester paper says:—That american buyers spent some $7,000,000 in the Canadian Market last month. What an advantage to the american people it would have been to have had the Reciprocity Treaty repealed during that period. The same stuff then would have cost them only about $2,000,000.

A SOLEMN FARCE.

On Tuesday evening, we were informed of the death of a man named Wm. Ritchie, and of the intentions of some of our Coroners to hold an inquest on the body. At the time appointed we also repaired to the house where deceased lay. Being a little early, we made some enquiries concerning the death, and the supposed cause of it; which we found to be brought about by hard drinking, and self abuse in whisky, after suffering from a disease known, we believe, as gastric fever, we waited however, until a jury was empanneled by Coroner Poole, and until the circumstances of the death were more fully brought to light by the evidence of deceased's wife and also of the doctor who attended him during the two days preceeding his death. It is needless to enter into details; suffice it to say, that the evidence of Mrs. Ritchie, strongly established the fact that the man was dead drunk as late as Tuesday last, and it was understood that he had been after an attack of a severe disease of the stomach or coatings of it. The drink increased the irritability of that organ, and induced vomiting which was very severe; he also vomited a little blood, as well as the usual yellowish-green filthy matter that proceeds from a disordered stomach after a spree, as well as during billious attacks. This the evidence fully established. But it was set forth that one of our druggists had sold the woman antimonial wine to be used as an emetic, and that under the circumstances this hastened death.—In the evidence however, it was shown that the dose was a very moderate one, and that such medicine is very often given in cases of billious attacks, and is used as a cordial in domestic or maternal treatment in as large doses with very good effect. After a careful hearing, and after listening to the sum of the evidence from the coroner, an intelligent jury rendered a verdict of,—Deceased came to his death "by visitation of God." If they had said from the effects of drink, abuse and disease, very few would have contradicted it, and the evidance offered, as well as the evidence of those who stood around, fully warranted such a conclusion.

But what good purpose has the inquest effected? A careful enquiry of the friends and neighbors of the deceased, would have shown the uselessness of an inquest in this case. On some future occasion we shall give our view of inquests as now held.

THAT "CALUMNY."

"A shameful calumny" is the heading of an article in last week's Review, anent our humble selves. But as our worthy contemporary, a little further down, pens one of the grossest falsehoods or slips of memory yet penned, we consider that the heading is more applicable to himself than to us. In future it may be considered a calumny on the articles of our friend to assert that they are true, he so rarely writes a line of truth concerning us. But the calumny will turn out to be fully substantiated by facts as well as by the opinions of other Journalists. It need not be repeated that as long as the Tory party could hold power they did it regardless of the abuses that had crept into the governmental machinery of country, and regardless of the demands of Upper Canada for justice. Our readers need not be told that but for the action of the Reform members, no action would have been taken to rectify the disorder and injustice we were forced to endure so long. These things are fresh in the memories of all. The eight Conservatives in the Cabinet follow through mud and mire the meanderings of their old Corruptionist Leader, John A., who knows full well that for his good the present state of affairs is better than Confederation and while he professes to work cordially with Reform members of the Cabinet, he is seeking every opportunity to undermine Reform interests, that if possible he may retain the loaves and fishes. The action of John A. in the Wentworth Election goes farther to establish our assertion than all that has transpired since the Coalition was formed. What answer will our friend Review give to the conduct of the Conservative Leader, telegraphing "Run your Warden at all hazards, and if you like tell them he is my Candidate." Is this not doing everything in his power to defeat the object of the Coalition. Once get followers enough into Parliament to counteract Reform voters, and then John A. is safe, and goodbye to Confederation on any other Reform, so long as he can draw $5000 a year.

To this conduct of their leader, let us add the comment of a contemporary. "They (the Tories) manifested no love of fair play in the election any more than in those that occurred since the coalition was formed" and again:—"Of course, by their conduct they evince that confederation is a matter with them of subordinate importance." And further on:—

"The problem suggested by the Wentworth election is this: If Messrs. Cartier and Macdonald, assisted by their organs and candidates, are opposed to Canada Federation or wish indefinitely to postpone it, in expectation that, in the course of the present century, the larger scheme, may be carried, on what pretext can Messrs. Brown, Howland and Macdougall keep them company any longer? Who will answer?"

Thus then actions that speak louder than words, fully sustain the assertion we made. And these extracts from a contemporary opposed to confederation, but with more honesty than the Review, shows that we are not alone when we accuse the conservatives of endeavoring to balk Confederation, and thus by retaining their seats on the Treasury Benches, curse the country with the evil Government of past years.

A Good Time of Borrowing.

The Thomas Graham, of Cavan, who borrowed his brother's horse and new buggy about a week since, borrowed another from a person unknown back of Lindsay, brought him to Peterborough, but gave him to his owner, who got tight over it, and let the young man slide. Not satisfied, he borrowed a horse from Mr. Boswell, we are told, without asking, of course; did the same with a gig, and set off for a pleasure trip southward. He finding it safest to go on horseback, left the gig in Mr. John Wilson's woods, near Centreville, and moved on, but left the horse near Bloomfield, and has started on foot for parts not yet known. The man must be taken with horse-mania.

Ashburnham.

The Council met on Monday evening. Present—The Reeve, and Messrs. Strickland and McGregor.

The only business transacted was authorizing the Reeve to render such assistance as he thought necessary for the relief of a destitute female, and also for burying her child that was then dead.

The Council will meet again on the first Monday of December next.

That Reply.

In our last issue we convicted our contemporary of wilfully and for selfish purposes mutilating the prize list of the County Show. The answer to our charges is worthy the straight-forwardness of the Review. To the charge of which he accuses us, we plead "not guilty" in any way whatever; and as his own truthfulness is very often to be called in question, and his judgment in matters of truth or truthfulness not to be relied on, the whole conviction of which he speaks must have been the result of a chronic disorder of the intellect of our contemporary.

But his plea—"We claim the right to discriminate what may or may not appear in the columns of the Review, without the dictation of our contemporary,"—affords a most barefaced disregard to the amenabilities of journalism, as well as a total disregard of circumstances or truth. We venture to assert that the Review is the first journal that ever set up the assumption, or arrogated such an absurd claim. In matters of opinion or of items of news as a whole, every journalist has the right of discrimination what shall appear in his columns; but in detail of matters of fact, no journalist ever claimed such an abuse of right. What would be thought of the journalist who won't pretend to give a fair and honest report of a meeting, or of the transactions of a society, and yet would omit incidents and decisions, or even declarations that actually did take place? Would not the community receive with distrust every thing that did appear in such journal? And justly so. As well might a witness who is sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, assume the right to give what might be favorable to a party in court, or prejudicial to another, because he might be the friend or the enemy of such individual. In giving reports of prize lists, the journalist has nothing to do with the individual exhibitors, unless such parties shall have used unfair means of obtaining the prize awarded. A prize list is a copy of matters of fact, every item of which should be given. But the people of this County will remember in future that unless they be the particular friends of our contemporary they may expect that nothing favorable to them will be allowed to appear in the columns of the Review. This is a system of black mailing not before so publicly resorted to in this County, and is worthy only of darker ages, and of places of more doubtful civilization and morality. It is well, however, that he has come out in his true colors, that he has declared his true principles; a discriminating public will be able to appreciate such an outrage on the amenabilities of journalism, and will in due time mete out a due reward.

The Literary Club.

Now that the long evenings are again upon us, and that, we trust, there are many young men enquiring how and where they may be able to spend some of the tedious hours to their advantage intellectually, and let us hope morally. We would direct them to join the Literary Club where they can spend an evening pleasantly and profitably. On last Thursday evening, the first evening for the season the Firemen's Hall was filled. Sheriff Hall occupied the chair, while Mr. Crerar, of the Montreal Bank, recited a most amusing piece, entitled "Little Teddlekins." Mr. Crerar although labouring under the pain and indisposition of sore eyes well sustained his good name as a reader. The piece was well chozen and the delivery kept the house in burst of laughter. After the reading a debate was opened on the wisdom of "Limiting the Rate of Interest by law." The leaders in this debate are W. H. Scott, Esq., affirmative; Mr Crerar, negative. It will be concluded to-night.—The debate promises to be entertaining, and as it is a public one, the hall should be full. We were particularly pleased to see a number of ladies last Thursday evening. Their presence will do much to make the hall attractive on such occasion.

Fire Company.

At the monthly meeting of Protection Fire Company, held in the Firemen's Hall, on Tuesday evening, November 7th, 1865, the following Members were elected Officers for the ensuing year:

D McNaughton, Captain.
John Robinson, 1st Lieutenant.
John Kincaid, 2nd Lieutenant.
J. O'Donnell, Secretary.
Richard Hall, Assistant Secretary.
Robert Innes, Treasurer.
C. Robinson, 1st Branchman.
George Stevenson, 2nd Branchman.
Alex. Erskine, 3rd Branchman.
J. Gibbs, Captain of Hose.
George Mitchell, Lieut. of Hose.
John Brown, Engineer of Company.
A. Comstock and A. Gillespie, Axemen.

The following resolution was also passed: Resolved,—That the thanks of this Company is hereby tendered to Messrs. Geo. Stethem & Co., for the liberal donation of Twenty Dollars, for services rendered on the evening of the 7th October last.

The Union School.

We are glad to learn that this Institution is progressing favorably. The number on the register for last month is 3[illegible]. The Principal has also instituted a system of monthly reports which every teacher has to fill up, and as they contain a full account of attendance, recitations, standing, and conduct of every pupil, it must eventually stir up both teachers and pupils. Even already we learn that these reports are creating quite a degree of emulation among the pupils. Parents also can have access to these reports, and from them learn what progress their children are making every month.—We are sure that no effort is being spared to raise the School to what it ought to be, and what it will be ere long. Let parents go regularly and visit the School and see for themselves, and we are sure they will be kindly received by both the Principal and Teachers, and if they do so fault-finding will never be heard of.

Gunpowder Plot.

The Orangemen of Peterboro commemorated the event of the gunpowder plot by a supper at the Union Hotel, a number of Orangemen were present with their friends at dinner, which done great credit to "mine host," Croft. Addresses, &c. were delivered by some members of the association, appropriate to the occasion and the evening passed off pleasantly. While there were many great guns present, there was no powder. No fear of President O'Mahony was expressed.

Turnips and Carrots.

The following are Prizes awarded for the best Turnips and Carrots in this County: Turnips—1st, Isaac Watson; 2nd, Thomas Tully; 3rd, John Walton. Carrots—1st, John Walton: 2nd. Thomas Tully; 3rd, J. B. Fowler.

A Model Mayor.

We lately had the opportunity of hearing two very prominent men—one a Canadian and citizen of this County, the other of the city of Rochester—publicly acknowledge the soundness of the principles of Temperance, and also declare that they did not indulge in the wine cup. The following proclamation has lately appeared in a Rochester paper and speaks volumns for the wisdom of the people who elected such a man as Mayor Moore. Will the Mayors of Canada and others in authority take the hint and do likewise.

PROCLAMATION.

Mayor's Office, Rochester, Nov. 3, '65.

Whereas, It is of vital importance that our elections be conducted in accordance with law and good order, to the end that the unbiased will of the People may be expressed without disturbance or undue excitement; and

Whereas, The general observance of the State law in regard to the sale of intoxicating liquors on election days, had the most salutary effect in securing good order and exemplary sobriety and quietness at and about the polls of the last two elections held in this city:

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given, that section 21 of chapter 627 of the Session Laws of 1857, prohibiting any keeper of an inn or hotel, or person licensed to sell liquor or give away the same, within one quarter of a mile of the polls, or place of holding an election, during the day, will be strictly enforced at the General Election to be held on the 7th day of November. And it is hoped that all dealers in ardent spirits will not only freely acquiesce, but also cheerfully unite with our law-abiding citizens generally in such action and efforts as will secure the full enforcement of the law on the occasion.

D. D. T. Moore, Mayor.

Total Suppression.

Monday evening, Mr. Campbell, who is now in town, held a meeting in the basement of the Presbyterian Church. There was a very respectable audience, both as regards number and persons. Rev. Mr. Roger occupied the chair. Mr. Campbell entered pretty freely into the evil of the liquor traffic, and also spoke of the work of the Alliance, showing what it proposed and needed to enable it to carry out its designs. Already fifty names have been obtained for a Branch of the Alliance here. On Monday evening next another meeting will be held at the same place and at the same hour, half past seven p.m. Let the house be full. A Branch will then be formed and officers chosen.

Evening Classes.

Mr. W. S. Griffin, of the Grammar and Union School, announces, in to-days issue, his intention of opening Evening Classes in the Union School Building. It is a rare opportunity for those who cannot attend the Day School, and should not be neglected. The cost also is very light, and can hardly deter any one. Mr. Griffin, too, is well qualified to conduct classes, holding a first-class certificate from the Normal School, and being also favorably spoken of since he came here. We hope he will meet with the encouragement the enterprize deserves, and that this opportunity for mental culture thus put in the way of young people, will not be lightly est emed.

Personal.

We are pleased to have to report the success of our fellow townsman, Mr. Wm. Johnston, in obtaining a second-class certificate at the late examination of Cadets in Toronto. This, from the Toronto school, is a guarantee of advancement in the science of war, although as a citizen he is a man of peace.

The Committee of the Peterboro' Protestant Home, beg to acknowledge with many thanks, the following donations for the month of October:—

Mrs. F. Haulkain, children's clothing; Mrs. Tate, 1 lb. of hops; Mrs. Clementi, 3 pair of socks; Mrs. Wallis, a bushel of apples; Mr. Ryan, 4 bushels of potatoes; Mrs. Johnson, a quilt; Miss Roger, children's clothing and yarn; Mrs. Burns, children's clothing; Mr. W. B. Ward, 10 lbs. of sugar, 4 lbs. of tea; Mrs. Wallis 4 shawls; Mrs. Romaine, 1 dress; A Friend, 2 woollen shawls, 12 yds. of flannel, 11 yds. of print; Mr. Rush, 1 bottle of ink; Mr. T. M. Fairbairn, 1 load of corlwood.

The following bit of sensation fudge has been despatched from Toronto to a Rochester paper, for which there appears to be no foundation other than a disordered imagination:—

Affairs in Canada.—A despatch from Toronto says:—The Fenian excitement is increasing, and great activity is manifested in military circles. Jail inspection, enrolling volunteers, &c., is going on. Many Irish soldiers in the regular regiments are deserting to the States, and a large portion of the volunteers are believed to be Fenians.—Many Scotchmen are joining the order in Montreal.

The remains of Monsieur Archambault, wife and child, who were burned and bruised, so as to cause death, have been brought to Montreal, and committed to their last resting place. The mother and daughter were in one coffin.

MONAGHAN TOWNSHIP COUNCIL.

Monaghan, October 28, 1865.

The Council met at 1 o'clock. All the members present. The minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

The Reeve reported that he had seen the roads mentioned in the petition of Mr. Hunter and others, referred to in former minutes, and recommended that plank for one gully be given to the line of road running north and south to the west side of Mr. Hunter's buildings, to which the Council assented and named Mr. Geo. Howden commissioner for performing the work.

Mr. Lockie, seconded by Mr. Collins and Resolved,—That the motion passed at the public meeting for the purpose of taking into consideration the propriety of placing stone monuments on the governing lines in the township be adopted by this Council, and that the Reeve be instructed to take the necessary steps provided by law to carry out the requirements of said motion.

The petition of John Whitfield and others, left over from last meeting of Council, was granted, as the season was considered too far advanced for making the improvements named therein.

The By-law for the purchase of a portion of land from James Wallis, Esq., for road purposes, and also one for opening the allowance of road for the quarter line between lots six and seven in the 10th concession, received their final reading.

An order for $2.00 was given in favour of Richard Clark, for work done on Beet No. 3, under the superintendence of Councillor Dundass.

The Council adjourned to Friday the 29th December at 10 o'clock, A. M.

DREADFUL SHIPWRECK.

Two Hundred and Sixty Coolies Drowned or Eaten by Tigers.

The English papers give the particulars of the loss of the American built ship Eagle Speed, while on her way with four hundred and ninety-seven coolies from Port Canning to Demarara. The wreck took place near Halliday's Island, August 23d, and the fatal results are thus described:

"Three of the Eagle Speed's boats were launched, manned by the crew. Including the coolies who threw themselves into the water on hencoops, the boats saved one hundred and sixty-nine, and all the Europeans. Captain Hoskins' boat made five trips, but the others were soon smashed; one of them had at half past twelve brought off the captain, whom his own crew refused to help.

"The steamer Lady Elgin, which was near, left for Port Canning; no hint was given to three hundred miserable wretches who were sinking, to launch the ship's cutter, which had not been used, though the one European left and five negroes did do so, and with thirty coolies were afterwards found by the steamer. The ship continued to float all that night, and did not sink till seven on Wednesday morning, justifying the opinion of Capt. Hoskins. Considering the rate at which the ship was sinking, I was sanguine that we would have succeeded in getting the greater portion of the coolies out. Two steamers were at once sent round from Calcutta, and the Lady Elgin returned from Port Canning. They found three coolie lads on the mast of the wreck, and saved about sixty more who had floated to Halliday's and Butcher's Islands, where the tigers are said to have destroyed some. The coolies assert that the last European attempted to fire the ship. Of the four hundred and ninety-seven coolies, two hundred and sixty seem to have perished on that terrible Wednesday morning or afterwards in the jungle."

Gale on Lake Michigan.

[From the Chicago Times, Oct. 28th.]

The following losses on the lake were reported in the city yesterday: The bark H S Lansing, owned by Captain J. M. Jones, of Detroit, went ashore yesterday morning, near Grosse Point. She had on board 330 tons of coal for the Rolling Mill Company. The crew were all saved, and one of them, who arrived in the city yesterday afternoon, states that the vessel is a total wreck, having been hooked to pieces by the fury of the storm, and the whole cargo lost. She was insured for $8,000 in the Home Insurance Company.

The brig Robert Hollister, also when ashore near the same point. She had on board a cargo of lumber from Bay City. She is not hopelessly damaged, and Captain Wilson is of opinion that she can be got afloat again.

The Helen Blood, owned by John Lang, of this city, when ashore about 16 miles north of Chicago. She was loaded with wood and lumber, part of which has been lost. It is doubtful whether she can be got off again.

The schooner Gem, commanded by Capt. Alex Stewart, was reported to have gone into Milwaukee in a sinking condition, having sustained heavy damage by the storm.

A telegram was received last evening by Messrs. Finney & Lyon, announcing that the schooner Algerine was sunk near Port Coburn, on Lake Erie. She was loaded with barley.

A rumor prevailed in the city yesterday that the brig Powhatan had sunk near Grosse Point, and that the men were seen clinging to the rigging to save themselves from the waves. It was but a rumor, however, and had not been confirmed at this writing. The tug word went out yesterday afternoon, but returned after a fruitless search for the vessel.

Several vessels were seen, during the afternoon, lying at anchor off the harbor, the storm being too severe for them to attempt to enter.

Towards 9 o'clock last evening the violence of the storm began to subside a little.

British Vessels in American Ports.

Mr. Seward on the 30th ult. addressed the following letter to Mr. Welles, Secretary of the Federal navy. It is understood at Washington that official intelligence has been received to the effect that Admiral Denman, the British Naval Commander in the Pacific has been ordered to send cruisers in quest of the Shenandoah who are to capture her if met with:

"I have the satisfaction of submitting for your information a copy of a despatch which has just been received from Mr. Adams, together with its accompaniment, a copy of a note of Earl Russell, relating to the restrictions upon American national vessels which lately were maintained by Her Majesty's government in British ports and waters. The despatch shows that all the objectionable restraints referred to have now been entirely removed, and that it is the desire of Her Majesty's government that unrestricted hospitality and friendship shall be shown to the vessels of war of the United States in all Her Majesty's ports, which at home or abroad. The President has directed me to make known to Her Majesty's government his satisfaction for this pleasing manifestation of consideration and justice on the part of Great Britain. I have, therefore, to request you to inform the naval officers of the United States that the instructions which have heretofore been given them to make discriminations in regard to their vessels in British ports and their intercourse with British naval vessels, are now countermanded and withdrawn, and that henceforth the most liberal hospitality and courtesy will be expected to be shown by the navy of the United States to the navy of Great Britain."

The following list contains the number of prizes awarded to the respective countries, at the Dublin Exhibition.

Peterborough, Nov. 7, 1865.

"'Salt,' 'oil,' 'salt,' 'oil,' 'salt,' 'oil,' is a fair specimen of the conversation heard 'in the stores and in the streets' hereabouts."

The following carefully prepared table shows how the thing runs:

OIL MEASURE.

2 gas bubbles make	one oil-spring.
3 oil-springs make	one "indigestion."
2½ indigestions make	one lease.
1½ leases make	one derrick.
2½ derricks make	lots of territory.

But, honestly, they have found a good salt-spring here, and expect—TO FIND 'OIL' immediately.

Lord Monck.—An address was presented to Lord Monck, on his arrival from Canada, at his seat near Enniskerry, and a display of fireworks took place in his honor the same evening.

KETCHUM.

We are amazed at the want of taste and proper elevation of sentiment exhibited by Mr. Ketchum. Only two months ago he shook the financial credit of Wall street like an earthquake, toppled over half a dozen great banking houses, frightened twenty thousand pleasure seekers from Saratoga and Newport, and his name became famous in all Christian lands. Now he spoils it all by pleading guilty and by the end of the week his head will be severely shaved, his clothing will be like the hide of a Zebra, and his hands will be blistered with his first experiment at shoemaking.

The initial chapter in the history of the crimes of Ketchum no doubt possessed rare fascination to many misguided youth whose moral education has been somewhat neglected. Perhaps the history of the second chapter of that time which will end ten years hence, when the gates of Sing Sing are opened to release a middle-aged felon, might be read with somewhat greater profit.

Mr Edward Ketchum had greatly disappointed public expectation. Having, by the splendor and magnitude of his forgeries, elevated that crime to a respectable niche in the temple of fine arts, he now intends to plead guilty to the counts of a common-place, vulgar indictment, and to go to Sing Sing (what a name for a penitentiary!) as a sheep to the shambles.—Exchange.

New York, Oct. 24.—The Times' special says:—The murder of Harriet Wells by her paramour, Levi L. Farewell, which occurred yesterday morning on Thirteenth street, proves to have been a more diabolical act than was at first supposed. The evidence before the coroner's jury to-day shows that the murderer deliberately administered chloroform to his victim while she was asleep, then strangled her to death, threw her body into a closet, robbed her of her watch and jewelry and then fled. He has not yet been arrested. The animating purpose of the murder is said to have been the refusal of the woman to marry him, he having sworn that if he did not marry her no one else would. Although keeping a house of prostitution here, the deceased is said to have been respectably connected and to have a son at school at New Brunswick, Conn., and for which place she intended to start this evening. She was thirty-five years of age and came to this city with Farewell from Albany, N. Y. Farewell came originally from Massachusetts.

Charleston, S.C., Oct. 28.—The Steamer Republic, which left New York for New Orleans on the 8th inst., was wrecked off the coast of Georgia on Wednesday last. Four boats and one raft put off from the ship. One of the boats arrived at Charleston to-day. This boat contained Capt. S. Young, Engineer R. W. Durfee, Purser W. H. Morehead, and S. W. Whitman, J. R. Malby, Mrs. J. H. White and child, Mrs. L. D. Delbriski and two children, E. Pacti, J. McLaughlin, S. Lyons, Stewart. Also, seamen John Henwin, Thomas Smith, B. Leary and James Corcoran. The other boats and the raft have not been heard from. The survivers will take passage on the Quaker City for New York, to-morrow.

Baltimore, Oct. 29.—A horrible murder and robbery were committed to-day about noon in the photographic establishment of H. B. Goetze, on Baltimore street, adjoining the Sun office. The proprietor was found about 1 o'clock, lying on the floor of his operating shop dead, with a pistol shot in the back of his head. His person had been robbed of a watch and other valuables.—Parties in the adjoining buildings testify to hearing the report of a pistol about noon. No clue has as yet been obtained of the murderer.

In St. Patrick's Church, Montreal last Sunday, the Rev. B. McGauran took occasion to warn his flock against Fenanism. He was happy to say that so far as he could learn the movement in this community originated with persons not members of his congregation. It was, he believed, confined to a few obscure individuals from the back streets of the city. It was a thing of evil from the beginning, and from evil no good can come. Secret associations were condemned by the Church, and the associations in question was moreover condemned by the civil authorities. He was as good an Irishman as any, he loved his country well, and would be happy to see her prosperous; but at the same time he must denounce, in the strongest terms, the secret brotherhood in question, as well as the means by which they proposed to attain their end. No man could be a good patriot unless he were a good christian, and the voice of the Church, which they must all obey, was opposed to secret societies. In conclusion, he said that he believed the congregation under his care was, as a body, as religious, as well conducted, and as truly loyal and dutiful as it was possible for any congregation to be. He did not, however, wish that even a few individual should be misled by the dish meat and designing, and for that reason he considered it his duty to make these remarks.

A shocking tragedy was enacted on the 1st Concession Cornwall last Sunday afternoon. The result was the death of a boy about 12 years of age, named Wm. Lalonde, at the hands of a neighbour boy, Robert Lightlady. Lalonde's parents were out visiting, the deceased and a younger boy being the occupants of the house. Lightlady came along with a gun, and at the door of Lalonde's house met the deceased, and told him he was going to shoot him. The boy, Lalonde, thinking it a joke made no effort to get out of the way, when Lightlady raised the gun and fired the shot entering the groin, and passing through the body, penetrated the door behind. The poor boy fell outwards, but was dragged into the house by his murderer who told the younger brother to throw some water over him immediately. Lightlady, then went out, shut the doors after him and went home. An inquest was held on the body on Monday, which resulted in a verdict of wilful murder against Lightlady. He was accordingly committed to stand his trial. The Assizes had just closed the day before the murder. So that the prisoner will have to lie in jail until the Spring sitting of Court.

Defeat of "my" Candidate.—Mr McMonies, the Reform Ministerial candidate, had been returned for North Wentworth by a majority of 14, beating Mr. Alexander Brown, Conservative Ministerialist. There was a regular stand-up battle between the two wings of the Coalition at this election and the Reformers were victorious. They had a round than the prestige attaching from Mr. Alex Brown's much earlier candidature—they had in their favor the bad faith from Mr Brown in attempting the slide in as a Ministerialist, whilst practically disowning Federation, which was made the alternative in the Ministerial scheme. They had also in their favor a telegram from Mr. John A. Macdonald, designed to help Mr. Alex Brown, but which no doubt had the opposite effect, seeing that, of the bad faith, it bade the Conservatives to run Mr Brown "at all hazards," and if they liked, to "tell them he is my candidate." Having been told he was Mr. John A. Macdonald's candidate, he was defeated accordingly.—Stafford Beacon.

Burned Alive.—A terrible accident occurred yesterday in a house off Craig street, between St Ignace and Salaberry. Two women lived in the house, Mrs. Abbott, and Bridget Clancey, wife of Charles Foster, private in the 24th Regiment. During the afternoon, Mrs Foster, who is only 25 years old, went out to work, while Mrs. Abbott fell asleep on her bed. After some time, the latter awoke, smelling a strong odor of burned linen. She went to the kitchen and perceived on the floor a heap of some material that was burning. Without knowing what it was, she threw water on the fire, and soon discovered that the burning mass was the body of the young woman Foster. The stove and pipe were at the time red hot. Nothing has transpired to explain this awful accident, and the coroner's jury gave its verdict accordingly.—Minerve.

Murder on Board the Steamer "Lady Head."—Dalhousie, N. B., Oct. 28.—The steamship "Lady Head" from Quebec, arrived here at eight o'clock last night. The purser reports that while a short distance below Pabebiac, Canada East, yesterday a.m., two sailors who had been shipped at Quebec for the ship "Irvine," now landing at this port, began scuffling, when, one of them named Sullivan drew the knife out of the other's belt and stabbed him three times, killing him almost instantly. Sullivan was immediately arrested, and on arrival at Pabebiac was handed over to the authorities, the body of the murdered man was also put ashore at that place.

A Temper Brewing.—Mrs. Parker will give Evidence at the Coming Assizes.—We understand that Mrs. Joseph Parker, consort of the great redoubtable Joe Parker, the robber, who has so frequently upset the calculations of detectives and others in this city who have attempted his capture, arrived in town last evening, with the avowed intention of making an appearance at the coming Assizes, and unfolding developments that will cause many persons of respectable standing to shiver in their linen. We have before intimated that Madame Parker expressed her determination to carry out this design, to a gentleman from Hamilton who encountered the lady, some months ago, at a city in Illinois, and it is evident that she will be faithful to her word. As to the character of the developments to be made by the indignant "robberess," and the reliability to be attached to her statements, we shall learn in time; but from past experience, it might be well for our authorities to see that the line is clear between this and the bridge, or some person might be caught.—Hamilton Times.

The Schoolmaster Abroad.—Previous to a school meeting not ten miles from here, the following notice was posted on the door; "the inabitantance of this school section is perticklerly Requested all to attend on Wednesday the 9th inst to put a sop to this free school Bisness do you now that you are taxed two hundred and forty Dollars be Side your Common Scool tax and twenty pounds in hand Last year with the Government Grant and taxes Cannot Com Short of three hundard and Sixty Dollars."—Lindsay Post.

The Right of Search.—Probably no question is less understood between nations than the right of search, there is no general law laid down, and consequently they have to be governed by precedence which happened long ago; this is not the case with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Ancient history does not have to be traced to find out whom it has relieved from the tortuous pains of rheumatism, sudden colds sore throat, burns, &c. Sold by all Medicine Dealers at 25 cts per bottle.

If afflicted with Scrofulous, Chronic Disease, Syphilis, Ulcers, Fever, Sores, Skin Eruptions, White Swellings, Rickets, Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, St Vitus' Dance, King's Evil, Blotches, Pimples, Tetter, use Rahway's Renovating Resolvent, this remedy will cure you. Price $1 per bottle. Sold by Druggists.

Loss of the Human Voice.—By the measles people lose their voice, at times; by colds, the hearing and voice is often partially destroyed. Now, for a cold, cough, hoarseness, or sore throat, try a few of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers. Sold by all Medicine Dealers at 25 cents a box.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The undersigned having been restored to health in a few weeks by a very simple remedy after having suffered several years with a severe lung affection, and that dread disease Consumption—is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure.

To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, &c. The only object of the advertiser in sending the Prescription is to benefit the afflicted, and spread information which he conceives to be invaluable; and he hopes every sufferer will try his remedy, as it will cost them nothing, and may prove a blessing.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK FOR 1866.

The Fashion Magazine of the World.

LITERATURE, FINE ARTS, & FASHIONS. The most magnificent Steel Engravings, Double Fashion Plates, Wood engravings on every subject that can interest ladies, Patterns for knitting, Netting, Embroidery, Articles for the Toilet, for the Parlor, the Boudoir, and the Kitchen. Everything, in fact, to make a complete Lady's Book.

THE LADIES' FAVORITE FOR 36 YEARS. No Magazine has been able to compete with it. None attempt it.

GODEY'S RECEIPTS for every department of a household. These are alone worth the price of the book.

MODEL COTTAGES, (no other Magazine gives them), with diagrams.

DRAWING LESSONS for the Young.—Another speciality with Godey.

ORIGINAL MUSIC, worth $3 a year. Other Magazines publishes old worn-out music, but the subscribers to Godey get it before the music stores.

GARDENING FOR LADIES.—Another peculiarity with Godey.

Fashions from Messrs. A. T. Stewart & Co., of New York, the millionaire merchants, appear in Godey, the only Magazine that has been in Ladies' bonnets. We give more of them in a year than any other Magazine. In fact, the Lady's Book enables every lady to be her own bonnet maker.

MARION HARLAND,
Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemesis," and "Miriam,"

writes for Godey each month, and for no other magazine. A new novel by her will be published in 1866. We have also retained all our old and favorite contributors.

TERMS OF

Godey's Lady's Book for 1866.

(From which there can be no Deviation.)

The following are the terms of the Lady's Book for 1866:—

One copy, one year $2 00
Two copies, one year 3 50
Three copies, one year 7 50
Four copies, one year 10 00
Five copies, one year, and an extra copy to person getting up the club, making six copies 14 00
Eight copies, one year, and an extra copy to person getting up the club, making nine copies 21 00
Eleven copies, one year, and an extra copy to person getting up the club, making twelve copies 27 50

☞ A l additions to clubs at club rates.

☞ Godey's Lady's Book and Arthur's Home Magazine will be sent, each one year, on receipt of $4 50.

☞ We have no club with any other magazine or newspaper.

☞ The money must all be sent at one time for any of the clubs.

☞ Canada subscribers must send 24 cents additional for each subscriber.

Poetry.

A PRETTY FOOT.

There's magic in a pretty foot,
And well the ladies know it;
And she who has a pretty one
Is pretty sure to show it.
All times you too are martyred by
The merest little ankle,
That shoots an arrow through the eye,
Within the heart to rankle.

Of course you turn your gaze aside,
And all your blushes stifle,
But don't you know she's not aware
Your shirts are raised a trifle.
I should you think she might perchance
Have on a loosened gaiter,
Your fingers itch to play the part
Of honest ladies waiter.

To you tantalized till he is crazed,
Shark mad, with wild romancing,
That wire ing foot along his brain
A thousand waltzes dancing.
This while it merely lightly pats,
As thoughtless she may move it,
No maidest man would dare to dream
There is a leg above it.

But when it trips across the street,
Thro gh wind and mud and vapor,
Exposes accident you see
How beautiful the taper;
And as it steps upon the walk,
And the crowd to mingle,
Two english eyes look up and say,
"I wonder if he's single."

I would not have a lady think
I fancy her a schemer,
And beg her to remember that
The poet is a dreamer.
He sees what others do not see,
And seeks for hidden beauty,
No pretty face can lure him from
The path of moral duty.

Varieties.

A GOOD-NATURED MAGISTRATE.—A poor man made his appearance at the bar of Police Court, Gorbals, charged with being drunk and disorderly in the street, when, after hearing the presiding Bailie, who seems to have possessed more of the milk of human kindness than that of firmness and dignity, which are by some deemed essential for the magisterial office, ordered him to pay a fine of 15s. 'Fifteen shillings!' vociferated the man, with more points of admiration in his tone than we can spare room for. 'Fifteen shillings, Bailie. Ye're surely not in earnest. Blessye, when will I win 15s to give?' 'Well,' said the Bailie, yeilding, 'I'll make it half a guinea and not a farthing less!' 'Half a guinea, Bailie! if ye fine me half a guinea, what's to come o' my poor wife and weans for a month to come? We maun just starve, there's nae ither way o't,' said the offender in a most lugubrious tone—'we must starve or beg.' 'Well,' said the relenting Bailie, 'I'll make it 7s and 6d., and not a farthing less!' 'Seven and sixpence!' says the still unsatisfied offender. 'that's just the half o' my week's wages, and there's not a gram o' meal in my house, nor a bit o' coal to make it ready with, even though there were. Oh, Bailie dinck what a sum 7s. 6d. is to a working man!' 'Well, well,' says the good natured magistrate, 'I'll make it 5s and not a farthing less!' 'Weel weel, Bailie, I and Mary and the weans must submit,' said the knavish culprit affecting to weep, at the same time saying, as if to himself, yet so loud that the Bailie could hear him—'Blessed is he that wisely doth the poor man's case consider. The Bailie could not stand the silent appeal of tears, nor the apt quotation he had made. 'Well, well,' again says the Bailie, 'I'll make it half a crown and as sure as death, though ye were my ain brother I couldna make it less!—Kilmarnock Journal.

SIMON'S WIFE'S MOTHER.—A friend returned from New York tells us a pretty good story of an Illinoisian who was stopping at the same hotel. On Sunday, the Western man, being desirous of hearing several of the more famous pulpit orators at the metropolis, went in the morning to Dr. Chapin's church but heard a stranger preach from the text: "But Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever." In the afternoon he went to Beecher' Plymouth church, and heard the same discourse from the same preacher. Going in the evening to Dr. Osgood's church, he found the same clergyman and the same theme: "Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever." The next day the patient hearer of the threefold discourse was crossing to Brooklyn in a ferry boat when the alarm bell in the park agitated the air with its great shocks of sounds, and a man behind him inquired why the bell was tolling. Looking up, he saw the now familiar countenance of the preacher, and was prompt to reply: "I think Simon's wife's mother must be dead. I heard three times yesterday that she was sick of a fever."—Providence Journal.

OBEYING ORDERS.—A certain general of the United States army supposing his favourite horse dead, ordered an Irishman to go and skin him.

'What! is Silver tail dead!' asked Pat.

'What is that to you?' replied the officer, 'do as I bid you, and ask no questions.'

Pat went about his business and in an hour or two returned.

'Well Pat where have you been all this time?' asked the General.

'Skining the horse, yer honor.'

'Does it take nearly two hours to perform such an operation?'

'No yer honor, but then you see it tuck bout half an hour to catch him?'

'Catch him! fire and a furies, was he alive?'

'Yes, yer honor—and you know I could not skin him alive?'

'Skin him alive?—did you kill him?'

'To be sure I did! You know I must obey orders without asking any questions.'

EXCELLENCE OF SOWENS.—A German at present travelling in the Highlands, west of Callender, has made some very interesting discoveries—among others, that "sowens" is a very superior food. Having partaken of this, to him, delicious pudding, he inquired of the attendant how it was generally used—what class of people eat of it. When told by the attendant that sowens was food used mostly by servants, the surprise of the German was evidently great, for he rejoined, in the best English at hand, "if the case were his, that he would keep de sowens for his own self, and make de servants take your dam hard rugg at de beef."

HOPE.—Hope is the sweetest friend that ever kept a distressed friend's company; it beguiles the tediousness of the way—all the miseries of our pilgrimage. It tells the soul such sweet stories of the succeeding joys; what comforts there are in heaven; what joy, what triumphs, what marriage songs and hallelujahs there are in that country whither she is travelling, that she goes merrily away with her present burden.

One of the readiest replies that we ever heard was made by an Irishman. A gentleman travelling on horseback came upon an Irishman who was fencing in a most barren and desolate piece of land. "What are you fencing in that lot of land for, Pat?" said he; "a herd of cows would starve to death on the land." "And sure, your honor, wasn't I fencing it in to keep the poor crates out in it?"

The Great Original Painting

OF THE

BATTLE OF THE BOYNE!

By BEN. WEST, Pres. Royal Academy.

SPARKES, BOURNE & Co., would respectfully announce that they have now ready for delivery a splendidly got up Coloured Lithograph of this magnificent HISTORICAL PAINTING, representing the Battle at the moment of the death of the gallant DUKE SCHOMBERG; and which is published on the finest paper—size 22 × 28 inches.

This Picture—a faithful copy of the great Original—will be found incomparably superior to anything ever offered to the public either in this country or Great Britain It has been executed by the first Artists of the day, and no trouble or expense has been spared to make it worthy of the justly celebrated Painter, and the GREAT HISTORICAL FACT which it represents, and which ought never to be forgotten by those who now enjoy the CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY which this event, more than any other in our history, was the means of establishing and perpetuating.

In times like these, when the principles of our Forefathers are being assailed on every hand, it is especially needful for us to bear in mind from whence sprung our Constitutional form of Government; and nothing contributes more to aid us in keeping in remembrance those momentous passages in our history than faithful representations by great Masters. And certainly no Historical Subject has been more ably treated than the above event by this celebrated Painter.

In presenting this Picture to the Protestant Community, and especially to those who are more feelingly alive to the vast benefits conferred on us by the ever memorable events of 1690, the Publishers feel every confidence that their efforts will be fully appreciated, and that this Picture will find an honored place in every Protestant home in the British Provinces.

AMERICAN
Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering
SEWING MACHINE!
COMPANY,
627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLES made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produces a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c, &c, it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c. &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated wares is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old harp form of stringing' by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschelk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfield,	Wm Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Barili.
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry,	Charles Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical: in purity, volume, and continuity of tone: in vocal verisimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes Invented and patented by Mr S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN
SEWING MACHINES.
EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms. { 536 Broadway, New York, / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides: performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nansook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it alm st impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

But in a more especial manner do we elicit the pat onag. of

Merchant Tailors,	Corset Makers,
Coach Makers,	Gaiter Fitters,
Hoop Skirt Manufactures,	Shoe Binders,

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK

FOR 1866.

The Fashion Magazine of the World.

LITERATURE, FINE ARTS, & FASHIONS. The most magnificent Steel engravings—Double Fashion Plates. Wood engravings on every subject that can interest ladies. Crochet knitting, Netting, Embroidery, Articles for the Toilet, for the Parlor, the Boudoir, and the Kitchen. Everything, in fact, to make a complete Lady's Book.

THE LADIES' FAVORITE FOR 36 YEARS

No Magazine has been able to compete with it. None attempt it.

GODEY'S RECEIPTS

for every department of a household. These are alone worth the price of the book.

MODEL COTTAGES, (no other Magazine gives them), with diagrams.

DRAWING LESSONS for the Young.—Another speciality with Godey.

ORIGINAL MUSIC, worth $3 a year. Other Magazines publish old worn-out music; but the subscribers to Godey get it before the music stores.

GARDENING FOR LADIES.—Another peculiarity with Godey.

Fashions from Messrs. A. T. Stewart & Co., of New York, the millionaire merchants, appear in Godey, the only Magazine that has them.

Ladies' bonnets. We give more of them in a year than any other Magazine. In fact, the Lady's Book enables every lady to be her own bonnet maker.

MARION HARLAND,

Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemesis," and "Miriam,"

writes for Godey each month, and for no other magazine. A new novel by her will be published in 1866. We have also retained all our old and favorite contributors.

On, On, On, The Boys Came Marching!

OR THE PRISONER FREE.

[Sequel to "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp."]

Oh! the day it came at last,
When the glorious tramp was heard,
And the boys came marching fifty thousand strong,
And we grasped each others hands,
Tho' we uttered not a word,
As the booming of our cannon rolled along.

CHORUS.

On, on, on, the boys came marching,
Like a grand majestic sea,
And they dashed away the guard,
From the heavy iron door.
And we stood beneath the starry banner free.

Oh, the feeblest heart grew strong,
And the most despondent sure,
When we heard the thrilling sounds we loved so well,
For we knew that want and woe,
We no longer should endure,
When the hosts of freedom reached our prison cell.

Oh, the war is over now,
And we're safe at home again,
And the cause we starved and suffer'd for is won,
But we never can forget,
Mid our woe and mid our pain,
How our glorious Union boys came tramping on.

THE ORPHANS.

(From the Diary of a Detective Police Officer.)

Entering Worship Street from Shoreditch, nearly opposite the Eastern Counties Terminus, there is, or at least there was, five-and-twenty years ago, a yard or court about a hundred yards onward on the left hand side. I think it was called Bell and Dragon Court; but of this I am not quite sure. The place itself is distinctly visible to my mind's eye. On the right of the court, or yard were stables; on the left three small cottages, having green shutters and the green door.

In the parlor window of No 1 was a neatly written paper, fitted nicely to one of the panes, which announced that mangling was done there, also plain work. The same advertisement was, by the landlord's kindness, posted on the corner public house, with this addition. 'At Mrs. Mason's, No. 1, round the corner.'

My acquaintance with this singularly interesting family dwelling at 'No. 1, round the corner,' commenced in quite an accidental way. I was returning by coach from Enfield, to which picturesque village I had paid a professional visit to no useful result, when passing Shoreditch Church, I caught sight of the very man I wanted. To stop the coach and spring off the roof was the work of less than a minute; yet quick as I was, Jabez Martin was quicker, and before my feet touched the ground had doubled the distance between us, and was speeding away at a tremendous space. I followed shouting, 'Stop thief! Stop thief!' Several persons essayed to stop him, and though fiercely thrust aside (for he was a fellow of Herculean strength,) their efforts greatly impeded his progress, and I was coming up with him hand over hand when he ran full tilt against a girl as she turned out of Worship street into Shoreditch, knocking her down with great violence. The force of the concussion staggered Jabez Martin, and before he could recover himself he was my prisoner. Two officers came up and handing over Martin to their custody, I attended to the girl. A woman had raised her from the pavement, and was holding her up by sheer strength. The girl was stunned, and there was blood on her face. I bore her into a pastry cook's shop hard by, and ran off for Richards—Michael Richards, the apothecary, then living about twenty doors away. We were soon back again, and I was rejoiced by his assurance that the girl had sustained no serious injury. The blood was from her nose, and whilst the simple restoratives necessary in such a case were being administered I had an opportunity of closely observing her. Her years could scarcely be more than seventeen, and a more engaging face I have seldom seen. Her figure, though slight, was elegance itself; and spite of a poor, washed out cotton frock, coarse and patched shoes, and the rough abrasion caused by sedulous needlework upon the forefinger of her left hand, I felt, when she opened her sweet, soft eyes, and a faint smile and blush changefully lit up her countenance, that a 'gem of purest ray serene,' fresh from the dimmest mint of nature, was before me. The soft, sweet eyes were, nevertheless, swollen with weeping, and an air of inexpressible sadness clouded the natural sunshine of her face.

Mr. Richards knew her, and asked in a kindly tone if her mother was better.

A burst of tears was the reply, followed by a timid explanation, to the effect that she was on the way to his house when knocked down. It was necessary he should see her mother without delay. She was worse—much worse.

Mr. Richards said he would go at once. The girl Frances Mason, being sufficiently recovered to walk home, led the way; and I at a gesture from the apothecary, whom I knew very well, followed. Richards, as we walked along, intimated, in his brief, curt way, that my police officer experience might be needed by the Mason family. A fire had broken out in their dwelling in the dead of night, and in the endeavor to save her daughters Mrs. Mason had been so terribly burned, that not the slightest hope could be entertained of her recovery.

A fellow lodger with the Masons, said Richards, for whom at first sight I felt an instinctive dislike, and invincible repugnance. He is a working jeweller, and his name is Mark Lopes. I think it quite likely that you may have known him professionally.

He is a Jew.

An unmistakeable one. Hook-nose, dark gross eyes, flashy waistcoat, pinch-back chains pins, and rings complete. His age may be about thirty.

I know a Jew by sight, and something more of about that age, whose name is Lopes, or Lopez. He limps slightly and has a scar on his left cheek.

The very man! Hush! Here we are.

I followed Richards into the abode of desolation, soon to be that of death. The tenement had been gutted by fire. Every article of furniture had been destroyed, and Mrs. Mason was dying upon a mattress, lent by the landlord of the Bell and Dragon public-house.

On the floor, by their mother's side knelt her daughters, Frances and Rosamond, and close by them a minister of the Baptist persuasion. He was praying with closed eyes and upraised hands in a measured, monotonous tone, which strangely contrasted with the daughters' wild sobs and broken cries to God for help and mercy.

Unspeakable anxiety was expressed by the dying woman's face, which I was afterwards told had been once scarcely inferior in comeliness to her daughter's. Not anxiety for herself, for the sepulchral, tolling tones of the parson were not heeded by the mother, whose fluttering spirit was looking its last through swiftly darkening eyes upon her children, with an intensity of yearning solicitude, which only maternal love, stronger than the fear of death, could have inspired.

Her lips moved as she caught sight of Mr. Richards, and a feeble sobbing of her fingers which were playing with the coverlet, was sufficient sign that she wished to speak with him. He stepped gently towards her, and bent down his head. The tones were too feeble. He could not distinctly hear a word, and he said to me in a quick whisper.

I am a little deaf. Will you Mr. Waters, act for me?

Of course I readily complied. The white lips moved again, and I heard the words, Lopes—silver—watch.

This was all I could make out, and the meaning was obscure enough. Still, seeing that Mrs. Mason was going fast, I pressed her hand in token that she was comprehended. The response was a faint, pale smile, which, as her gaze turned again upon her children, brightened into a transient sunlight, fading swiftly into the cold, calm pallor of death.

I turned to leave, for my presence there, if not intrusive, could be of no service, and as I did so caught a glimpse of Mark Lopes, who, with the charred, partly opened door in his hand, was gazing with unquiet eyes upon the scene within. A start of surprise showed that he had also recognized me, and the bushy haired head and dingy saffron face vanished in a twinkling. I was down stairs nearly as soon as he, and was up with him before he could open the street door. His perspiring hand I noticed slipped round, instead of turning the latch knob.

I wish to speak with you Mr. Mark Lopes.

With me—me! What about? What for?

Well, I want information about the origin of the fire here two nights ago; and as I know you have had much experience in fires, I shall be glad of any hint you may be able to give me upon the case.

Hat do you mean by that? exclaimed Lopes, with a sort of indecisive fierceness. Do you dare insinuate—that—that——

Dare insinuate what? Out with it, Mr. Mark Lopes. What is it that a man of your clear conscience could imagine I meant to insinuate?

He did not answer, and turned savagely away. I was not, however, disposed to part with him; and as we were by then close to the Bell and Dragon, I said, in a half-civil, half-menacing tone.

Come, come, Mr. Mark Lopes, I must and will know all about this fire. You were a lodger in the house, and, I have no doubt, up and doing as soon, if not sooner, than any other inmate. We will just step in here, and over a friendly glass you will tell me all about it.

The fellow hesitated, but having mentally reckoned up the risks and advantages of telling his own story, or of peremptorily refusing to do so, accepted my invitation.

My knowledge of Mark Lopes, I must here premise, was but slight and incidental. He had carried on business in Bermondsey, and twice a fire broke out in his premises, consuming his amply insured stock in trade. The first time he was paid the amount claimed without demur. On the second occasion a rigid investigation took place, which led to the apprehension of Mark Lopes upon a charge of arson. The evidence proved technically insufficient to establish his guilt, and he brought an action against the Sun Office, which resulted in a verdict for the defendants. I had since lost sight of him.

The particulars I contrived to elict from Mark Lopes, relative to the Mason family, and the catastrophe that had befallen them, were mainly these: Mrs. Mason was before marriage a Miss Curzon, the daughter of a gentleman by birth and position, but of scanty means. About a year after his death Frances Curzon married Mason, then a jeweller and silversmith in prosperous business at the West End of London. For about twelve years after the union, Mason continued to prosper, or appeared to do so. Then disasters came upon him, and he ultimately broke down, not in business only, but in character; sank lower and lower in the gulf of poverty and slimy self-abasement till he died in utterly desperate circumstances, and by his own hand.

Lopes had worked for him, and knew that his family—his sister especially, who had married exceedingly well herself—never forgave her brother for marrying a 'pretty pauper.' Whether Mrs. Mason, after her husband's death, had applied to her rich sister-in-law for help he (Lopes) did not know—in fact, he did not know, or if he had ever known, had forgotten that lady's name; but if she had applied, help was refused, and the widow and her daughters had no means left of independent life but the poorly paid labor of her own hands. Mrs. Mason finally had herself and children, so as to speak from those with whom she had associated in better days, in the cheap obscurity of Bell and Dragon Court. The fire had broken out between one and two in the morning—how caused no one could make out. The two girls had been really in no danger, as they slept in the front room on the ground floor, and could easily, at the first alarm, have got out of the window into the court. In fact, they had done so, when Mrs. Mason, who slept in the front room upstairs, awakened by the furious knocking at the street door and the shouts of people in the court, rushed in frenzied terror down the flaming stairs in her night dress to the rescue, as she supposed, of her children.

The poor lady was delirious till she died, added Mark Lopes, and talked terrible nonsense.

You occupied the back room on the upper floor, and were, I suppose, in bed and asleep when the fire broke out?

No; I was kept awake by the toothache, and at the first alarm hurried on my clothes, rushed down stairs, and thundered at the girl's door. They quickly awoke, huddled on their things, opened the door, and I helped them through the window.

Why not out by the street door?

Because the passage was in flames, and their thin dresses would have been ablaze in a moment. The fire broke out in the back room on the ground floor.

The girls were in safety, then, when the mother reached their sleeping room.

Yes; and I was going to follow through the window when Mrs. Mason rushed in all afire.

Is your own loss considerable?

No; not at all so. It has been low water with me for a long time. The Masons have lost all, as nothing was insured; not much in amount, added Lopes; in fact nothing to speak of—nothing of any value.

I should suppose so; a family circumstance as they were could have nothing of much value in their possession. Well, I am obliged to you, Mr. Lopes, for your information, scanty as it is.

This I said in a tone and manner intended to persuade him that any vague suspicion which his antecedents might have suggested had been dismissed from my mind; and I was pleased to observe that I had succeeded in conveying that impression.

The Worship Street Police Office was not far off, and as, on leaving the public house, I ordered an additional glass of brandy and water to be taken to the gentleman in the parlor, I was pretty confident that I should be able to set some one personally unknown to him upon his track before he left.

I was to a certain extent disappointed. The only men I would have trusted were known to Lopes, and I was fain to engage the services of a young man living in Chiswell Street, whose familiar cognomen was 'Humpy Jim.' He was the sharp-witted hunchback who at that period sometimes attended the weekly horse and second-hand carriage sales at the repository in Barbican. I should not, perhaps, have thought of, though I had twice before employed him, had I not, in traversing Finsbury Square, found him in hot dispute with a much bigger youngster than himself for the privileges and profits of a crossing there. Humpy Jim—his real name was James Cotterell—was evidently out of luck just then, and as the business in hand required to be done upon economical principles, it struck me that he was just the man, or boy, his age not being more, I should think, than nineteen at most. He jumped at my proposal—comprehended what was required with wonderful readiness. We got back to the Bell and Dragon before the last tumbler of grog had been imbibed by Lopes, and I went my way with the full conviction that I should be informed of all the Jew's doings, and many of his sayings too, up to such time as the sleuth hound I had placed upon the scent should be called off.

It may be asked what, except the unintelligible words gasped forth by the dying mother, could induce me to suspect Mr. Mark Lopes of felony in the case of the Mason family. Well, the motive for my conduct is to be found in the, at first view, inconsequent conversation between me and Lopes already given.

Who will be Mayor Next Year?

We have good authority for stating that the present one, Mr. Scott, will not again accept the honors. It would therefore be wisdom to think the matter over, and choose a good man. During Mr. Scott's short term of office, we have no cause for complaint. He, it is true, had not all the time to spare the office required. But what he did do, he did impartially as far as we know. In choosing a new Mayor, let us hope that the citizens will select one that will impartially and carefully administer the laws of the land, and enforce the by-laws of the town. Let us have one in whom we can place confidence in every matter, if such a man can be obtained, so that we may with some hope of realization, expect that all town matters will be justly and duly attended to. Matters of grave importance are continually coming before the council, requiring the attention of the Mayor, and it is therefore right to try to have one in that office that will be both able and willing to deal with every matter. We have brough' the matter before the people a week or two early, that there may be time to think before doing. It is best to think twice before acting once—and what is hurriedly done is rarely well done.

Improvement of the Navigation of the Otonabee.

Geo. Stewart, Esq., C. E. and P. L. S., has just returned from making surveys of the Otonabee, from Lakefield to head of Stoney Lake, for the purpose of improving the navigation of the river, and also the chain of small lakes extending into the Township of Methuen, as far as the eastern extremity of South Lake.

The intention, we are informed, is to continue the railway communications from Port Hope to Lakefield, then to open up water communication to the mineral and timber regions of the northern part of this county.

At present the work is being pursued by the Lessees of the P. H. L. and B. Railway Co., but it may yet come before Government.

As to the practicability of the scheme, we are informed that the river can be improved so as to admit a class of vessels similar to those on the back lakes; and this can be done at very moderate cost. The first great obstacle will be at Young's dam. A lock will have to be built at this place; but the rise there, being only five feet, presents no great obstacle after all. The navigation from this point to the head of Stoney Lake, will require no improvement. The chain of lakes eastward from Stoney Lake will require some lockage, but the cost of the entire affair will be very trifling, compared with the great benefit the country would derive from opening up its mineral and other treasures. Mr. Stewart is at present engaged in making out his plans and reports; when compiled, we hope to be able to give more extended information of the costs and probable success of the undertaking.

FENIANISM IN IRELAND.

From an Irish paper we learn that as the Fenian conspiracy becomes developed, there are more abundant reasons to convince that great and terrible crimes were in contemplation. Nothing less than a general rising of the masses was entertained, and measures were being adopted to carry those designs into effect. The same paper says that a net-work of treason had overspread the whole land. The distinguishing feature of the scheme was essentially low, sordid, corrupt—based not on the principles of the patriot, but of the bandit. The object proposed was to seize the property of the country, and exterminate every one who refused to join ranks by the "cold steel" of the pike. The Fermanagh Reporter says:—When he (the crown evidence) comes to refer to the Roman Catholic prelates and clergy, we must confess that we are surprised. He has deposed that one of the first victims to be sacrificed to the spirit of Fenianism was to be the Roman Catholic Bishop, who was to be tarred and burned; and those priests who concurred with him were to undergo the same fate. If these things be true—and there must be some grounds for them—the Fenian brotherhood are becoming satanical, as these things fully show. What is coming when they are meditating the murder of their priests. The authorities are treating them roughly, which will bring many of them to a better state of mind, it is to be hoped.

Lord Palmerston's Funeral.

By the Cuba we learn that the great Briton, Palmerston, was buried at Westminster Abbey on the 27th. The Queen and Cabinet were present, and the Parliament and diplomatic bodies were largely represented. Large crowds thronged the streets through which the funeral procession passed. Business was suspended in most parts of the country. The Empress of France has addressed a private letter of condolence to Lady Palmerston.

Cholera.

A few cases of cholera have appeared in Brooklin, New-York. These are principally in the filthy parts of the city. It does not appear to spread fast. Let us hope that it may be arrested. Cleanliness and good fresh air is however the best preventative.

Mr. Robert Goodfellow, will receive our thanks for some New Zealand papers. Also Mr. W. Wood, and Mr. W. Montgomery, for some Irish papers of a late date.

TEMPERANCE.

The meeting on Monday evening was very thinly attended; but for this there were good reasons: In the Wesleyan Methodist Church there was a meeting which detained many from being present; also, at the Bible Christian Church there was a jubilee meeting, which, no doubt, detained many. Mr. Campbell, the agent of the Alliance, however, set before those present the claims of the Alliance, and its object, and presented the constitution, and other instructions for forming a branch here. But for want of all the desired information on the subject, also the want of due consideration, hindered some of those present from at once forming a Branch here. Rev. Mr. Roger, however, thought it would be wisdom to appoint a committee to report on the constitution, &c., and to empower that committee to call a meeting at some convenient season. It was therefore proposed that Mr. Crawford, the chairman of the meeting, Rev. Mr. Roger, Mr. Kingan, Col. Haultain, and Messrs. W. Glover, Bisbee, Stratton and Rutherford, be a committee to report, with power to add to their number. After the meeting was dismissed, the committee met, and after appointing Mr. Stratton Secretary, added the following names to the list: Mr. Dunnett, Rev. Messrs. Gilmour, Beck, Brock, Burnham, and Messrs. Sweeting, Pentland, Wm. Mason, Jos. Ford, Wm. Johnston, Thomas Donnelly, T. M. Fairbairn, Mr. Edwards, Geo. A. Cox, and John Robertson,—Mr. Crawford to be convener of committee. A sub-committee was then formed, consisting of Messrs. Kingan, Col. Haultain, Rutherford and Glover, to consider the constitution and report at first meeting of general committee. The Rev. Mr. Roger, and Captain Kennedy, were requested to wait on the different members of the general committee who were not present, and endeavour to obtain their co-operation. The committee to consider the constitution will meet in Col. Haultain's office, on Friday evening, to perform their duty.

The Alliance and its object are something not yet brought before the people of this town in the same way, and perhaps it would be well to sift the matter fully. The agent, Mr. Campbell, has called on a good many individuals, and at least got some material aid from them in the way of money. We trust that where there treasure is, there will their heart be also; and that the movement will receive that amount of consideration from them that a matter affecting the whole community should do; and if, after deliberation, it is thought to be wanting, then give it up, and look for something better. We trust that the array of reverend gentlemen's names that the agent procured will give new energy to the temperance question; and if the laws already enacted are found unequal to the work of suppression, the wisdom of Peterborough may be able to suggest something that will prove equal to it.

It is due to Mr. Campbell, who has been here from the Alliance, to say that letters were read at the meeting, from parties in Montreal, acknowledging Mr. Campbell as agent, and speaking in favorable terms concerning him.

New Colonization Scheme.

Lately we have been visited by some intelligent and wealthy Germans, who have been some time in the United States, but desire a country and laws more congenial to them, and where taxes are not so high as under the Stars and Stripes. From what could be learned from them, they desire to commence a settlement in Canada, and to settle it entirely with Germans. They propose bringing about fifty well to do farmers, who could bring means of support for at least two years, and thus make a beginning.—They also think that nothing less than three Townships would be required for the colony. Such a scheme as this would immediately meet the warmest support from all parties; and a free grant of land to all actual settlers could, no doubt, be obtained.—These gentlemen are expected to return in a short time, and more fully consider the matter. If they do, let us hope that a liberal policy will be pursued toward them, and that no obstacle will be allowed to remain in the way of the proposed settlement.

Mend Your Ways.

The Gravel Road is in need of repairs at present. Lately we had the pleasure (?) of a drive along it, and found it in many places getting into a bad state. You would imagine that the Company were after a great gala day. Here and there you will find fence-rails stuck as if for flag poles, but on closer observation you see that they are to warn you of holes in the way.

The Dailies.

For a week past we have been a little annoyed through the want of connection at Port Hope. It would be a boon conferred on this town if some arrangements could be made to ensure the mails. We feel satisfied that if the matter was brought under the notice of Mr. Fowler, that if it be possible arrangements would be made to ensure the daily mail with regularity.

Fire in Omemee.

On Thursday evening, the stables of Mr. Mitchell, of Omemee, were consumed by fire. The flames were plainly visible here. The origin of the fire we have not yet learned; but we regret to state that Mr. Mitchell lost considerable stuff, and two horses.

In to-day's issue, Dr. Brown offers for sale his highly improved property. The house and out buildings are nearly new, substantial, and arranged with design to comfort. The grounds are tastefully arranged. It is situated in a most delightful position, and would be a very comfortable and commodious residence for a respectable family requiring such a place. The terms are reasonable. See advertisement.

A correspondent writes us, that Mr. Hunter, of Verulam, has found oil on his farm while sinking a well. May it prove true; "ile" is up here, just now. If we had a flowing well, it might get cheaper. Our correspondent says Mr. Hunter will give a liberal chance to persons desirous of engaging in oil speculation. The place is Lot 6, 6th Concession.

There is certainly some force in the remark of the Globe's correspondent "that it is not seemly for the Prince of Wales, to be three times at the theatre while the premier lies unburied." Could he not respect the dead? What a noble example to set! It nearly equals his dancing example while in Canada.

R. Patterson announces good boots and shoes, at very cheap rates, and of best qualities. Give him a trial.

To those who are desirous of obtaining farm property in Harvey, the letter of our very worthy Representative, Col. Haultain, comes very opportunely. Parties will now know to whom to apply.

A Painful and we fear Fatal Act.—Information reached town yesterday that Mr. James Hague, who is well known here, rashly shot himself with a pistol, on Tuesday night last, at his residence, Cobourg. We trust the report may prove false; yet we fear it is too true. Last accounts say he is still alive. How it happened is not known, but it is supposed to be accidental. The shot passed within an inch of his heart.

Volunteers Frontward Again.

It is reported that Volunteers are about to be sent to the front again; this time to prevent raids from the land of Uncle Sam. It is not likely to amount to much. There is too much talk with Fenians to ever do much. Those that say much seldom do much. The American press represent the Canadians as in a panic with fear. Nothing can be farther from the truth. Never did Canadians sleep more soundly, or more securely, than at present. The late good prices have enabled Canadians to pay their debts; and with them "out of debt, out of danger." And what have they to fear? Simply nothing yet—except O. R. Gowan's ghost; his imaginary Fenians are far away.

Literary Club.

This club is now into working order: already they have had two good meetings: the house reasonably well filled in each case. The readings the first night, by Mr. Crerar, were good, and were worthy a full house. The second meeting was a debate conducted by W. H. Scott and Mr. Crerar. This was the best debate we have yet heard in connection with the club—but we have heard only a few. Both the speeches of the two leaders were clever, forcible and sensible; showing that more than talk was the order. The other speakers also kept close to the subject, and kept from wandering to the ends of the earth as is too common in debates. This evening there will be another reading by a member of the club. The ladies have hitherto patronized the club by their presence, this has a refining effect, and this it is hoped will continue. Let all young aspirants come forward now; the opportunity is a good one; let it not be despised.

But what about a library? There was a library in the Mechanics' Institute. Where is it now? Can nothing be done to obtain its use for the club? Who will call a meeting and set the ball rolling? We think that the President of the Mechanics' Institute should do it. We must acquaint ourselves with this subject, and thus find where the difficulty lies. In the mean time, will the President of the Institution, if in town, call a meeting for the purpose of settling the library question?

BOOK NOTICES.

London Society, for this month, has been received, and appears to be equal to any of its predecessors. The contents of the present number are: Green mantle, a tale of Manchester: A Tale of old Hallow Eve: Two Loves and a Life: A Breakfast Picnic in India; The Souveners of a Man of Fashion; Muscular Society. Reflections by a Fat Man; Maiden Meditation; Across the Solent; Lotty's Experiences—how she tried to keep house on 200 a year; In the Bush with the Mounted Police; The Painter and his Lady; Pretty Women and Witty Women of the time of Horace Walpole; To Gertude; The Princes of England; Tryste in the Snow; Hanging about Charles street; A Recruiting Sketch; The Modern Journey; Waiting for the Dentist. This and all the periodicals can be obtained at W. C. Chewett's, King Street, Toronto, or at the Examiner Book Store, Peterborough.

The Churchman's Family Magazine.—This popular Magazines contains several interesting articles in this number. Biblical Criticism will be read by many with interest; Brawls in Churchyards is also an instructive account of things that were done in ancient times. A popular History of the English Bible will be found well worth perusal. This Magazine can also be obtained at W. C. Chewett's, Toronto, or Graham & Stratton's, Peterborough.

Sunday at Home.—Alex. Strahan & Co., 50 St. Peter st., Montreal, has favoured us with a copy of this periodical. It is enough to ensure its popularity to say that it is edited by D. Guthrie. The whole matter is instructive and moral. Every article in this number appears to be well chosen. All the periodicals can be obtained from Alex. Strahan & Co., Montreal, or at the Examiner Book Store, Peterborough.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, Nov. 13th, 1865.

The Council met on Monday evening last. Present—Messrs. Burnham, McNaughton, Chamberlen, Toole, Chambers, Stevenson, Leonard and Ormond.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The Clerk informed the Council that the Mayor was unwell.

On motion of Mr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Toole, Mr. Chamberlen took the chair.

Petitions were read from Edward Fry, Elizabeth Howe, Mary Jenkins, Sarah Brown and John Kennedy, asking for a remission of their taxes for the present year.

Also from Graham & Stratton and others, praying for new crossings at the junction of George and Simcoe Streets.

The petitions of Edward Fry and John Kennedy were referred to the Committee on Finance and Assessment; that of Graham & Stratton and others to the Committee on Streets and Bridges.

A Report from the Committee on Finance and Assessment was submitted, received and adopted, recommending the payment of the following accounts:—John Reid, surveying, $4; R. D. Rogers, half of planking bridge, $75 50.

The following accounts were referred to the Finance Committee:—Edwin Poole, for coffins, $18 20; John English, work, $8 50; Men on streets, $23; Geo. Stethem & Co., nails, $7 59; R. Howe, work, $6; Whyte, Hamilten & Co., for engine, $20 46; J. & T. Douglas, work on street, $2 75.

Moved by Mr. Burnham, and seconded by Mr. Chamberlen,—That By-law No. —— entitled "A By-law to authorise the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company, and their lessees, to construct their Railway on and across certain lands and streets in the Town of Peterborough, be now read a first time.

Carried on the following division:—Yeas, Messrs. Burnham, Ormond, Stevenson and Chambers. Nays, Messrs. McNaughton, Toole and Leonard.

Moved by Mr. Toole, and seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That the Taxes of Mrs. Kelly, Mrs. Howe, Mrs. Wm. Hall, and J. Cashman, for the present year, be remitted.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Burnham, the Council adjourned until Friday night, at half past seven o'clock.

AN ESSAY,

By Mr. John Robertson, delivered before the I. O. of G. T., Peterborough, in their Lodge Room, on the occasion of a Social Tea lately held there.

In my rambles I often meet with sights very distressing, painful both to sight and mind. It frequently happens that I meet one pale and haggard, leaning on his staff. It brings to mind his once happy home, where his little ones nestled about him; now he has no home—age and infirmity, brought on by dissipation, leave a complete wreck. Once his home was the home of the preacher—his door was ever open to them—but, while we were singing Wesley's Hymns in one room, the fire-water was sold in another. This trade carries along with it misery and woe; for God hath said "Cursed is every one that putteth the bottle unto his neighbour's lip." He was often told that he trod on the very brink—yea, on the threshold of the grave. he was often warned by the messengers of God that he was sowing desolation, and that his accursed trade would bring ruin on the whole families which dwelt around him. He would only laugh at your counsel, and turn your advice into scorn. But is the cup of wrath not yet full? No! that cup must receive the last drop of indignation, before the inebriate goes hence to receive his final doom, where many of our neighbours, our townsfolk, some of our very dearest friends, are either going or have gone, to fill the drunkard's grave. Our ablest speakers say that there is not a home in Canada but hath its skeleton. The husband is left to mourn the loss of his wife. The wife is often left to struggle with a cold and pitiless world, often she is left with three or perhaps five orphans, and no no one to pity her. The only sound that greets here ear is "She brought it all on herself," and perchance because she would not leave him who was dearer to her than life itself, she is forced from the door of her father to seek a miserable and beggarly existence. How often do we see our very best men—mechanics of the first class, merchants and lawyers, and, I am sorry to say, gentlemen who bear the title of Reverend staggering in our public streets. But it is with pleasure that I may add that it is some years since we looked on that painful sight May we never see the like again! It is my firm belief that the only remedy for this growing evil is the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The Revs. Dr. Ormiston, Dr Guthrie, and every other divine that preaches the Cross of Christ and Him crucified, are aware that the monster is amongst us, and leading away to his bloody den thousands of our fellow beings, to offer them up as a sacrifice to Bacchus, the God of Wine. Will some of these champions take up the sword of the Spirit, and, for pity's sake, for God's sake, for Christ's sake, for humanity's sake, rouse themselves, gird on their armour, and lead on the attack—not against the victim, but against the vice. This vice is in all classes of society. Christianity, with its arguments of love and self denial, should be the first and bravest in the fight. The Gospel of Jesus Christ hath raised whole nations from the lowest barbarism, cannibalism, and vices of all kinds. In our fatherland, the Cross subdued what the legions of the Roman could not. In this the land of our adoption, where the savage, the bear, and the wolf, roamed at large; now, instead of the war Chiefs sitting in council around their fires, there is a convention summoning the Sabbath School Teachers that they may enlarge their borders and increase their energies, that they may the more efficaciously attain the object of teaching the young the path of peace, so when they are old they will not depart from it. This land, as well as the land of our birth, is flooded with whiskey and rum Intoxicating liquors are the prime cause of crime. Booth, the assassin, drank a glass of brandy, then took his stand to do a deed that made the whole world stand aghast, and for which he suffered death. I might lay before you thousands of crimes—crimes of the most appalling nature. I shall only mention one to show that when the appetiee is once formed, as man's deadly foe, it seems almost impossible for man to control it; but with God nothing is impossible. I copy this from the Rev. Thomas Guthrie, D. D., in his own words, in his little book "The City: its Sins and Sorrows."

Look there! in that corpse you see the cold dead body of one of best and goodliest mothers it was ever our privilege to know. She had a son; he was the stay of her widowhood—so kind, so affectionate so loving. Some are taken away from the evils to come, laid in the lap of the mother earth, safe beneath the grave's green sod; they hear not, they heed not the storm that rages above. Such was not her happy future. She lived to see that son a disgrace, and all the promises of youth blighted and gone He was drawn into habits of intemperance; on he sank; he sinned, he plodded on, his mysterious are the ways of Providence? She did not live to see him changed; and with such thorns in her pillow, such daggers planted by a kind hand in her heart, she could not live. She sank under those griefs—died of a broken heart. We told him so. With bitter, burning tears he owned it; charging himself with his mother's death—confessing himself a mother's murderer. Crushed with sorrow, and all alone, beside that cold, dead, unreproaching mother, he knelt down and wept out his terrible remorse. After a while he rose. Unfortunately—how unfortunate, that a spirit bottle should have been left there—his eyes fell upon the old tempter. You have seen the iron approach the magnet—call it a spell—call it fascination—call it any thing bad or demoniacal—but, as the iron is drawn to the serpent, or as a fluttering bird, fascinated by the burning eye and glittering skin of the serpent, walks into its expanded jaws, so was he drawn to that liquor bottle. Wondring at his delay, they entered the room; and now the bed holds two bodies—a dead mother and a dead drunk son. What a sight! What a humbling, horrid spectacle! And what change when night drew her peaceful curtain around the same son and mother—he a babe sleeping, angel-like, within her loving arms. How is the gold become dim, the most pure gold chang d?

There is not the least shadow of doubt but this young man was once a temperate man, and gave bright prospects of being an honour to society and great comfort to his widowed mother. Did he fall at once? Oh, no! He, like all others, fell step by step, from on degree of degredation to another, from the brilliant saloon to the lowest hovel. As one small bit of leaven, leavens the whole lump, so doth one glass lead on to another, until they are drawn into the habit and become confirmed degraded and miserable human beings. But a few years ago, he was the joy of his mother; the brightest prospects shone before him; now they are all gone. See him now—a miserable, degraded outcast! Let them who say that it is the abuse—not the use—of liquor that ruins man, take heed least by little and little, they are led on until they are confirmed drunkards. How many of our townsmen have fallen victims to this system of moderation. Men who stood high in society only a few years ago, now where are they? The place that knew them then, knows them now no more forever. When we look at the magnificent gin palace, with all its decorations and allurements, its gilded cornice, the marble counters, large and magnificent mirrors, and compare them with the miserable, wretched, squalid customers, it would make our hearts sick; then to see the thousands of men, women and children going in and out of these dens of sin and iniquity, leaving their last pence for a glass of drugs to finish their miserable existence. Shall we pass these whiskey groceries with their partitions of empty soap-boxes and tea-chests, plastered over with hand-bills, such as "Extensive Sales of Household Furniture," "Farms to Let or Sell," &c., &c.,—the very fruits of their disastrous traffic. These notices might be a warning to all and every one that the liquor traffic is a social and moral nuisance. The moderate drinker and the unprincipled liquor vendor may hold on to their delusions, and with cold indifference look on some of our noblest youths gliding down this gentle and soul-raining stream of moderation. Much had been done, and much more has to be done, by every one that hath put on the armour of Lord and Master. It is word hath said that no drunkard can enter the Kingdom of Heaven; they must be forever shut out of that city where there is no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it, for the glory of God doth light it, and the Lamb is the light thereof; and there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abominations or maketh a lie.

Oh, touch not, taste not, handle not,
The tempter's poisoned bowl;
'Tis drugged with all the damning crimes,
That ever cursed the soul.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

Sir,—I have been informed that the lands in Harvey fit for settlement are now for sale. Application must be made to Mr. Graham, Crown Land agent, Bobcaygeon. I believe many are anxious to have this information.

Faithfully yours,
FRED. W. HAULTAIN.

B. A. O. GOOD TEMPLARS.

ANNUAL MEETING OF GRAND LODGE IN STRATFORD.

On Tuesday afternoon the Seventh Annual Session of the Grand Lodge of the British American Order of Good Templars was begun in the Odd Fellows' Hall, Stratford; Grand Worthy Chief Templar, Dr. N. Hopkins, J. P., presiding; Mr. James Gilleau, Grand Worthy Secretary; Mr. Hugh Campbell, Grand Worthy Treasurer; and the various other officers of G. Lodge being present. The number of representatives in attendance is large, amounting to over a hundred, including delegates from all parts of British North America, a gentleman attending even from Halifax, Nova Scotia; and much interest is evinced in the proceedings. The great amount of business entailed by the increased membership renders it probable that the session will continue to the close of the week. The Order, as shown by the Secretary's books, is in a most satisfactory position, there being no less than 34 new lodges opened during the year, while the membership has increased by nearly 600. The financial statements exhibits a large increase in the revenue, a fact of itself convincing as to the health and prosperity of the Order.

The session of Tuesday was mainly occupied in examining the credentials of members the evening meeting being also devoted to preliminary business. A resolution favoring the abolishing of degrees in the Order—a matter on which many varieties of opinion are entertained by Good Templars—was introduced by Bro. D. M. Cameron, but lost by a small majority, after an interesting discussion.

On Wednesday only one session was held, in order to afford committees an opportunity to report. At this meeting, an important communication from a new Order of temperance, styled the British Order, was submitted asking for terms of compromise by which the two may become united. The parties composing this Order are a branch of the original Good Templars, who, assuming a number of grievances, seceded; but to further the one common object, are willing to reunite. The lodge, willing to show a fraternity of feeling, appointed a committe to confer with them.

The Lodge met at 9 a. m., yesterday.—After the passing of various resolutions, a long and somewhat spirited discussion on business of rather a private nature occupied the forenoon session. At half-past 1, p. m., business was resumed. The executive committee's report for the past year was brought forward and taken up clause by clause, and after a short debate on some of the clauses, the report was adopted.

PUBLIC TEMPERANCE MEETING.

An open meeting was held in the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening, under the presidency of the Mayor. The Hall was tolerably well filled. The proceeding were opened with prayer by Rev. J. Durrant. We had prepared an extended report of the eloquent and fervid appeals of Rev. J. R. Gundy, G. W.C., Rev. James Scott, of Waterdown, Rev. Mr. Christopherson, of Stratford, and Mr. John Moffat, the gifted temperance orator, of London, but regret that the demand on our space is such as to crowd it out. The proceedings closed with the usual votes of thanks. The Misses Kennedy, of Peterboro', presided in turn at the harmonium, and sang together with taste and feeling several suitable pieces of music.—Stratford Beacon.

A friend has forwarded us the following list of officers:—

Mr. George Creggon, Kingston, G. W. C.
Mrs. A. Buttery, London, G. W. V.
J. H. Flagg, Esq., Mitchell, G. W. S.
Captain Kennedy Peterboro, G. W. T.
Rev. James Wanless, Verna, G. W. Chap.
D. Shoff, Esq., McGillvory, G. W. C'r.

Swell Convicts.—The three convicts, Schram, Claypole, and Kerr, passed through Stratford on Saturday, on their way to the Penitentiary. They were dressed in the most dashy style, with white hats, and apart from the ball and chain, appeared perfectly at their ease. They will no doubt return wiser and better men. When near St. Marys Station, the prisoner Claypole made a desperate attempt to regain his liberty by jumping from the cars and taking to the woods. The train was immediately stopped and three men started in pursuit, but only succeeded in recapturing the fugitive after a hard chase, the train being delayed a full hour in consequence of the occurrence. It appears that Schram and Kerr were handcuffed and shackled together, while Claypole was simply handcuffed alone.

Cobourg and Peterboro' Railway.—We are sure our readers will be pleased to learn that very satisfactory progress is making in connection with our railway matters. We had expected before this that the Town Council would have passed a by-law for the issue of bonds as provided for by the Act passed at the last session of Parliament. Various causes, however, have occasioned delay, but we believe it will be passed at a special meeting of the Council to be held to-morrow evening. Further steps to be taken depend upon the issue of the bonds, which of course will be a basis. When we have given this earnest of our determination to go on with this enterprise, we have no doubt the capital necessary will be speedily forthcoming and the trade of Peterboro as well as the Marmora region secured.—Cobourg Star.

Executive Council.—The Executive Council met lately, and adjourned immediately, until one o'clock in the afternoon, in order to wait for the Hon. Mr. Cartier, who was absent from the city. At the appointed time, the ministers met again, and the sitting was prolonged until four o'clock. We believe that four questions formed the theme of the discussions in the cabinet:—The renewal of the Reciprocity Treaty; the nomination of a Collector for the Port of Montreal; the re installation of Judge Coursol; and the movements of the Fenians.—The Council adjourned without coming to any decision. A new meeting is to take place this morning. Sir Narcisse Belleau, and the Hon. Solicitor Gen. Langevin arrived last night, and will be present at this morning's meeting. All the ministers are to take part.—Minerve of the 8th inst.

Closing the Bank of Upper Canada in London.—The Free Press announces the proximate closing of an old Bank in London, being the Bank of Upper Canada. Yesterday, the manager of the branch of that institution there notified the sister banks that early in the coming spring the bank will be closed, and that, meanwhile, no exchange will take place as heretofore. In other words, the business to be carried on will be simply that of proceeding with the winding up—a process which has for some time been going on.

THE BALL ROLLING.

At a meeting held in Dundas, Mr. Robertson read a telegram, which he said he had received from the Hon. John A. Macdonald. The telegram was an answer to the query as to whether a compact had been entered into to the effect that constituencies should remain in statu quo during the reign of the Coalition, and was couched in the following words:

"No such agreement was made. Run your Warden at all hazards, and, if you like, tell them he is my candidate.

"John A. Macdonald."

We have no objection to make to Mr. McDonald's statement that no such agreement was entered into. If it was ever agreed to, it was a foolish agreement, and one that no independent constituency would submit to. But we have a right to object to Mr. John A. Macdonald telling the Conservatives to run Mr. Brown at all hazards, and volunteering the information that the electors might be told that Mr. Brown was his (Macdonald's) candidate. It seems then from this that the Hon. Mr. Macdonald is very anxious that there should be in the House as Representative from North Westworth a man who may be looked upon as his candidate. Why? Why does he thus do his best to introduce dissention and create political strife? Why does he call on Conservatives to engage in a party contest and rally round his candidate, Mr. Brown? Why does he thus appear as a partizan when his position as a member of a Coalition Government demands at the very least, that he should be neutral? We do not think that he will succeed in his attempt to corrupt the constituency, but at the same time he thinks it right to place it on the record that the leader of Upper Canada Conservative party is seeking not for Coalition but for party support.—Times.

John A. will show his hand in full before long. We have from the beginning contended that he would sell the Reform members as soon as he found his own party moorings all right.—Recorder.

LORD PALMERSTON'S FUNERAL.

London, Oct. 28, 1865.

Lord Palmerston has been laid to rest among the historic dead who sleep their last sleep in Westminster Abbey. There was very little of pageant in the funeral. No such grand upholstery was brought out as we saw when the Duke of Wellington was buried in St. Paul's. There were no state ceremonials. But there were the Prince of Wales, and Prince John of Glucksburg, standing by the side of the grave. Ten Cabinet Ministers were the pall-bearers, and there was a very full attendance of the members of that House which has been the scene of so many of the dead Premier's triumphs. The streets were crowded by dense masses of people; but it is remarked that there seemed more of curiosity as to the spectacle than respect for the dead in the demeanour of the people. The clubs in Pall Mall, along which the procession passed, were for the most part draped with mourning; and the Reform Club especially was fairly clothed in sable. The morning was bright and clear, and a north-west wind careered along the streets, keen but exhilarating. While the funeral service was going on in the Abbey, however, there came a sudden change of weather. In a marvellously short space of time, the heavens were covered with a dense, black, pall-like cloud, which shut out the sun, and shrouded the Abbey in solemn gloom. Then heavy rain fell, and continued to fall for an hour or more, until long after the mourners had dispersed. I mention this fact because it seems to me it may be the foundation for a very fair poem. If any of your readers, taking the hint, should be filled with the divine inflatus, and rush into verse, pray print it for our benefit here.

UNITED STATES.

Philadelphia, Nov. 10.—There was a destructive fire last night at 9 o'clock, at Bancroft's Mills, between Media and Chester, one of the largest factories with its contents was destroyed. Loss $500,000.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 10.—A reconnoitre took place to-day, near the City Hotel, between Dr. Maddox, of Farquier county, and Major Dixon, Paymaster of the United States army. Major Dixon received a ball in the side penetrating the bowels. His speedy death is pronounced certain. Dr. Maddox has surrounded himself up to the civil authorities.

New York, Nov. 10.—The Panama Star and Herald of October 31st, gives further particulars of the insurrections among the blacks of Jamaica taken from Jamaica papers.

George W. Gordon, of Kingston, the principal mover of the insurrection, and the leader Paul Hoyle had been caught, and were being tried by court martial.

The Revs. T. H. Cole and James Roach, the two most prominent instigators were also arrested, together with most of the leading men in the move.

The outrages commited find no parallel. Evidence found on some of the prisoners shows the intention of the insurrectionists to spare no white people, but to slaughter all indiscriminately. Rebels are dealt with in the most summary way. The capture of leaders has dispirited them, and many are surrendering.

Her Majesty's steam store ship Urgent was despatched to Barbados for troops. No apprehension is felt of much furth r trouble.

New York, 10th Nov.—Intelligence is received that the commandant of the British war ship Bull dog blew her up on the 28th ult., at Cape Hayti. The rebel Salvane had taken by force some Haytians under the protection of the British Consul. The Command r of the Bull Dog asked satisfacti n. No reply being given, he opened fire on Fort Dr x-it. Fort replied, and the ship getting aground was set on fire, abandoned and blown up. It is reported that the Commander sailed for Jamaica on one of President Jeffa d's boats. Affairs of the country are very unsettled.

Washington, 10th.—A despatch was received to-day by the Secretary of the Treasury from E. W. Shelton, special agent, dated Galveston, 4th, via New Orleans, 6th inst., announcing the death of Wm. Johnson, Esq., the only brother of the President of the United States, and late collector at Velasco. He died from the effects of an accidental gun-shot wound.

Washington, 10th.—Capt. Wirz was hung between 10 and 11 o'clock the morning. On the gallows he declared his innocence: He died without exhibiting any symptoms of fear. This morning Father Boyle administered the Sacrament to Captain Wirz, and Father Wiggett, also of the Roman Catholic Church, then placed upon the prisoner the black cambrick remarking as he did so, "I hope this will be turned into a white one in the other world."

When the reading of the order was completed, Wirz conversed with those on the platform with seeming confidence and self-possession, and it was remarked that he had a smiling countenance. To his spiritual adviser he said:—"I am innocent. I have to die, but I can die like a man. I can hope for the future. I have nothing more to say."

His legs and hands were tied, and the noose passed around his neck, and the black cap placed over his face. He stood erect, without faltering, evidently having nerved himself for the solemn event. Those on the platform retired to the railing, leaving the doomed man in the centre of the structure. After a few minutes of profound silence the drop at a preconcerted signal fell. The sound thus occasioned having reached the ears of the crowd outside Old Capitol Grounds, but who were not privileged to view the execution, was responded to by repeated shouts of approbation. The convict, directly after falling, was considerably convulsed in his legs but the agony was soon over. He hung about 15 minutes and then was cut down. His body was laid upon a stretcher and conveyed to the prison where it was placed in a coffin and transferred to Father Boyle for interment. His neck was broken by the fall. All the proceedings occupied about three-quarters of an hour.

New York, 10th.—A Salt Lake letter to the Tribune of Oct 8th, states, Brigham Young and other leaders of the Mormons have changed their tactics and now proclaim polygamy their religion, which they will sustain by force of arms. They are hostile to our government, are drilling, procuring arms and ammunition, &c., and openly deny Federal authority.

New York, 10th.—By the arrival of the "Ocean Queen," we have Panama dates to Oct. 31st. War has been declared between Spain and Chili.

The Warning Given.—The cholera is now at our gates. The drunkards who refuse to reform should set their house in order at once. Their doom is determined. Yet it is not so much hurried, after all. Since liquors are no longer the eminent physicians return to administer the "rectified" brands of the shop, there are no ancient intimates. A man can't drink hell-fire and live up to Methuselah! His race will be short as it will be terminated with boils, ulcers, swollen limbs, disfigured face, sickning breath, and disgusting form.

But what we want to say to every householder is, that the cholera warns him to clean up. Let him purify his cellar, open his drain, lime over his back yard, make his waste places sweet as a nosegay. Then, if he t kes a sponge-bath every morning, and abhors liquor, the cholera cannot shake its little finger at him.

Besides, as some stupidities will not read the papers, every town ought to be divided into districts, every house visited, its manager enlightened, so that, as in England, towns in the direct track of the destroyer may escape through sanitary precautions. Then, if the plague should not spread, we shall have increased public health by ten per cent at least.—Rochester Express.

The Cholera.—The only thing remaining is to teach the people three great truths. First, that cholera is not contagious, and that a panic leading to the desertion of the sick is as absurd as it is cowardly. Second, that the best preventatives before it arrives are cleanliness, ventilation, and pure water; the best after it has arrived is a lavish use of chloride of lime or common white-wash.

A Delicate Case—Seizure of Smuggled Broadcloth—A Lady Implicated.—Last Friday evening, upon the arrival of the steamer Corinthian at Charlotte, Deputy Collector Oliver observed among the passengers who came on shore, a handsomely dressed lady and child. He also noticed that the lady's gait was rather heavy and awkward. Addressing her he suggested that she accompany him into the office, which, after some hesitation, she consented to do. Mr. Oliver then stated to her that he suspected her of having contraband goods concealed beneath her clothing. She immediately began to weep and plead for mercy—admitting that his suspicions were correct. At his request she accompanied him across the street to the American Hotel, where a lady searched her and found seven yards of black broadcloth attached to her under-skirts. The cloth was forfeited, of course, but the lady was allowed to proceed on her journey. She said that the cloth was intended for a cloak, and she had been induced to attempt to smuggle it, by the representations of some friends in Canada. It proved to be a cumbersome addition to her wardrobe, as its weight was seven pounds.—Democrat.

Mr. G. W. Palgrave.

The Roman Catholic priesthood in England has rarely been so pained by accession from their ranks, as by the falling away of Mr. W. G. Palgrave, late a Jesuit priest, and a man whose career is one of the most extraordinary of modern times. Mr. Palgrave was at Oxford, and was distinguished there for his leanings to Puseyism; but when he sailed for India and entered a regiment of native infantry, it was thought his interest to treeterianism would disappear. However, he became a convert to Roman Catholicism and got into a scrape by leaving the sanitarium, to which he had retired for reasons of health, and going to Bombay to make public recantation of his Protestant creed. Soon after that he left the army and retired to a monastery. After a retreat of some duration he was invited to Rome where his splendid scholarship, especially his familiarity with European dialects, was throughly appreciated. He was soon afterwards established in Syria as a Jesuit missionary, and the American missionaries could give some startling accounts of the trouble he caused by his zeal, his eloquence, and his utter disregard of anything save the spread of his

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

Prescott, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1852.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it, with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

LYRA—A PARODY.

BOY BY OAGE.

Did you know Myra, she that died
Her auburn locks, their hue to hide,

Who mix'd false ringlets with her hair
And rouged her cheeks to make them fair?

When she in maiden virtue slept
Her teeth within a box were kept.

Oh, she was lovely as the blow
That on the apple tree doth grow;

And when there came a gallant knight
To carry Myra from our sight—

For rivals naught on earth remained
But to curse the chap that gained.

His name was Jones—in earlier years
He sharply plied the tailor's shears.

But some fat contract having made
Long since he cut—his humble trade.

He owned a house in Shoddy Square,
And stole took his treasure there.

But soon some things he chanced to spy
Which looked suspicious to his eye.

Her form of cotton charms bereft,
Had very few attractions left;

Her pearly teeth—how passing strange;
From mouth to box would nightly change;

Soap crossed her rosy cheeks to fade;
Her glossy curls aside were laid;

Her hair untouched by barber's skill,
Was of rusty sorrel still!

How dashed are Jones' happy dreams,
How coarse the real Myra seems!

It would have made a piper stare
To hear the bridegroom rave and swear.

He saw how fairly he was caught,—
He felt the shame upon him brought,

And jumping up with sudden start,
He plunged a case knife to his heart!

Oh, you whose bloom is not your own,
Whose native teeth have long been gone,

Whose charms have vanished past recall,
An left you single after all,

Don't die like Myra—'tis not best—
But join the Mormons and—be blest!

Varieties.

A DILEMMA.—A correspondent of the World writing from Richmond, relates an incident as follows: taking of oaths reminds me of a local joke which my pen cannot resist recording. A good young country girl, on applying for rations to one of our relief agents, a few days ago was asked if she had ever taken the oath. "No indeed, sir," was her terrified reply, I never swore in all my life." "But you must take the oath my good girl," said the agent, "or I cannot give you the rations." No indeed I can't sir said the girl, "mother always taught me never to swear." The agent mildly persisted, and the maiden pertinaciously refused all attempts at persuasion, until overcome at last by the dreadful conflict between neces sity and her high sense of moral duty—she stammered out with downcast eyes. Well, sir if you will make me do such a horrid, wicked thing, d——n the Yankee!"

It appears that there were two persons of the name of Dr. John Thomas, not easily to be distinguished; for somebody (says Bishop Newton) was speaking of Dr. Thomas, when it was asked, which Dr. Thomas do you mean? Dr. John Thomas. They are both named John. Dr. Thomas who has a living in the city. They have both livings in the city. Dr. Thomas who is chaplain to the king. They are both chaplains to the king. Dr. Thomas who is a very good preacher. They are both good preachers. Dr. Thomas who squinted. They both squint. They were afterwards both Bishops.

A clergyman travelling through California encountering a panther, of which he subsequently wrote as follows:

"I looked at him long enough to note his brown and glossy coat his big, glaring eyes, his broad and well developed muzzle and his capacious jaws, when both of us left the spot, and I am pleased to add in opposite directions."

Jerrold and a company of literary friends were out in the country. In the course of their walk they stopped to notice the gambols of an ass's foal. A very sentimental poet present vowed that he should like to send the little thing as a present to his mother. "Do," replied Jerrold, "and tie a piece of paper round his neck bearing this inscription. "When this you see, remember me."

"Wherever I go," said a gentleman remarkable for his State pride, "I am sure to find sensible men from my own State."

"No wonder," said the gentleman he was addressing, "for every man of that State who has any sense, leaves it as fast as he can."

"It is impossible," said one politician to another, "to say where your party ends and the opposition party begins."

"Well, sir," replied the other, "if you were riding a jackass it would be impossible to say where the man ended and the donkey began."

The clerk of an English parish church in the country recently made the following announcement to the congregation:—"You are desired to attend a meeting in the vestry, at four o'clock, to consider on the means of heating the church, and to digest other matters."

A very considerate hotel-keeper, advertising his "Burton XXX," ends the advertisement thus:—"N. B.—Parties drinking more than four glasses of this powerful beverage at one sitting carefully sent home on a wheel-barrow gratis, if required."

An old patriot in Jersey cried out in a fit of revolutionary patriotism—"Hurrah for the girl of '76!" said a Jersey whig, "that's too hanged old. No, no—hurrah for the girl of 17!"

Mrs. Partington says she did not marry her second husband because she loved the male sex, but just because he was the size of her first protector and would wear his clothes out.

Swift said that the reason a certain university was a learning place, was, that most persons took some learning there, and a few brought any away with them, so it accumulated.

An able physiologist has written that one-fifth of the human body is composed of phosphorus. Punch remarkes, the most likely accounts for the number of matches.

Why is the eye like a schoolmaster in the act of flogging? Because it has a pupil under the lash.

When a man blows the froth off the beer he is going to drink, does he blow his own nose?

The lean said the better,—"My German friend, how long have you been married?"

"Well dis am a ting I seldom don't likes to talk about, but ven I does, it seems to me about as long as it never vos."

The Great Original Painting

OF THE

BATTLE of THE BOYNE!

By BEN. WEST, Pres. Royal Academy.

SPARKES, BOURNE & Co., would respectfully announce that they have now ready for delivery a splendidly got up Colored LITHOGRAPH of this magnificent HISTORICAL PAINTING, representing the Battle at the moment of the death of the gallant DUKE SCHOMBERG; and which is published on the finest paper—size 22 × 28 inches.

This Picture—a faithful copy of the great Original—will be found incomparably superior to anything ever offered to the public either in this country or Great Britain. It has been executed by the first Artists of the day, and no trouble or expense has been spared to make it worthy of the justly celebrated Painter, and the GREAT HISTORICAL FACT which it represents, and which ought never to be forgotten by those who now enjoy the CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY which this event, more than any other in our history, was the means of establishing and perpetuating.

In times like these, when the principles of our Forefathers are being assailed on every hand, it is especially needful for us to bear in mind from whence sprung our Constitutional form of Government; and nothing contributes more to aid us in keeping in remembrance those momentous passages in our history than faithful representations of the great Masters. And certainly no historical Subject has been more ably treated than the above event by this celebrated Painter.

In presenting this Picture to the Protestant Community, and especially to those who are more fe elingly alive to the vast benefits conferred on us by the ever memorable events of 1690, the Publishers feel every confidence that their efforts will be fully appreciated, and that this Picture will find an honored place in every Protestant home in the British Provinces.

AMERICAN

Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering

SEWING MACHINE!

COMPANY,

627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLES made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produce a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c, &c, it is indispensable: it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Brauds, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c., &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where Instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON-HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc, opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs Devaugh & Co, No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrumen is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old heap form of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over String Bass, of which Mr Dascus is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all the purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek.	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfield,	Wm Mason,
Herman Wullenhaupt,	A Barili.
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry,	Charles Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble: it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal versimilitude, that crowning excelence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument: an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily superceed the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

SEWING MACHINES.

EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms. { 536 Broadway, New York. / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principle of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular motion, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides, performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nansook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it aim at impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

$10 A DAY to AGENTS.

LLOYD'S GREAT TOPOGRAPHICAL RAILWAY and COUNTY MAP of ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND and WALES—Six feet large, mounted and varnished, cost $100,000 and four years time; was finished July 28, and is the best map ever made since the world was framed; shows 200,000 cities, towns villages, market places, post offices, canales, country seats, and 38,000 railways and railway stations, with the distance between each station marked plainly, and the official name and total length of each railway in actual operation up to June, 1865, is given. The railway stations are all numerically and alphabetically arranged. The lakes, rivers, hills and mountains are exhibited, with the altitude of each in feet, made from trigonometrical surveys by our own engineers, draughtsmen and Photographers sent to England expressly to make a superior map of that country; the whole engraved on steel, colored superbly in counties, mounted and varnished. Price 8 shillings sterling ($2). No map at $10 can compare to this. Canvassers throughout the world wanted. Also men, with a small capital, to go to Canada, Chicago, Cincinnati, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, East and West Indies, Australia and California, to open offices. Can make a fortune wholesaling this and other maps to sub-agents. Eighty thousand copies of this map were subscribed for in England before going to press, as can be shown by our agents letters to us. Ten new maps now under way

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK

FOR 1866.

The Fashion Magazine of the World.

LITERATURE, FINE ARTS, & FASHIONS. The most magnificent Steel engravings.—Double Fashion Plates. Wood engravings on every subject that can interest ladies. Crochet Knitting, Netting, Embroidery, Articles for the Toilet, for the Parlor, the Boudoir, and the Kitchen. Everything, in fact, to make a complete Lady's Book.

THE LADIES' FAVORITE FOR 36 YEARS

No Magazine has been able to compete with it. None attempt it.

GODEY'S RECEIPTS

for every department of a household. These are alone worth the price of the book.

MODEL COTTAGES, (no other Magazine gives them), with diagrams.

DRAWING LESSONS for the Young.—Another speciality with Godey.

ORIGINAL MUSIC, worth $3 a year. Other Magazines publishes old worn-out music; but the subscribers to Godey get it before the music stores.

GARDENING FOR LADIES.—Another peculiarity with Godey.

Fashions from Messrs. A. T. Stewart & Co., of New York, the millionaire merchants, appear in Godey, the only Magazine that has them.

Ladies' Bonnets. We give more of them in a year than any other Magazine. In fact, the Lady's Book enables every lady to be her own bonnet maker.

MARION HARLAND,

Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemesis," and "Miriam,"

writes for Godey each month, and for no other magazine. A new novel by her will be published in 1866. We have also retained all our old and favorite contributors.

Select Poetry.

'TIS BETTER ON BEFORE.

With steady pace the Pilgrim moves
Towards the blissful shore,
And sings with cheerful heart and voice,
"'Tis better on before."

His passage through a desert lies,
Where furious lions roar;
He takes his staff, and smiling says,
"'Tis better on before."

When tempted to forsake his God,
And give the contest o'er,
He hears a voice which says, "Look up,
'Tis better on before."

When stern affliction clouds his cheek,
And death stands at the door,
Hope cheers him with her sonnet note,
"'Tis better on before."

And when on Jordan's banks he stands,
And views the radiant shore,
Bright angels whisper, "Come away,
'Tis better on before."

And so it is, for high in heaven,
They never sudder more;
Eternal calm succeeds the storm—
"'Tis better on before."

Nor night, nor death, nor parting sound,
Can reach that healthful shore:
But peace, and joy, and endless life—
"'Tis better on before."

Literature.

THE ORPHANS.

(From the Diary of a Detective Police Officer.)

(CONCLUDED.)

Mr. Richard, the apothecary, a man of large and active benevolence, as hundreds still alive can testify, provided for the immediate physical needs of Frances and Rosamond Mason; and a true Sister of Mercy—one of that noble sisterhood, though non conventually disciplined and ruled, with whom London abounds, exerted herself to procure the orphans means of independent support. No. 1 Bell and Dragon Court was plainly furnished anew, and better paid for work was obtained for them. Time only could bring balm to their hurted minds.

I, meanwhile, was not idle in my vocation. Upon questioning the daughters, I found that their mother had a considerable quantity of valuable—their looms that had belonged to her father, which were kept in a stout box, locked up in a cupboard in the front ground floor, their sleeping apartment. The box had been consumed in the fire, and the contents, old silver plate and a massive gold watch, had, they supposed, been stolen during the confusion, as no trace of gold or silver could be found, in the ashes and crumbled rubbish.

Amidst the greatest privation, their mother had refused to part with those mementos of a happier life, except upon one occasion of sore need, when she pawned the watch for five pounds. Frances, the elder daughter, her mother being ill in bed, had been sent to redeem it on the day when the right to do so would have expired; but she could give no discription of the watch except that it was a large, heavy one. Upon application to the pawnbroker, that deficiency was supplied. Mr Morris, of Norton Folgate, had entered the name of the maker in his books—that of Leah, a celebrated name—no doubt as a memorandum for his own guidance in the event of the watch being sold by auction, as the law, in such cases, requires. I had now a pretty distinct notion of what the dying lady meant by "Mark Lopes—silver—watch."

Hump Jim, supplied with funds by Richards, who was vehemently anxious that L. pes should be hanged, clung to the Jew like his shadow. All in vain, however, for a long time, was that ceaseless vigilance. Lopes neither pawned nor sold silver plate or a gold watch, and was exceedingly kind and respectful to the Misses Mason; brought them work and paid for it liberally.

He himself was getting into remarkably good case; wore fine clothes, frequented theatres and expensive taverns, without visible means for indulgence in such luxuries. Cotterell informed me that one morning Lopes received a letter, which he eagerly opened at the door, took a slip of paper from it, immediately stopped a cab which happened to be passing, and was driven off so rapidly that he, Cotterell, could not possibly keep the cab in sight. Cotterell suggested that the slip of paper must have been a check, which Lopes had hastened to get cashed. I thought so to; and when, after about a week's absence I returned from Scotland, where I had been engaged in an affair that will from the subject of the next paper, the lad informed me that Lopes had received another letter, had shortly afterwards come out of the house in which he lodged, called a cat, and ordered the driver to take him to Hoare & Co., Fleet Street.

I called at Hoare's and was informed that a banker's order for one hundred pounds, being the second for that amount drawn in favour of Mark Lopes, Esquire, by a Bath bank house, had been paid two days previously to the person that had presented and endorsed it. At my request the manager said he would write to Bath and ask the name of the person who had obtained the order from the bank. The answer received was, "Mrs. Barfield, a lady of fortune, residing in the vicinity of Bath who keeps an account with us.

Who was Mrs. Barfield, and how the deuce came it that a lady of forune should send drafts for two hundred pounds to Mark Lopes? It utterly confounded me, till Mr. Richards suggested that Mrs. Barfield might be the wonderfully well married sister-in-law of Mr. Mason, whose name or residence Lopes professed to be ignorant of, but with whom, nevertheless, he had perhaps contrived to open a correspondence, pretendedly on behalf of the bereaved desolate orphans.

This was a shrewd guess at all events and Mr. Richards undertook to write by that evening's post to Mrs. Barfield.

I had left Mr. Richard's shop, when it occurred to me there was a very easy way of ascertaining whether Mrs. Barfield was the Misses Mason's aunt, by simply asking that question of the young ladies themselves. I accordingly turned up Worship Street, and into Bell and Dragon Court, but was stopped before I reached No. 1 by young Cotterell.

Lopes is in there, said the hunch-back, who was much excited. Lopes is in there with Miss Frances. Miss Rosamond has been sent out with work.

Well, what of that.

I don't know exactly what of that, replied Cotteral fiercely; but if I heard the slightest scream in the world I would know. D——n his heart! continued the lad, opening and closing his fists in a manner unconsciously, and as if preparing to clutch and grapple with some hated thing. D——n his heart! I guess what he's after; I ain't a fool. This is the fourth time he has been here and sent Miss Rosamond away on some pretence or other; but I'd be down on him like a breeze. I could throttle him, added Cotterel, with a savage snap of his teeth, I could throttle him as easy as I could a sparrow, and I would too!

I was amazed at the lad's vehemence; at the bitter rage revealed by his burning eyes, and pale, death pale face. A few questions sufficed to discover the source of his emotion. He had taken messages to the sisters from Mr. Richards, had been kindly noticed by them, and had become affected or infected, by the beauty and sweetness of the elder to an extraordinary degree—a feeling not less real and poignant for being ridiculously absurd. And I could not help thinking as I looked on his sinewy though stunted form, his stout arms and hardened hands, that he might prove at need a better champion of Miss Frances than many a six foot grenadier.

Go in, he went on to say; go in quietly yourself at once. He has been there more than half an hour. Here, added hunchback with some hesitation, here is a latch-key which fits the door.

I could not rest, said the excited lad in reply to my stare of surprise, I could not rest till I had it. How without could I get in if I wanted to?

I availed myself of the key, entered the house quietly, and listened to the conversation going on in the back room between Lopes and Frances Mason. Conversation it could be called, her share therein being confined to ejaculations of surprise and alarm in reply to the Jew's ardent adulation that she would become his wife. The fellow was positively proposing marriage to the distressed and astonished girl, though her mother was scarcely cold in her grave. I soon, moreover, comprehended that remembrance of the kindness which he had thrust upon the sisters greatly mitigated the manifestation of terror and disgust which the proposition excited. Completely mistaking the cause of the maiden's tremulous civility, Lopes waxed bolder, and seemed about to offer her some personal indignity, when I suddenly entered the room. He seemed to literally collapse with surprise and consternation, whilst a slight scream of joy followed by a burst of hysterical tears, interpreted the feelings with which Frances Mason greeted my appearance.

I thought it unwise to let it appear that I had been listening outside, and after a few words of apology for my unannounced intrusion, I said abruptly, having first so placed myself that I could see Lopes' face in the tiny chimney glass:

Is a Mrs. Barfield, who lives near Bath, an aunt of yours Miss Mason?

The question was an electric shock to Lopes, and his livid face turned rapidly from me to Frances Mason, from her to me his wild, flaming glance betokening, as he did so, intensest alarm and astonishment.

I have never heard of a Mrs. Barfield, said Frances Mason. Our aunt's name is Dalton and she lives at Brighton.

The Mrs. Barfield I am speaking of, said I turning sharply upon Lopes, is the lady who has lately sent you two drafts, amounting to two hundred pounds, upon Hoare's the bankers.

The fellow blanched visibly, but Frances Mason's reply to my question had so far restored his self-possession that he surlily retorted with,

What the devil right have you to ask who sends me checks?

Well no precise right at present. But come, let us begnue. This young lady does not, it is quite evident, like our company, and I have a word or two for your private ear.

Lopes sullenly acquiesced, and we left the house together. Cotterell was in the court, seemingly intent upon the grooming of a horse. Lopes did not notice him; but a sly, swift, round-the corner squint shot at us showed that Cotterell did see us, and that his eyes were sullenly wide open to see the latch key, which I managed to drop unobserved by Mr. Lopes.

I invited the Jew to take a glass at the Bell and Dragon; he complained, but so sullenly incommunicative that I soon left him. It was then about four o'clock, and the winter evenings were already closing in.

Five hours afterwards, just upon the stroke of nine, whilst I was at supper, a note was brought to me by an officer attached to the Worship street Police Officer, I copy it verbatim:—

SIR,—I have killed the Jew; less was I hope so. Pitched him clene over stairs upon his cussed head. All rite with Miss Frances. Just in time. Hoping to see you and quite happy,

JAMES COTTERELL.

The officer's report, supplimented by subsequent inquiry, gave the following particulars of what had occurred since I left the Bell and Dragon court:

Mark Lopes, warned by the discovery of his correspondence with Mrs. Barfield, determined, at any hazard, to make Frances Mason glad to become his wife. With that view, he at about half-past six in the evening returned to No 1 Bell and Dragon Court, and sent Rosamond Mason away under pretence that a lady in Greenchurch Street, for whom they worked, wished to see her immediately. Frances Mason was in the back room up stairs, and did not know that her sister had left the house, or that Lopes had returned till he had presented himself before her. A vehement altercation ensued, and finally Lopes, drunk with excitement and liquor, had seized the terrified, helpless girl, and partially stifled her frenzied screams, when Cotterell burst into the room.

The strength of twenty men was in me, said the hunch-back, with proud, glistening eyes. The strength of twenty men was in me. I seized the scoundrel by the throat, dragged, whirled him out of the room, and pitched him as easy as a skittle-ball over the staircase. I glory in it. Miss Frances is an angel still, and I don't care what comes of me.

Mark Lowes, though frightfully injured, recovered after about six weeks' medical discipline in St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and was then transferred to Newgate. The next session he was indicted for stealing from No. 1, Bell and Dragon Court, a quantity of silver plate and a gold watch. Also with obtaining, nominally from Mrs. Barfield, but really form Mrs. Dalton, who was ill at the time, and staying at the former lady's house, two hundred pounds, under the pretext that he was the legal guardian of Mrs. Dalton's nieces, and that he was anxious, in fulfilment of their mother's last wishes, to discharge various debts that had been incurred during her long illness, as well to befittingly equip the Misses Masons for appearing at their aunt's mansion at Brighton. He was convicted upon both charges, and sentenced to fourteen years transportation.

Frances and Rosamond Mason were adopted by their wealthy childless aunt; and both, I have heard, have married happily.

Mr. Richards, with Mrs. Dalton's money, purchased a capital greengrocery business for James Cotterell; but he had no heart to it, and withering gradually away, died, poor fellow, within six months of the day when he furtively watched, from round the corner of an adjacent street, the departure of Frances Mason from London.

CAST A LINE FOR YOURSELF.—A young man stood listlessly watching some angler on a bridge. He was poor and dejected. At last approaching a basket well filled with wholesome looking fish, he sighed, "If now, I had these, I would be happy. I could sell them at a fair price, and buy me food and lodgings."

"I will give you just as many and just as good fish," said the owner, who chanced to overhear his words, if you will do me a trifling favour."

"And what is that?" asked the other eagerly.

"Only to tend this line till I come back. I wish to go on a short errand."

The proposal was gladly excepted.

The old fisherman was gone so long that the young man began to be impatient. Meanwhile, however, the hungry fish snapped eagerly at the baited hook, and the young man lost his depression in the excitement of puling them in; and when the owner of the line returned, he had caught a large number.

Counting out from them as many as were in the basket, and presenting them to the young man the old fisherman said—

"I fulfil my promise from the fish you have caught, to teach one, whenever you see others earning what you need, to waste no time in fruitless wishing, but to cast a line for yourself."

The other week, it is said a navvy on Hibernian, evidently unaccustomed to travelling, had an occasion to journey by the Great North of Scotland Railway. Soon after starting he became apparently uneasy about the safety of his baggage, which of course, was safe in the van. On the first opportunity, thursting his head out of the carrige window, he loudly accosted the smart official in charge of the train, with—"Guard, Guard! is mot trunk all rought?" "All right sir," was the quick reply, and the train proceeded. At the next station the restless Milesian again shouted—"Are ye sure it's all right? and again was re assured of the safety of his travelling gear. The important "thrunk" was the subject of enquiry in similar fashion at every station, until the patient guard grown very weary of this silly importunity, exclaimed—"I wish, sir, you had been born an elephant instead of an ass and carried your thrunk before you." Pat collapsed.

WHICH IS WHICH.—"Ah Pat!" said a schoolmistress to a thick headed urchin, into whose muddy brain she was attempting to beat the alphabet, "I'm afraid you will never learn any thing. Now, what's this letter, eh?" "Sure, don' you know, ma'am?" "Because it has a dot over the top of it." "Och, ma'am! I mind it well, but sure I thought it was a fly-speack."—"Well, now, remember, Pat, it's I." "Yes ma'am?" "No, no! not U, but I, blockhead." "Och, yes! faith now I have it, ma'am! you mane to say that you, not I, am a blockhead." "Fool, fool! exclaimed the pedagogues, almost bursting with rage. "Just as you plaze," replied Pat —"Fool or blockhead, it's no matter which ye are to me, as long as ye are free to own it."

Barnum was once travelling on board one of the river steamers, and called at teatime for a beefsteak. The waiter brought him the usual little shrive led-up unto of broiled flesh, certainly not sufficient for more than two mouthfuls. Barnum poised the morsel on his fork, scanned it critically, as though it were a sample submited for inspection, and then returned it to the waiter, saying, "Yes, that's what I mean; bring me some of that."

A good old quaker lady, after listening to the extravagant yarns of a clerk as long as her patience would allow, said to him: "Friend, what a pity it is a sin to lie when it seems so necessary in thy business."

When a man marries a widow he is bound to give up smoking and chewing. If she gives up her weeds for him, he should of course give up the weed for her.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

(From the True Witness.)

Mr. Ogle Gowan, improving the occasion, has made an appeal to the Orangemen to take up arms against the Fenians, and it is much to be feared that this advice will be followed; in which case Feniansm will indeed become formidable, because it will in the minds of many be associated with the cause of Catholicity. To all loyal subjects of Queen Victoria, to all Conservatives, Orangeism we say again, as we have often said, should be especially odious, since it is the wedge which alone prevents the natural union of Catholics and Conservatives. "How," ask the former, "can we unite for political action with a party which numbers amoogst its supporters the sworn enemies of our religion?"—and alas! to this question it is difficult to give an answer. Would the Conservatives, however, would all who sincerely desire to uphold British connection, frankly and openly repudiate Orangeism, the one great obstacle to a Catholic and Conservative union would be done away with, and Catholics would then cease to look for allies in the ranks of the Liberals, and demagogues of Upper Canada.

As it is, Mr. Ogle Gowan and his Orange brethren are doing their best to promote the object of the Fenians, and to counteract the influence of the Catholic clergy. No one can deny that the latter have strenuously opposed Feniansm, and have constantly denounced it to their people; but little will the opposition and the denunciation even of the Catholic clergy avail, if the anti-Orange sympathies of Irish Catholics be evoked in its behalf. A greater blunder than this, a greater crime could not be perpetrated. Orangeism and Feniansm is that they are both essentially anti-Catholic, are naturally friends and allies, and the now defunct Irish People, in its abuse of the Romish priesthood, was never surpassed by the most rabid of the organs of Orangeism. In the United States it is the same. The men who are the most prominent in the Fenian ranks are either Protestants, or infidels, apostates from the Catholic Church; men whom she abhors and excommunicates whilst living, and to whom she refuses as far as lies in her power, the rites of Christian burial and her prayers when dead. Only by one course of action can the sympathies of the most ignorant of Catholics be provoked for such men; and that cause of action Mr. Ogle Gowan and his Orange brethren seem inclined to adopt. It is the interest then of all loyal subjects of Queen Victoria, without distinction of creed or origin, to deprecate this insane and wicked movement, of which the only effects will be to give an enormous impetus to Feniansm, to neutralise the influence of the clergy, and to renew in Upper Canada the hideous massacres of Belfast. For of this we may be certain: That if this Ogle Gowan's advice be followed, if the Orangemen of U. Canada in pursuance therewith proceed to arm themselves with "rifles, bayonets and fifty rounds of ball cartridge" the Irish Catholics of Upper Canada will do the same, as a legitimate measure of protection against their implacable enemies. We shall have to provide then, not merely against a Fenian raid—of which we believe there is but little prospect—but against intestine war; and that at a critical moment when all our attention, all our energies, should be devoted to, and concentrated upon the defence of our common country against the stranger. Mr. Ogle Gowan we doubt not ignores these facts, patent to every man not a fool or blinded by passion. Mr. Ogle Gowan we suppose thinks only of his own personal interests; sees only in an Orange excitement which he seeks to stimulate the chances of increasing his political influence, of acquiring notoriety, and perhaps a government situation, with a handsome salary. We do not suspect him even of intentionally playing into the hands of the Fenians; but nevertheless we tell him, and we are sure that every unprejudiced person in Canada will agree with us—that he is doing the very thing which the Fenians of the United States, were they to be permitted to dictate the course of action most favorable to their designs against this country, would themselves prescribe, as the course most certain to array every Catholic on their side.—Hitherto we have been inclined to treat Feniansm rather lightly, as a bug-bear rather than as a real danger—as a cleverly devised scheme by which, at the expence of their dupes, a few clever but unprincipled demagogues in the U. States have been enabled to feather their nests very comfortably—as a commodious safety valve for the escape of that flatulent verbosity with which your pot-house patriots, and bar-room "martyrs of liberty" in the United States, are so commonly troubled. But now we begin to think the matter really serious; and should unfortunately the Orangemen of Upper Canada take advantage thereof to arm, organise, and make a public display—we shall have every reason to apprehend the worst consequences.

THE SCOTCH MUSIC MASTER.—A Highland piper, having a scholar to teach, disdained to crack his brains with the names of semib eves, minims, crotchets and quavers. "Here, Donald," said he, tak' yer pipes, and gie us the blast. So, verra weel blawn, indeed; but what's a sound, Donald, without sense? You may blaw forever without making a tune o't if I dinna tell ye how the queer things on the paper mean help ye. You see that big fellow, wi' a round open face (pointing to a semibreve between two lines of a bar), he moves slowly from that like to this, while ye beat anes wi' your fist and gie a long blast; if now, ye put a leg to him ye mak twa o' him, and he'll move twice as fast; an if ye black his face, he'll run four times faster than the fellow wi' the white face; but if after blacking his face, ye'll bend his knee, or tie his leg, he'll hop eight times faster than the white-faced chap I showed you first. Now when'er you blaw your piper, Donald,—remember this—that the tighter those fellow's legs are tied, the faster they'll run, and the quicker there sure to dance."

OUR CAPABILITIES.

We are sure we may safely say that few if any, if any, in Canada possess such facilities for the employment of capital, as does our own little town. We have almost unlimited water power, which, if rightly directed and properly used, would be found to be sufficient motive power to carry on business that might amount to millions of dollars a year. Both on the east and west sides of the river, there are numerous water-privileges not yet fully in requisition, that if properly managed would ensure to Peterborough an enviable position among the towns of the Province, and would very soon raise her to the rank of a city. Already, it is true, we have numerous mills, and one or two factories, which turn out an immense amount of lumber and other articles; but when we consider what mills and factories might be established between the Little Lake and Nassau Mills, we only wish we had capital and enterprize enough to set to work and carry on one half of what this noble river is capable of doing.

At the present time we have five Flour Mills in active operation. These are capable of turning out at least 1800 barrels of flour weekly; yet they do not grind all the wheat grown in the surrounding country—thousands of bushels of wheat, oats, &c., are sent away every year unground. This must be a great loss to millowners, and it is to be wondered at that no way has been devised of retaining the grain until it is converted into flour.

Our Saw Mill work, too, is enormous; they turn out every year an average of over 50,000,000 feet manufactured lumber—some of the mills making not less than 10,000,000 feet a year, others varying from four to eight million feet.

We have also three Woollen Mills which do considerable work in their line; but the principal factory is the Auburn Mills, situate a little north of the town on the Douro side of the river. These mills are owned by A. Robertson, & Co., of Montreal, and managed by Mr. Brodie, who has succeeded in raising the name of these mills to a world wide reputation, as the Gold Medal at the Dublin exhibition was awarded to the owner of the Auburn Mills, for cloth manufactured at Peterborough, and also the Silver Medal at the Montreal Provincial Exhibition. This speaks volumes for the work done at these mills, and for the superintendent, Mr. Brodie. The number of hands at present employed is 35. These, we are informed, send weekly to market about 1800 yards of cloth. The expenses of the establishment, too, are quite an item to the town; the cash monthly payments to hands and otherwise, amount to over $1200, we are informed, or about $14,400 a year. Besides, about $6000 were expended in buying wool in this market during the year.

This fall 30,000 yards of cloth manufactured at Auburn Mills have been to supply an order from A. Stewart of New York city. About 100,000 lbs. of wool annually are required for these Mills alone.

This we venture to say equals, if not exceeds the expenses and outlay of any one single establishment around the town. True, others may expend more in the year, but then a great part of their expenses goes to the back countries for timber &c., and while they may do as much for the county, they do not do more for the town. If we had two or three more factories, they would soon tell on our prosperity. Let us hope that the days of narrowmindedness are so far gone by, that such undertakings, instead of being driven to other places, because there cannot be a spot obtained to erect them on, will be solicited and fostered. What an advantage it would be to our Grocers to be called upon to supply from $30,000 to $40,000 worth additional a year, instead of the outlay and enterprise being forced to some other place. As it is, it is gratifying to us to know that Peterborough has carried off the palm for its manufactures—shall we say from the world, as the Gold Medal to the Auburn Mills testifies. We wish continued success to the owner of these mills, and to the worthy superintendent and managers.

The immense outlay to carry on the lumbering business around Peterborough can scarcely be properly estimated. The timber for 30,000,000 feet cannot fall much short of $30,000; the cost of manufacture, $50,000; the freight, teaming, &c., $50,000; besides other expenses, all disbursed here, making a total little less than $200,000, and giving employment to an immense number of hands, thus supporting numerous families. The flour manufactured here during the last three months to be shipped, exceeds 25,000 barrels, besides the wheat and other grain sent away unmanufactured. These are only three divisions of enterprise—cloth, lumber, flour. The smaller enterprises of shingles and other articles, we cannot now give even a comparative estimate of; and the immense quantities of timber made in this district must be left unmentioned. But we may safely say that the timber, lumber, and manufactures of Peterborough, although a small place, equals $500,000. Of the grain trade we can give no approximate statement.

The Magi of the West.

It has fallen to our lot, on more than one occasion, to acquaint our readers—and especially our citizens—with the way in which the city fathers do things up. To do them justice this time, we must confess our inability. The scenes were grand beyond description; and the crowd who had assembled to hear the "logic," the "wisdom," and "wit," were compelled to turn the whole into a loud laugh. Judging from the testimonials of character given unsolicited, one would be ready to conclude that the members of our Town Council are at least two degrees removed from being honest men. We would advise the members of the Council to bring the young members of their families to the next meeting, that they may have an opportunity of witnessing the noble example of their sires. The ratepayers we would advise to look out for wise men, men who will at least be wise enough to restrain their own prejudices and personal grievances during the hours of their deliberations. The whole of this great farce arose out of the proposed extension of the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway. It was proposed to pass a By-law to enable the Company and Lessees to extend the road along and across certain lands and streets, belonging to or under control of the Council. Some favored the idea, some opposed it; and hence the loud talk and unpleasant words—we thought we heard some oaths; but then it was in the heat of debate. If they would spend as much time in trying to fill up the pools and mud holes on the Market Square, and in repairing the side-walks on the main streets of the town, the ratepayers would thank them more for it than for all their twaddle in the Council Chamber. You cannot cross the Market Square for the last two weeks; no lady can do her marketing for being mired—and when at the Market House, one almost despairs of getting home. Truly we are a tasty people.

Harvey Lands.

The subject of the settlement of our wild lands has more than once called forth some remarks from us. Again we feel ourselves compelled to call the attention of those in authority to the subject. Unsold lands in the Township of Harvey are now in the market. The Government price, we are told, is 70 cents each, or $1 if time is given. We have information from various sources, too, that the land is not of the best quality; and that, though after a while the settler might be able to make a living, yet it will require all his wisdom and care, and aid, too, to enable him to do so at first. The hard name which the back country has received also tends much to keep many from venturing to settle in Harvey. Instead, therefore, of the Government putting on a high price on those lands, they should be satisfied with realizing the outlay for surveys and colonization roads. At the last sitting of the County Council, it was agreed to memorialize the Government to make the price of wild lands lower. Would it not be a wise step to put the wild lands of the County in the hands of the County Council, and let them pay the Government the outlaid money, say in ten or twenty years, and thus remove the evil of the mis-management of the unsettled domain of this County, which will remain so eternally if the unwise policy of keeping up the price of these lands is continued. Those in authority must delight in retaining the woods and forests for hunting grounds. We repeat it: the lands are dear enough at the cost of survey, &c., and no more should be demanded from the actual settler than such costs. We would like to see the officers of the Crown Lands Department trying to scrape their salaries off the hard limestone and granite rocks of Harvey and other back townships: their yearly pickings would then be scanty enough. For the present, however, the prices are 70 cents in cash, or $1 if not paid down. Let us hope for a more liberal policy ere long.

Skating.

We are requested to state that Mr. Calcutt has his Skating Rink completed, and ready for gymnastic exercise as soon as Jack Frost comes to his aid. The Rink is beautifully situated just south of the "Otonabee Mills," and beside Mr. Calcutt's flax machinery. It is of very good dimensions, and can be flooded on every necessary occasion. Mr. Calcutt also has arrangements made for regularly removing all snow or other obstructions and also for lighting it up on great occasions. Tickets for the season, we are informed will be—for gentlemen, $2.00; for Ladies, $1.00. Who would miss a season's sport for that small sum.

The "Shenandoah" again.

This vessel which has caused so much trouble on the high seas, and so much consternation among the merchantmen and other vessels of the United States, has put into Liverpool, and the master has delivered her up to the English authorities. The Captain states that he did not hear of the overthrow of the confederacy until the 30th of August last, and that as soon as heard of, he at once directed his course for England, not troubling any vessel since. There are many speculations afloat as to the course that will be pursued should she be demanded by the American Government.

The Daily News says that the Americans may be inclined to say it was only fitting her end should be as British as her origin, but the Daily News cannot help asking how the Shenandoah has been able to pursue her course without the least interruption from the American navy. Can it be possible that the expectation of recovering compensation for losses resulting from her depredations from England, made the American Government less eager for her capture. If the world should come to that conclusion, it would be one of the strongest practicle arguments against and admission of such liabilities as Seward is now endeavoring to establish against England.

It is stated Waddell sent a letter to Earl Russell. Contents unknown.

The captain and crew remained on the Shenandoah.

The Star says, should the vessel be claimed by America, there can be no reason for refusing the request

The Times says:—The personal liabilities of the captain give rise to perplexing circumstances, but strict justice will be done by the tribunals.

The latest news says that the pirate Shenandoah has been given up to the American Consul, and the Crew released unconditionally.

We have the authority of the member for this County to state that the price of the Crown Lands in Harvey will be 70 cents an acre, cash or $1 60 an acre, on time.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of St. Andrew's Society was held in the Committee Rooms, American Hotel, on Monday evening, the 20th instant, at eight o'clock. James Hall, Esq., President, in the Chair.

The Secretary submitted to the meeting the financial statement of the Society, as taken from the books of the Treasurer, and certified to by the Audit Committee, who reported that they had examined the books, comparing vouchers, and found all correct, showing a balance in the hands of the Treasurer of $48 85, to be placed to the credit of the current year's account.

The following officers were then elected for the current year, viz.:—

Sheriff Hall, President.
A. Smith, Esq., 1st Vice President.
W. A. Scott, Esq., 2nd do
A. Graham Esq., 3rd do
D. McDonald, Esq., Treasurer.
Charles Cameron, Secretary.

The following were also elected a standing Committee, viz:—Messrs. John Whyte, R. D. Ewing, John Patterson, D. McNaughton, John Crerar, L. McGregor, R. Romaine, R. Taylor, D. Sutherland, Jas. Johnston, H. T. Anderson, A. Stewart, and James Campbell.

For the Township of Smith—Michael Sanderson, Thomas Tully, and Andrew Millar.

Thomas Tellford, Ennismore.

French Missionary Meeting in the Presbyterian Church.

On Monday last, one of the largest religious meetings yet held in Peterborough, was held in the First Presbyterian Church, at which Col. Haultain presided as Chairman.

The following are the resolutions, which is all we are enabled to give this issue.—

Moved by Rev. Mr. Brock, seconded by Rev. Mr. Cantlon, supported by Rev. Mr. Clarke, and Resolved—That the great source of moral and religious progress is the Holy Scriptures.

Moved by Mr. Campbell, seconded by Rev. Mr. Rogers, and

Resolved—That this meeting rejoices in the continued prosperity of the French Canadian Missionary Society, and commends its claims to the confidence and support of all Protestant Christians in this town and neighborhood

On motion of Mr. Fairbairn, seconded by Mr Glover, the Rev. John Gilmour was chosen President of the Peterboro' Society for 1865-6.

A very liberal collection was taken up for the Mission.

Literary Club.

Private debate this evening: subject, "Should capital punishment be abolished?" Leaders, J. A. Hall and J. O'Donnell. Members only admitted.

Pork that was Pork

Mr. John Sullivan, of the Township of Douro, brought four pigs to our market this week, two of which weighed 1011 lbs. and brought $100 in cash; the other 2 weighed 678 lbs. and netted $65. The same gentleman two years ago, brought two pigs to market that weighed 1075 lbs. Beat this who can. As Mr. Sullivan intends going on it will be difficult to overtake him in the pork line.

Feniani.

The President of the Irish Republic is reported to have forwarded a challenge to the editor of the New York Times for honestly warning the poor fenian dupes not to give their hard gotten money "to support a set of scamps in idleness." O'Mahony took this as a personal affront and demanded a meeting where they "might enjoy a more satisfactory acquaintance." The editor couldn't "see it" in that way. But as long as O'Mahony can play to the tune of several thousands a year, he little cares who is duped.

The Orangemen of Toronto have been holding a meeting, which we are informed was largely attended. At this meeting the Leader says O. R. Gowan was unanimously sustained in his late appeal. The Orangemen of Toronto, however, add that "while offering their services to the Government, they never had the slightest objection to see every loyal Roman Catholic armed and prepared, and that no true Orangeman would fail to stand in the ranks with loyal Roman Catholics, or hail them as comrades and companions in an hour of trial or difficulty."

There are rumours of a prize fight for the championship of America, to take place some place in Schoharrie County. The pugilists are Elliott and Davis. Crowds of roughs, gamblers and thieves are in their train.

The St. Catharines Journal says that it is the intention of Bishop Lynch, of Toronto, to make St. Catharines his future residence.

Lord Russell once stated to a committee of the House of Commons that he had never been in debt till he became Premier.

The French were to commence the evacuation of Rome, on the 15th instant.

Oil springs are said to have been discovered in England.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS.

There is very little additional with regard to military and militia movements. The 60th Regiment is to leave Montreal for London on Friday next. The Canseurs, from Montreal, and a French Canadian company, from Quebec, are to be stationed at Niagara, under the command of Major Cimy Mars. Yesterday the Mayor of Chatham received a dispatch from Assistant Quartermaster-General Wolseley to the effect that in the event of that town being able to supply free accommodation for a detachment of the same strength as that now stationed at Sandwich (3 officers, 75 men, and 20 women) the Lieutenant-General had it in contemplation to quarter a detachment of that strength there this winter. A special meeting of the Town Council was at once held, at which it was unanimously resolved that the necessary accommodation should be provided at once for the promised detachment. Mr. Wolseley, who is now in London, will proceed immediately to Chatham to make further arrangements. The sum of the arrangements then is, that a company has been ordered from each of the following places: Toronto Hamilton, London, Woodstock, Ottawa, Montreal, and Quebec; the 60th Regiment goes to London, and a detachment of regulars is to be stationed in both Stratford and Chatham.

In addition to this the Government will proceed to complete the organization of the whole Militia force of the country. The officers of volunteers have received orders to fill up all their companies to the full complement of 65 men. All persons not serving in the volunteer force, who are between the ages of 18 and 45, are liable to be drafted into the Service Militia, unless physically exempted by statute. They have thus to make choice now which branch of the service they will prefer to serve in. It is said that the Government will take action almost immediately in this matter, and it is not improbable that the orders on it will appear in the official Gazette of next Saturday. —Hamilton Times.

AFFAIRS IN JAMAICA.

Already our readers will have learned of the existence of a rebellion in Jamaica; the negroes rising in considerable numbers with the intent, it is said, of murdering all the white and brown inhabitants. The scene of the disturbance is around Morant Bay, on that part of the Island nearest to Hayti. Why it is styled a rebellion, or why so many have been coldly shot down or hanged, is certainly somewhat of a mystery to us. The whole trouble was confined almost to one parish: and from reports reaching us, the rebel force amounted to 600, and consisted of both negroes and brown persons. There had been some dispute between some sailors of the navy and the police; but this was promptly stopped. The mob, no doubt, committed several outrages, and took the lives of many innocent persons before they were checked; but if newspapers are true, they have suffered rather severely for their rash and violent acts, as it is said that 2,000 of them have been hanged or shot down. This savours like undue severity and cruelty, and speaks strongly of martial: and perhaps when the whole is enquired into, there will be found to have been some weighty grievance to complain of that induced or provoked this partial uprising of the inhabitants. While we have no sympathy with rebels or mob law, no matter what may be the grievances; yet it cannot be gainsayed that too often has the negro race been forced to endured undue severity and cruel treatment. It is not at all unlikely that their former owners have yet some reminiscence of their once being masters, and of course of a superior race. The evil effects of slavery even on the mind of the master may not yet be entirely erased; and who knows but that the negro has been refused justice at the established tribunal, and was thus compelled unwisely to seek it by other means. Does not their attacking the Court House and Police Stations favour such an idea. The false notion too that the rebellion is the work of a particular religious sect, savours of religious persecution and of a strong desire to injure one particular sect for the especial benefit of another. The reports of officials, too, are often colored very much; and we have no doubt but that if the truth was fully known, these officials have had more to do with provoking the rebellion than their reports admit. The following professes to give the origin and result of the so-called rebellion:—

On the 7th Oct. it was said that the people were greatly enraged, especially at an arrest. Sunday passed, and on Monday the magistrates issued warrants for the arrest of 20 persons who had figured on Saturday in the rescue; but the police were overpowered and secured with their own handcuffs, being held as hostages. On the next day three hundred men, armed with swords, left Dumfries and appeared in Stony Gut, where they held a secret meeting in the Baptist Chapel. Previous meetings had been held the night before, at the house of a man named Grant, called by the insurgents Capt. Grant.

The magistrate wrote at once to the Governor, at Spanish Town, and also to Bath for a company of volunteers. The volunteers arrived on Wednesday, which was the day for the sessions. All was tranquil till three o'clock, and the magistrates were about to retire for refreshment, when the cry of a woman was heard, "Here the people are coming." From the windows of the Court House could be perceived a furious mob of four or five hundred persons rushing down the main street to the Police Station. They rushed in, seized the guns, swords and the powder, and tramped in force down to the Court House. The local magistrate caught up the "Riot Act," which is the real "Act" a storm of stones and brickbats the volunteers were ordered to fire, and when the smoke rolled away several of the rioters were seen dead or wounded. Then came a momentary pause, when the mob rushed furiously on the handful of volunteers, who fought very bravely. Over the ramrod carried the assailants, and an obstinate effort was made to break open the door. In the meantime the volunteers had succeeded in retreating into the building, and set to work to barricade it, trying also to save the portrait of Sir Charles Metcalfe from the conflagration with which the village and school-house were threatened. Every soldier who looked out of the windows was received with bullets, which he returned. The school house was very soon in flames, but the wind for a time saved the Court House. Two of the magistrates who tried to escape through a window, were at once killed by the besiegers. In the confusion each member of the court tried to escape as he could. All took refuge in the fort, when it was discovered that the raw volunteers who defended it had been overcome. The roof was on fire. At the request of the Rev. Mr. Herschel a prayer was offered up. Scarcely was it concluded when the bullets came dashing through the windows, wounding the stipendiary magistrate, the Hon. Mr. Georges, and a child of the inspector.

Down came the roof, and to leave the place was imperative. Mr. McCommark was dashed to pieces against a cannon lying on the steps. Another rushed out with a sword, whilst the mob shouted, "now we have the Baron, kill him! kill him!" and loud shouts announced their satisfied vengeance. Others perished, and after having mutilated the inspector, they were going to kill his child, but some women succeeded in saving it.—The tongue of the clergyman was cut out, and the Baron's fingers were similarly treated. The volunteers fought well and dearly sold their lives. Not New Zealanders or Indians could have shown more cruel ferocity than the insurgents.

The storm of riot then rushed on to the District of the Valley, and news of the atrocities there committed soon arrived. Great numbers of refugees had arrived at Kingston.

In Hordly the Government House attacked. In it a number of women and children had sought refuge. The inhabitants at once armed themselves with revolvers and other weapons, boldly with-stood the rioters, and killing some, had succeeded in holding the others at bay. From that locality the following dispatch was received by the Governor:—"The rebellion increases. The Court House is in flames. The women are in the Government House. Help—troops. A gunboat can be off Holland Bay. Do not lose time."

Troops are sent at once sent to the scene of confusion, and reinforcements as rapidly as possible, whilst the Governor hurried to the spot. Three hundred soldiers of the Sixth Royals arrived at Kingston from Newcastle, whilst the inhabitants of that place were being rapidly enrolled as volunteers. A troop of volunteer cavalry having already left for Rock fort. As the Wolverton steamed out of Morante Bay, she met the Ardent, from Nassau, and directed her to proceed at once to Barbadoes for troops.

Forty of the insurgents have already been hanged, and so has the policeman who favored the escape of the rebel leader Paul Boyle. This latter has surprised most who knew him, for he was always considered a pacific and jovial in his character. Of another leader, Grant, it is also said he was always very sensible, and one of the supporters of the acts of the local committee, of which he was a member

Gen. O'Connor writes that Captain Luke marched upon Port Morante, expecting to find the rebellion force, but found no opposition; a gunboat, however, found a mob of 800, mostly women, employed in setting fire to the house of Mr. Duffers; a one 32 pounders scattered them. On the 5th Capt. Luke was ordered to Bath, and with the detachment there to proceed to Hordley Hall and Golden Grove, to protect the women and children above mentioned. The distance from Port Morante to Bath is seven mile, and thence to Golden Grove five; after carrying for the safety of the women and children, to proceed by the coast to Port Morante.—Among the clergymen murdered is Rev. Mr. Ecte, a venerable and excellent man.

As the Governor, Attorney General and other officials were all-sufficient to leave for where their presence was required, the Wolverine entered the bay, having on board twenty-one prisoners, but as martial law had been declared whence they came, they were ordered back to be tried there. The whole of Surrey county, except Kingston, has been placed under that law.

The following very sensible remarks are from the Daily Globe, and we have no doubt come very near the truth:

"The Jamaica outbreak is undoubtedly traceable to the system of slavery which once existed in Jamaica. Though a generation has passed away since the abolition of the accursed institution, neither race in Jamaica has got rid of the prejudices which it engendered. The few thousand whites in Jamaica still regard the blacks as an inferior race, to be kept in subjection; while the blacks—or many of them—regard the whites as their natural enemies. The whites, remembering that the Baptists were the originators of the agitation which resulted in emancipation, thirty years ago, eagerly jump to the conclusion that all the missionaries of that denomination are responsible for this outbreak, because Gordon and Bogle were concerned in it. Though it is evident enough that a very large portion off the black people stood faithful to the cause of law and order, they get little credit for it. The Maroons were all true, and were most effective in bringing the rascals to justice. There is no hint that either the black troops or the black police of the island failed in their duty, though black soldiers and black policemen form a large share of the force at the disposal of the Government of the island. But the Jamaica whites ignore all this, and talk as though all the blacks were guilty."

TOWN COUNCIL.

Friday, Nov. 17th, 1865.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment. Present,—Messrs. McNaughton, Burnham, Toole, Helm, Chambers, Stevenson, Chamberlen, Ormond, Williams and Leonard.

The Mayor not being present, Mr. Helm was called to take the chair.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed.

Petitions for remission of taxes were read from John Drake, John Heath, and Janet May, and referred to the Committee on Finance and Assessment.

A petition from Tobias Fitzgerald and 83 others, asking the Council to submit the By-law proposing to give liberty to the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company and their lessees to extend their railway along and across certain lands and streets in the Town of Peterboro', to a vote of the ratepayers, was read and received.

Accounts from A. Graham for $31 55, and from T. G. Hazlitt for $5 01, were referred to the committee on Finance.

The following Report of the Committee on Finance and Assessment, was read by the chairman, received and adopted.

Your committee on Finance and Assessment beg to submit the following Report, and recommend that the following accounts be paid:—

Geo. Stethem & Co.,	$7 79
Mr. E. Poole,	15 50

In reference to this account, your Committee beg to state that the Chief Constable Arnott asserts that he contracted with Mr. Poole for the collection of the sum now accounted.

John English,	$5 50
Labour on Streets, per Chief Con.	25 00
Robert Rowe	6 00

This account is for labour performed on the roof of the building we are now in, known as the Lock up, or Mayor's Office. But we have to state that five dollars were deducted from contractor for imperfect works on roof.

An account from White, Hamilton & Co. has been deferred till enquiry has been made of the Fire Department.

An account from J. & T. Douglass, for drawing stumps at the back of the Catholic Church—your Committee cannot find any minutes on the book, which gave them the authority.

Your Committee have also to report on two petitions for remission of taxes—one from Mr. John Kennedy and the other from Mr. E. Fry. Your committee beg to state that as the property when destroyed was insured, they cannot recommend an abatement; but, if not insured, an allowance to be made for that portion of the year when the premises have been unoccupied.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed) CHARLES ORMOND,
JAMES STEVENSON,
EDMUND CHAMBERLEN,
WILLIAM TOOLE.

The sum of Four Dollars be granted to pay the expenses of the woman Howe and family, who wish to go to the United States, under the direction of Charity Committee.

Moved by Mr. Toole, and seconded by Mr. Whyte,—That the matter of Michael Dennistoun's taxes be referred to the Finance Committee: also, that of George McDonald.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Burnham, and seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That By-law No. ——— entitled "A By-law to authorise the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company and their lessees to continue and construct their railway along and across certain lands and streets in the Town of Peterboro," be now read a second time, and that this Council do now go into Committee of the Whole for that purpose.

Carried on the following division:—Yeas, Messrs. Burnham, Stevenson, Ormond, Whyte, Williams and Chambers. Nays, Messrs. Toole, McNaughton, Leonard, and Chamberlen.

The Council went into Committee of the Whole on the second reading of the By-law, Mr. McNaughton in the chair.

The By-law was read in Committee of the Whole—when the Committee rose, the Council resumed, and the chairman reported the By-law read a second time with amendments.

Moved by Mr. Burnham, and seconded by Mr. Whyte,—That the By-law just read in Committee of the Whole by now read a third time and passed and that it be signed by Mayor and Clerk and have the corporate seal thereto.

In amendment it was moved by Mr. Toole, and seconded by Mr. Leonard,—That the By-law be not now read a third time, but that the matter be referred to a vote of the ratepayers, on Monday, the 27th inst., at the usual places for holding elections in the different Wards.

The amendment was lost by the casting vote of the chairman.

The original motion was therefore put and carried.

The Council adjourned for three weeks.

JAMAICA.—The Jamaica Colonial Standard of Oct. 16, publishes the official report of the British Gen. Nelson, in command at Morant Bay, in which he asserts that every insurrectionist is being summarily hung as soon as captured. Also, that her Majesty's gunboat was moved up Morant Bay and opened fire upon a collection of about eight hundred women and children; that after three shells from her 32 pounders were exploded among them they were dispersed. The tenderness of the English for rebels seems to be limited to American rebels. The are sufficiently harsh in their mode of putting down insurrections in their own colonies and in India.—Rochester Democrat.

Peterborough Literary Club.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Permit me through the columns of your influential journal to announce that the Literary Club has now commenced its second year's proceedings, and believing it necessary for the welfare of the same that the more numerous the members are the more prosperous it will become. There are a great many benefits, advantages and instruction to be derived therefrom. I have no doubt, when made aware of the fact, that a great many will avail themselves of the medium to enrich themselves by the mental culture to be had and obtained by becoming members. And, Sir, as you are aware that Literary Institutions of what nature or kind soever are and have been to all ages promotive of the most beneficial and productive of good results that can spring up and be possibly carried on in any community. While we consider the one which is now in full blast in our rising town, and of the members of which it is already composed, and their exertions to make it one of no ordinary merit and standing, you will agree with me in saying that the instigators of the same deserve great credit; and I may safely say, sir, that it cannot wane, or apathy be found connected therewith, when such men as W. H. Scott, Esq., Mr. Crerar, and many other to numerous to mention, leading speakers at debates, not speaking of the honorary members thereof, all of whom would grace any institution in the Province, while at the same time some of them do and are always ready to preside at the weekly meetings of the Club, and at any other time when notified. Now, sir, as the Club are anxious to obtain and annex to their roll as many members as possible, which will tend to its increasing success, I take the liberty through the columns of your paper of appealing to those who have not already joined, to come and do so at once. Look back at the large, respectable and intellectual audience present on last Thursday evening, and that is enough to inspire young men to oratory and member-ship; and further, the reading of "Black eyed Susan," by Mr. Crerar, in good style and taste, and by Mr. Haggart of "Irish impudence and Yankee modesty," shows of what stuff the Club is composed. Hoping to see on all occasions a similar audience as I have heretofore mentioned, and at the same time thanking the ladies of their kindness in attending, and hoping they will continue their visits and kindness, which will enhance and give a zest to our meetings.

I remain, Mr. Editor, yours, &c.,
A MEMBER.

British Order of Good Templars.

GRAND LODGE MEETING.

On Tuesday evening Nov. 7, the Grand Lodge of this Order opened its Annual Session in the Congregational Church in this town. The G. W. Chief, Rev. D. Cantlon, of Peterboro, presided over its deliberations.

Letters of excuse were read from the absent officers, and which expressed strong attachment, and unwavering allegiance to the Supreme Grand Lodge.

After the usual routine business had been gone through with, the question of a possibility of a reunion was taken up, and after several of the members had expressed their thoughts upon the subject, the following resolution was unanimously carried:

"That we the W. P. G. Lodge of British Templars of C. W., now in session, deploring, as we do, any rent in the ranks of the great Temperance movement dominate the Grand Lodge of the British American Order of Good Templars of C. W., to appoint a Committee of their members to meet a given number of our representatives, to receive, if possible, some means for restoring peace, confidence and harmony to our enemies in Templarism."

This resolution was received by the Grand Lodge of the British American Order, and they appointed five of a Committee to carry out the spirit of the resolution. The united Committees having met, no definite basis of union was agreed to; but as all were desirous of once more receiving one Order the matter was carried back to the Grand Lodges. As the British Templars were about to adjourn first, appointed the following Standing Committee for the year, on their behalf: to whom the matter was entrusted: The Executive Committee, viz.: Rev. D. Cantlon, G. W. C.; Rev. Wm. Savage, G. W. L.; James Robertson, Esq., G. W. Sec.; J. Williams, Esq., G. W. T.; Sister Robertson, G. W. V.; and Samuel Walsh, G. W. Chaplain. Bros. A. M. Phillips, Paul Stewart, W. A. Peace, Wm. Riches, and P. H. Stewart. We are glad to learn that there is a possibility of a union taking place.

The Reports of the Grand Worthy Chief, Grand Worthy Secretary, and Grand Worthy Treasurer, were exceedingly interesting and encouraging, especially so was the G. W. Secretary's, containing, as it did, a graphic account of the progress of the Order, since its formation, and giving in detail the cause of the late troubles. The reports of Sub-committees were also to the point, and will be found in the General Report when published. After six days, though pleasant and we trust profitable, Sessions, the business was got through, and the determination of all on leaving was to work during the coming year.

The election of Officers resulted as follows:

Bro. Rev. D. Cantlon, Chief
" Rev. Wm. Savage, Lecturer.
Sist. C. A. Leech, Councillor.
Bro. S. Walsh, Chaplain.
Sist. Robertson, Vice do.
Bro. Jas. Robertson, Secretary.
" J. J. Williams, Treasurer.
" A. M. Phillips, Financier.
" P. A. Stewart, Recorder.
" M. H. Eglinton, Marshal.
Sist. S. E. Stewart, Dep. Marshal.
" E. J. Williams, Inner Guard.
Bro. J. A. McColl, Outer Guard.
" W. Millichamp, Past Chief.

The next annual meeting of the Grand Lodge was appointed to be held in the town of Brighton, County of Northumberland, on the second Tuesday in November 1865.—Stratford Herald.

A Fenian Plot Discovered.

Two men now in the city jail on a charge of robbery, have disclosed to the authorities a plot of the Fenians now preparing for execution, in this city. The scheme is nothing less than the robbery of the banks. There are, according to the statement of the enemies seven emissaries from the Head Centre now in town, whose business it is to manage this enterprise. It is proposed to collect a number of men—a hundred or so—make a dash on the banks some night and then decamp.

The banks were notified of this disclosure yesterday, and measures have been taken that will render the execution of this scheme of plunder impossible.

The story told by these men is corroborative of the statement made by the Head Centre, in New York, to the correspondent of The Times that the first step in the programme of these patriots was to enter on a plundering expedition in Canada, by which the means of obtaining vessels for the expedition against Ireland would be secured.—M. Perreault made a similar statement, in Lower Canada, before he could have read the statement in The Times. There is therefore a perfect concurrence in three several and distinct statements; which is some guarantee for the correctness of the story told by the two prisoners now in the city jail. So far as we know, its correctness is undoubted. Any attempt of the kind proposed would be sure to lead to disastrous consequences to those engaged in it. There would be no possibility of their escaping; and any who might not be shot by the militia would stand a good chance of going to the penitentiary. The discovery of the plot has led to precautions being taken; but it has created many alarm among those most interested; and the public generally will now only hear of it through this announcement.—Leader.

Losses by the Cattle Plague.

The London Times gives a summary of the statistics of the cattle plague in England. It says:

Upwards of 14,000 animals are known to have been attacked by the plague since its first appearance, and of these nearly 12,000 have died. To be sure, more than 5,000 of these victims were killed to save curing, but they swell the total loss of stock. As to the recoveries there are registered just 707, which would be only five per cent on the whole attacks; but then the proportion can, of course, only be measured by the number of cases in which the cure was attempted. The metropolitan district appears to have suffered most, as might naturally be expected, though perhaps the tale is swelled in this case by the greater completeness of the reports.

Then comes the Southeastern counties and then the Eastern—which, however, according to the classification adopted, include only Essex, Norfolk and Suffolk—and then Scotland. These four districts account for over 12,000 cases out of the whole 14,000, leaving only 2,000 casualties for all the rest of England and Wales. In fact, there are whole groups of counties where but a score or two of cattle have been lost. This is certainly reassuring, but we must observe that the returns from which we quote only profess to represent the cases reported to the authorities, and are not supposed to express the actual extent of the devastation. They are correct enough, no doubt, as showing the distribution of the disorder, but not as measuring its ravages.

(From the Derry Standard, Ireland.)

We stated at the commencement that the Primate had concluded his "Charge" with an earnest exhortation to the Episcopal clergy to take high ground on the subject of "Apostolic succession," and we now subjoin this precious morsel without any comment. Speaking of the reports he had forward by the Rural Deans, in regard to the general deportment of the clergy, he said—

"If they failed in anything it was in impressing on the minds of their congregations the true character of their Church—the ancient and living branch of Christ's Holy Catholic Apostolic Church. When their church was rightly esteemed her minister's were consequently undervalued, and they found the ordained servants of God and the self-elected preacher—he who had his solemn commission to preach the Gospel to every creature transmitted to him in an unbroken line of succession from the Great Head of the Church, through Apostles, Patriarchs and Bishops, and he took the honour upon himself—regarded with but little distinction. And thus one of God's most precious gifts to the Church, a separate and settled Christian ministry, by which He has been pleased through ages gone by to preserve the precious deposit of faith from the ravages of persecution, from the corroding power of time, and from the defilement of heresy, was disregarded. This was most detrimental to religion. It deprived the clergy of their just influence; it impeded their work and it inflicted upon the people the doleful and double curse of unfixed principle and uncertain guidance. Were they not themselves answerable for this state of things? They had been taking the people's attachment to the church for granted or they had had their eyes steadily fixed on one form of false religion that they had overlooked the danger coming from an opposite quarter. They had been satisfied with teaching the general principles of true religion, without inculcating the Church's principles, which were their support and safeguard. The remedy for this was to be found in themselves. They must be prepared to defend that to which they had so solemnly assented from henceforth of all gainsayers. He believed that not only every doctrine, but every sentence of the Church was capable of sound and scriptural justification. If they were unable to defend them they should look for the cause in their own lack of knowledge. If clergymen spoke disparagingly of their formularies, and if they adopted the language and tone of dissent, and one urged defendants to the other widely they had sworn to serve, what could they expect but that their flocks would become highminded and unstable as water. Reverence for the Church, its teaching, and its ministers could be increased on the minds of the young by careful and diligent catechising and instruction in the position and history of their Church. A careful catechising in a parish would fill many pews also to his ministry."

This is an old fogy specimen of Clerical self-glorifying, on the eve and of an avant a figment as priestly assumption has ever manufactured; and then the plan of employing "Catechists" to train up children in the belief that High Church persons are wanting of mind destitute, conquered by a species of supernatural anointing derived from the Pope, is a rare device for getting up "seats" to Gospel ministry. When the highest dignitary of the Irish Church establishment can concede real to this order of priesthood, we are almost reconciled to treat it as an omen of prophetic significance, of ultimate pride having its judicial consequence equally with other forms of loftiness.

FENIAN BONDS.—The Montreal Transcript learns that the United States Government have put a stop to the proposed Fenian bonds, compelling the engravers to undertake that no further progress of the work shall be made, and to print for the printers. This is very satisfactory, but so much is not out of the mere suppression of the bonds, as it shows that the United States authorities are prepared to take all needful steps for the maintenance of their neutrality. When we find them acting thus promptly and fairly on the first overt act that came to their notice, we need hardly fear that they will be less prompt to suppress more serious issues arising. The step thus taken is a confirmation of the statement that a fair understanding has been arrived at between our Government and that of the United States.—Hamilton Times.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR VALISES.—A new enterprise has been started by the long-fingered gentry who "work" the railroad cars. When a train arrives at a station these fellows are on the watch for valises or portmanteaus lying on the seats or hanging on the hooks, but not under the eyes of their owners. When the cars stop they seize them hastily, as if they had arrived at their destination, and make off with precipitation. It is evidently a new device of the thieves, and will be heard of frequently on the railroads until exposed by the newspapers. Look out for the rascals.—Hamilton Times.

1866. PROSPECTUS 1866.

OF

The Globe Newspaper.

THE publisher of The Globe has to announce that very great improvements in the publication of the journal will be made in the coming year. A new font of beautiful type, cast specially for The Globe, has been imported from the celebrated Scotch Foundry of M'Millar and Richard, Edinburgh. The quality of the paper as it is printing the journal will be much superior to that heretofore employed. Arrangements are now being made for increased Telegraphic facilities; and the corps of Writers, Reporters and correspondents, will be strengthened.—Increased effort will be put forth in every department to render The Globe more worthy than ever before of the immense circulation it has for so many years enjoyed throughout British America.

The year 1866 is likely to be a most eventful period in the history of Canada—a year in which the current events of the day will be of the deepest interest to every inhabitant of the country.

The new Parliamentary Buildings will, early in the coming spring, be opened for the first time at Ottawa.

The Government is pledged to present to Parliament, at the opening of the session, either a Bill for completing the Confederation of all British America, or a Bill establishing a new Federal constitution for Canada alone, based on the principle of Representation by Population in the popular branch.

On the 17th of March, 1866, the American Treaty of Reciprocity will come to an end; and the negotiations for its renewal, or negotiations to meet the change, will be watched with much interest.

Arrangements for acquiring possession of, and opening the North-West territory for settlement, will be speedily made, and to these The Globe will devote special attention, as it has hitherto done to everything connected with the subject.

With the settlement of the constitutional question that has so long distracted the Province, numerous questions affecting the material progress of this country will be thrown open for consideration. Among these will be—

The Subject of Banking and Currency.
Enlarging the Canals, and otherwise improving the Internal Navigation of the country.
Reduction of the Customs Tariff.
Interest on Money.
Opening up new Territory to settlement.
Free land grants to actual settlers.
A Homestead Law.

And many other vitally important subjects in the discussion and settlement of all these matters, The Globe will, as heretofore, take an active part; and from the sources of information at the command of its conductors, it is not doubted that in its columns the earliest intelligence and the most reliable information will continue to be found.

THE DAILY GLOBE

will continue to be mailed from the office at $3 per annum, payable invariably in advance; but can be procured regularly from the newsboys in all the cities and towns throughout the Province.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE

will also be much improved in the year 1866. The paper will be of superior quality, and the new Scottish type will give it a greatly improved appearance. An editor has been engaged, whose special duty it will be to condense and arrange the matter for this edition, and to select intelligence specially adapted for country readers. A portion of each week's paper will be devoted to the publication of some interesting tale; and the markets and prices current will continue to be given with promptness and accuracy.

The Weekly Globe will continue to be published at TWO DOLLARS per annum, payable strictly in advance. Some exceptions to the rule of advance payment have been heretofore made—but from the 1st of January, 1866, no paper will be sent from the office without prepayment.

CLUB RATES.

During 1866 we will send:—

Six copies one year for	$10 00
Ten " "	15 00
Fifteen " "	22 50

and an extra copy of the Weekly to the person who gets up the club of fifteen.

Twenty-five copies one year for	35 00

and a copy of the Weekly Globe to the person who gets up the club of twenty-five.

Fifty copies one year for	65 00

and a copy of the Daily Globe one year to the person who gets up the club of fifty.

Eighty copies one year for	100 00

and a copy of the Daily.

Payment must be always in advance.

Each paper is addressed separately.

All the papers included in any club must be mailed to one Post-office.

When additional names are added to any club during the year, they must be sent to the Globe Office by the person who made up the Club; and the money sent with such additional names must be such a proportion of the year's subscription at the Club rate as will pay up to the expiration of the Club.

No exception will be made to these rules on any ground whatever.

SHERIFF'S SALE OF LANDS.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Her Majesty's County Court for the County of Peterborough, and to me directed against the lands and tenements which were of Peter Burns, deceased, at the time of his death, in the hands of Julia Burns, Administratrix of all and singular the goods and chattels which were of the said Peter Burns, to be administered, at the suit of Michael Hatchison, I have seized and taken in execution, all the right, title and interest of the said Peter Burns, in the hands of the said Julia Burns to be administered, in and to the following lands and tenements, viz:—

The west half of lot No. 24, in the 3rd concession of the Township of Douro; and all that part of lot No. 6, west of George street and south of Simcoe street, in the Town of Peterborough, and described as follows:—Commencing on Simcoe street at a distance of twenty-eight feet six inches west from the north-east corner of the said last mentioned lot, thence west twenty-eight feet six inches, thence south to within the distance of ten feet of the southern boundary of the said last mentioned lot, thence east twenty-eight feet six inches, thence north to the place of beginning; together with a right of way from Aylmer street ten feet wide.

All of which property I shall offer for sale, at the Court House, in the Town of Peterborough, on TUESDAY, the 27th day of FEBRUARY, 1866, at 12 o'clock, noon

AUTUMN LEAVES.

Robed in garest beauty,
For 'tis summer's last quest by—
Why should all things fair in nature
Hear their liveliest tints to die?
Bring upon the loftiest branches
Should the leaves be blushing so—
To impress us with their beauty
And to conquer, ere they go?

Some have chosen scarlet dresses,
Some are decked in green and gold;
Others wear their summer garments,
Though the winds are growing cold.
All seem happy, all are joyous;
Perhaps their gala day,
And they meet with blushing beauty
Ere they hasten far away.

Ah! can listen—is that music?
Is their greetings gay or sad?
Is my trouble now for sorrow—
Or because they're gay or glad?
Is it music that we're hearing,
Is it but the north wind's breath
And he tosses forth his orders,
As their sentence, now, is death.

AN OIL STORY.

Sam D——, who owned a snug little farm, was somewhat startled one fine day by an offer of more than twice the worth of it in greenbacks.

"Shall you sell it, Samuel?" asked his wife.

"Certainly I shall, said Sam, "if the excited individuals don't back out, or prove to be a couple of escaped lunatics, as I half suppose them to be," and sell it he did.

After the bargain was made and the money paid one of the men took Sam and his wife to the back of his farm, where there was a small excavation in the ground filled up by the recent rain.

"There what you've lost and we're gainers!" said the excited individual, scooping up some of the water in an old tin cup and holding it up for their inspection.

Sure enough the oil was half an inch thick on the top of the water.

Sam was indignant. If he hadn't been a fool, as he said to his wife, and just watched for indications, he might have died a millionaire.

Sam's wife was bursting with laughter, but restraining herself, she coaxed her husband into the house and told him the whole story.

"You remember when I had that cough last winter, and the doctor recommended cod liver oil, Sam, and you brought home a whole gallon because you got it cheap, and made me promise to take a dose three times a day? Well, I didn't and it stood in the closet till I cleaned the house last week, when I threw it all into the hole at the foot of the garden."

Sam saw the joke, and pocketed the cream of it in the shape of a pile of greenbacks.

At last accounts Sam was living in clover, while the oil hunters were industriously 'boring'—and may be until the time for all we know.

THE OUTRAGEOUS ORTHOGRAPHIC STYLE.—The following commences a "pharble," by the author of "John Brown's Tract," is romantic and affecting beyond anything we have lately seen:—

"There wuz a phrog onst. In fack there wuz sev'ral phrogs—but 'I my tail. There wuz a phrog, onst, and he was brot up by his respected parients cording to the weigh in which a good phrog orter go.—They tort him to squeak—owe! he spuoke so musickal—they tort him to jump, and they tort him to redleck how he wuz only a tadpowel onst, and hadn't otter look down upon them as wuz nothink but tadpowels yet. The hoam of this youthful phrog wuz a sweet hoam, indeed. The bottom of the ditch in which he resided with his parients, wuz puffectly lively; the wurrems in it wuz large, and the snaiks wuz remarkable small. What more could a phrog desire?"

SCENE IN A SANCTUM.—Enter a large strong man, with a cowhide in hand.

'Is the editor in?'

'He is.'

'You?'

'Yes.'

'I have come to settle with you.'

'Well, (capping his pistol.)

'And an article in last week's paper (editor cocks the pistol) convinced me that you need—'

'I deny your right to give it—be cautious, sir.'

'Give you what?'

'A thrashing.'

'Why, no, my dear sir, I came to pay in advance for another year.'

AN UNGODLY CITY.—The "local" of the Nashville, Tenn. Despatch gives the following as one days record of crime in that ungodly city:—1, "A spirited dog fight," 2, "Robbery of an actress;" 3, "Highway robbery;" 4, "Sad case of death from destitution:" 5, "A whole family poisoned with arsenic; 6, "A bloody street fight;" 7, Horrible tragedy—a man kills his wife and is shot by his neighbors;" 8, "Another desperate and bloody street fight;" 9, "Negro guard killed by a dray driver;" An exciting horse race took place in the afternoon, and the day's entertainment closed with a destructive fire.

A love-sick swain desirous to indicate the extent and character of his lore for the empress of his heart, exclaimed:—"Oh! Miss Brown, my affection for you is as strong as—as—as—hem! as the butter they gave us for dinner. The young lady was satisfied, as she boarded at the same house. The bargain was instantly struck, and they went in search of a squire.

A son of the Emerald Isle, on being told that a friend of his had put his money into the stocks replied, "Och, an' is's there ye are! Troth an' I never had a farthing in the stocks; but I've had my brogues there oftener than I liked sure."

"Sam, why am members of parliament like de fishes?" "I don't meddle wid de subject', Pomp." "Well, don't ye see trigger, because dey am so fond of de-bate."

Aunt Betsy said many good things—among others that a newspaper was like a wife, because every man ought to have one of his own.

It is easy to tell a hard drinker—his offence is always brandied on the end of his nose.

Some writer defines a "stuffed duck" to be a young lady crammed with flattery by her lover.

No man alone can make it; but a couple of women can make it, without hands. What is it? A quarrel.

At what time of life may a man be said to belong to the vegetable kingdom? when long experince has made him sage.

Why are people who stutter not to be believed?—Because they are always breaking their word.

A wave by which many a poor fellow has been carried away—the wave of a lace edged cambrick handkerchief.

SHERIFF'S SALE OF LANDS.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas and to me directed, at the suit of MELAWCTHON H SEYMOUR, HAMILTON H. WHITNEY and CHARLES EDWARD SEYMOUR, Plaintiffs, and against the lands and tenements of WILLIAM SNYDER, Defendant, I have seized and shall offer for sale by Public Auction, at the Court House, Peterboro', on TUESDAY, the NINTH day of JANUARY, A. The Great Original Painting OF THE BATTLE OF THE BOYNE!

By BEN. WEST, Pres. Royal Academy.

SPARKES, BOURNE & Co., would respectfully announce that they have now ready for delivery a splendidly got up COLORED LITHOGRAPH of this magnificent HISTORICAL PAINTING, representing the Battle at the moment of the death of the gallant DUKE SCHOMBERG; and which is published on the finest paper—size 22 × 28 inches.

This Picture—a faithful copy of the great Original—will be found incomparably superior to anything ever offered to the public either in this country or Great Britain. It has been executed by the first Artists of the day, and no trouble or expense has been spared to make it worthy of the justly celebrated Painter, and the GREAT HISTORICAL FACT which it represents, and which ought never to be forgotten by those who now enjoy the CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY which this event, more than any other in our history, was the means of establishing and perpetuating.

In times like these, when the principles of our Forefathers are being assailed on every hand, it is especially needful for us to bear in mind from whence sprung our Constitutional form of Government; and nothing contributes more to aid us in keeping in remembrance those momentous passages in our history than faithful representations by great Masters. And certainly no Historical Subject has been more ably treated than the above event by this celebrated Painter.

In presenting this Picture to the Protestant Community, and especially to those who are more feelingly alive to the vast benefits conferred on us by the ever memorable events of 1690, the Publishers feel every confidence that their efforts will be fully appreciated, and that this Picture will find an honored place in every Protestant home in the British Provinces.

AMERICAN

Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering

SEWING MACHINE! COMPANY,

627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-holes possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produce a fabrique of varied colors uncelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c., &c., it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c., &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where Instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMETS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in TUNE than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old harp form of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Barili,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry,	Charles Fradel

Mr. SIGISMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm HENRY FRY, late musical eri ic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal versimilitude, that crowning excelence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5.—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument: an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr. S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN SEWING MACHINES.

EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms, { 536 Broadway, New York, 232 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nansook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it alm st impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

But in a more especial manner do we elicit the patronage of

Merchant Tailors,	Corset Makers,
Coach Makers,	Gaiter Fitters,

WHAT I LIVE FOR.

I live for those who love me,
For those I know are true,
For the heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit, too;
For those human ties which bind me,
For the task my God assigned me,
For the hopes that beam within me;
And the good that I can do.

I live to hail that season,
By gifted minds foretold,
When men shall live by reason,
And not alone for gold;
When man to man united,
And every wrong thing righted,
The world shall be truth lighted,
As Eden was of old.

I live to hold communion
With all that is divine,
To feel there is a union
'Twix nature's heart and mine,
To profit my affection,
Reap truths from fields of fiction,
Grow wiser from conviction,
And fulfil each great design.

I live for those who love me,
For those who know me true,
For the heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit, too;
For the wrong that needs resistance,
For the cause that lacks assistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that I can do.

SNAGSBY.

A GOOD STORY FOR YOUNG CLERKS.

When the widow Templeton obtained a situation for her son George in the office of Messrs. Longhurst, Latimer & Co., she thought herself peculiarly successful. As for himself he was confident of rising to be a partner, and in (imagination) saw his own name in the firm. George was fourteen years old. His mother had done all she could to prepare him for a situation in a respectable office; he could write a good hand; was quick at accounts; an intelligent civil and obliging boy, willing to learn, and willing to work, and perfectly trustworthy, so everybody thought.

The firm of Longhurst, Latimer & Co., was an old established concern; the sort of place in which it is difficult to obtain a situation without first-rate recomendations. But Mr. Latimer attended the same chapel as George's mother, and he was a kind hearted man and took a fancy to her boy; and so it came to pass that, when George was old enough, he offered to take him into his employment, and to give him one pound and four shillings per month was a great sum so George thought, and so thought George's mother. Six shillings per week—nigh a shilling a day—surely it was a very heavy fortune to begin with. And then the duties were not heavy. George had to go at nine in the morning, and he left at six in the evening, and he had one hour in the middle of the day for his dinner time; and what he had to do in the office was to sit on a high stool, an I look through a little trap in the waistcoat partition, and answer people who made enquiries, sometimes he'd go to write in stages, sometimes to addre s envelopes, and always to keep charge of the postage stamps. For this purpose a quantity of postage stamps were given into his care, and he had to keep account how many were used. All this was very easy. "Anybody," as Snagsby said "could do it." And so they might.

Who was Snagsby? Snagsby was another lad in the office, aged sixteen, who wore a tail coat and stick-up-collar, and tried to look like a man, in which he never very well succeeded. But Snagsby soon became George's oracle, that is to say his chief councilor. George believed in Snagsby. Snagsby patronized George. Snagsby treated George as an inferior, as a small boy, as one who knew nothing, but one whom he—Snagsby the great—condescended to notice, and for which acts of kindness the fidelity of George were but a poor repayment to Snagsby! Why, Snagsby had been to the races; he had the honor of being acquainted with some body who had known somebody who was a great fighting-man, and kept a public house somewhere in the Strand; besides he was often going to the theatre, and knew a heap of things all unknown to George. Of course he did not tell the firm of Longhurst, Latimer & Co., what a remarkable man he (Snagsby) was, and how proud they ought to be to have him in their office; but he told George so, and he believed him.—Neither did he in any conversation with the firm, address them as "Governors," nor describe his salary as "mean screw" neither did he inform them "Snagsby had his eyes open." All this sort of thing he reserved for George, and George believed in Snagsby.

I mentioned that it was part of George's duty to look after the postage stamps.—Nothing surprised him more in attending to this part of the work than the number of letters which Snagsby had to write. That gentleman was continually demanding stamps, with the order—"Stick it up to miscellaneous;" and to his dismay, George by-and-by ascertained that the number of letters actually sent out was less than the number of stamps consumed. He told Snagsby, and that young gentleman laughed and made fun of him, finally setting his book right for him; that is making the accounts of letters and stamps correspond. George was very unhappy about it, scarcely knowing whether he was doing right or wrong; but he had a shrewd suspicion that Snagsby was not altogether honest. But then Snagsby was so kind and so great a man. And how could he say anything to him or about him? Snagsby was not to be resisted, except by a strong effort, and that effort George did not make. His mother noticed the alteration in him, and tried to find out the cause, but she could not. She saw that he had less care for chapel, less care about school friends, less care for herself, than he had before he went into the world and she spoke to him seriously and prayed for him.

And now Snagsby began to take George out with him. At first George declined. He could not go without letting his mother know, which seemed to Snagsby an highly absurd thing; but it was easy to let his mother know that a friend at the office had asked him home and, to obtain her leave to go. Well, they did not go home to Snagsby's but up the river to Kew, and by rail at ten o'clock. No harm in that.—George told his mother all about it, and she was pleased that he had found a friend. And Snagsby came home to see George and made himself very agreeable, and played on the flute from the Union tune-book some plaintive music that George's father used to play, and that set the widow's tears a flowing. Snagsby [so the widow said] was a very nice young man, but George was not happy. The postage stamp book had been made up several times. George had borrowed a few shillings from Snagsby and to pay it back had—well, well, Snagsby made the book all right, and George was miserable. The theatre was a place which George had never been to in all his life, and when Snagsby described its attractions he felt a strong desire to see a play. What harm could there be in it? that is what Snagsby wanted to know; and as George was not prepared with an answer, a note was posted to Mrs. Templeton, stating that —well, well, Snagsby wrote what George was to say, and George copied it, and put his name to it, and his mother thought he had gone to hear lecture on the human eye. George saw the play was—I have not the least idea what it was, and I don't believe George had, for he kept thinking of the letter he had writ n and the p stage stamp book locked up in the office desk. He was very miserable; he could not laugh when the audience laughed, nor weep when they wept. He sat there confused, stunned, and wondered what he should do, and what would become of him.

The very next day George was promised to be petty-keeper, and from this petty cash Snagsby drew largely. The misery which George had felt grew less as time wore on. He grew older and less sensitive. He went often to the play, and laughed and enjoyed himself with Snagsby. Where did the money come from? Well, the petty cash expenditure was rather heavy; but nobody said anything about it. His wages were increased to sixteen shillings a week. He began to assume a new position. He though himself almost a man, and under Shangsby's instructions began to smoke and made himself very ill in the effect to acquire that useless practice. He was not careful now as to ten o'clock, no question were asked; and so he did as he pleased, or as Snagsby pleased, and never seemed to notice his mother's anxiety, or to reflect on his own danger.

But one day he and Snagsby had a quarrel. That young gentleman made an extravagant demand on the petty cash, and because his wishes were not complied with, flew into a passion, and said many hard and bitter things—and when he went home he had almost made up his mind to tell his mother what he had done. But his mother had been attacked by sudden illness, and could not be disturbed. Watching beside her, George thought over the folly and wickedness of his conduct. He remembered the old lesson of truthfulness and honesty which he had impressed upon him, and kneeling beside her bed he wept and prayed for pardon. On the next morning Mrs. Templeton had in some degree recovered; but George had made up his mind to go and tell the whole truth to Mr. Latimer. On reaching the office he found Mr. Latimer was there, and had just inquired for him; and with a trembling frame and beating heart he went up to his master's private room.

Mr. Latimer was carefully reading a letter when George went in, but he had motioned to him to sit down, and said nothing to him for several minutes. On looking up he nodded familiarly and asked how was George, and how was George's mother! George could scarcely reply that his mother was ill in body, and he was sick in heart; that if Latimer would allow him to do so he wanted to say something of importance; but Mr. Latimer interrupted him saying:—

"My dear Geo ge, I mean to make you a present, five and twenty pounds; eh! what do you say to that?"

Indeed, indeed, sir," said George, I did not deserve this; indeed, indeed!"

"Indeed, indeed," said the old gentleman, "deserving or undeserving the five-and-twenty pounds are yours. This, I think, will make things straight."

He handed over one pound nine, and a written paper containing an exact list of every penny that George had taken. The whole sum amounted to twenty-and-three pounds eleven shillings. George nearly fainted; he fell on his knees before Mr. Latimer and begged forgiveness.

"Frankly and freely I forgive you. Do not fear that your folly and your crime shall be heavily punished; I overlook both. Snagsby has led you into most of the mischief, and acting as you might have expected he has betrayed you to screen himself. What has become of him I don't know; I shall not enquire. He has gone off with more than double the amount which you have taken; but I wish the matter to be kept secret; and I am resolved to give you another opportunity of being what you ought to be. No one shall know it, not even your mother, what has taken place. You are welcome to what you have taken; you shall remain in my employment; but beware of evil company; beware of forsaking the old paths; beware of forgetting your God. There, go."

And so, refusing to hear any more about it, Mr. Latimer dismissed George from his room.—George never forgot that interview. He turned over a new leaf; he began to have a new heart. And though the up-hill work was harder than the downward course at the first, he persevered and was happy. What became of Snagsby I do not know. Some time since, however, I understand he was arrested on suspicion of forgery, but of this I am not quite sure.

A STORY FROM REAL LIFE.

'What do you mean by such carelessness?' exclaimed John Doring to his son William, a young lad of twelve years.—'Take that!' he added, striking a heavy blow on the side of the head; 'and that, and that!' repeating the blows as he spoke, the last of which knocked the boy over a plow that was standing by his side.

'Get up now and go in the house,' continued the unnatural father, 'and see if you can't keep out of mischief for a while, and stop that crying, or I'll give you something to cry for!'

The boy started for the house, struggling to suppress his sobs as he went.

'It is astonishing,' said Doring, addressing a neighbor named Hanford, who was near in a barn, and of course had seen and heard all that had passed, 'how troublesome some boys are. Just see those oats now that I've got to pick up for that boy's careless-aness,' and he pointed to a measure of oats which William had accidentally overturned.

'And it was for that trifle that you assaulted your child and knocked him down?' replied Mr. Hanford in a sorrowful tone.

Doring looked from the oats in surprise, and retorted.

'Assaulted my child and knocked him down! Why, what do you mean, neighbor Hanford?'

'Just what I say. Did you knock him over the plow?'

'Why—well—no. He kind a stumbled and fell over it,' doggedly replied Doring.

'Do you go against parental authority? Haven't I a right to punish my own children?'

'Certainly you have,' responded the other, 'in a proper manner, and in a proper spirit, but not otherwise. Do you think that a father has a right to revenge himself upon his child?'

'Of course not, but whose talking about revenge?'

'Well, friend Doring, let me ask you another question; for what purpose should a child be punished?'

'Why to make it better, and to do it good of course,' quickly answered Doring.

'For any other?' quietly answered Hanford.

'Well, no, not that I can think of just now,' replied Doring, thoughtfully.

'And now, my friend,' kindly continued Mr. Hanford, "do you suppose your treatment to your son a few moments ago did him any good, or has increased his respect and affection for you? The boy, I venture to say, is utterly unconscious of having done any wrong, and yet you suddenly assault him with anger and violence, and gave him a beating which no penitentiary convict can be subjected to without having the outrage inquired into by a legislative committee. But let me tell you a long story. You know my son Charles?'

'The one that is preaching in Charleston?'

'Yes, you have probably noticed that he is lame?'

'I have noticed it,' said Doring, 'and asked how it happened, and he told me he got hurt when a boy.'

'Yes;' responded Mr. Hanford with emotion, 'the dear boy never could be made to say that it was his father's brutality. But listen,' he continued, as he saw that Doring was about to speak.

'When Charles was about the age of your son William, he was one of the most active boys I had ever seen. I was fond of him, and especially of his physical beauty and progress. But unfortunately I was cursed with an irritable and violent temper, and was in the habit of punishing any children under the influence of passion and vengence, instead of from the dictates of reason, duty, and enlightened affection.

'One day Charles offended me by some boyish and trifling misdemeanour, and I treated him almost exactly as you treated your boy a few moments ago. I struck him violently, and he fell upon a pile of stone at his side, and injured his left side so badly that the result was, he was crippled for life,' said Mr. Hanford in tones of deepest sorrow and remorse, and covering his face with his hands.

A period of oppressive silence followed, which was at last broken by Mr. Hanford saying.

'When I found that my boy did not rise from the stones on which he had fallen, I seized him by the arm and pulled him to his feet, his look arrested my alarm, and I asked him if he was hurt.

'I am afraid that I am, pa,' he mildly answered, clinging to my arm for support.

'Where?' I asked in great alarm, for notwithstanding my brutality I fairly idolized the boy.

'Here,' he replied, laying his hand upon his hip.

'In silence I took him in my arms and carried him to his bed, from which he never arose the same bright, active glorious boy that I had so cruelly struck down on that pile of stones. But after many months he came forth; a saddened little fellow, hobbling on a crutch?'

Here Mr. Hanford broke down and wept like a child, and the tears also rolled down Mr. Doring cheeks. When he resumed, Mr. Hanford said:

'This is a humiliating narrative, neighbor Doring, and I would not have it related to you had I not supposed that you needed the lesson which it contains. It is impossible for me to give you an adequate notion of the suffering that I have undergone on account of my brutal rashness to my boy. But fortunately it has been ever ruled to my own good, and to that of my own family also. The remedy, though terrible, was complete, and no other child of mine has ever been punished by me, except when I was in possession and exercise of my best faculties, and when my sense of duty has been chastened and softened by reason and affection.

I devoted myself to poor Charley from the time he left his bed, and we came to understand one another as I think but few fathers and sons ever do. The poor boy never blamed me for blighting so much happiness for him, and I have sometimes tried to think that his life has been made happier on the whole than it would have been had I not been taught my duty through his sacrifice. Still neighbor Doring, I should be sorry to have you and your son William pass through a similar ordeal.'

'I trust that we shall not,' emphatically and gravely re-ponded Doring. 'I thank you for your story, friend Hanford, and I shall try and profit by it.'

And he did profit by it, and we hope that every parent who is capable of striking his child in anger or petulance that reads this sketch from life will profit by it.

Give Him the "Mitten."

Seventeen years ago, there was a fair girl so pure, so lovely, refined that she still rises to my mind as almost akin to angels. She was wooed and ultimately won by a handsome young man of considerable wealth. He sported a fine team, delighted in hunting, and kept a fine pack of hounds. He neither played cards, drank wine, nor used tobacco. He had no occupation, no calling, no trade. He lived on his money, the interest of which alone would have supported a family handsomely. I never saw the fair bride again until a few days ago.—Seventeen years had passed away, and with them her beauty and her youth; her husband's fortune and his life, during the latter part of which they lived in a log cabin on the banks of the Ohio River, near Blennerhasset's Island—a whole family in one single room, subsisting on water, fat bacon and corn bread. The husband had no business capacity—he was a gentleman of education, of refinement, of noble impulses; but when his money was gone he could get no employment, simply because he did not know how to do anything. For a while he floundered about, first trying one thing, then another, but "failure" was written on them all. He, however, finally obtained a situation; the labor was great, the compensation small—it was that of starvation. In his efforts to discharge his duty acceptably, he overworked himself and died, leaving his widow and six girls in utter destitution. In seventeen years the sweet, and joyous, and beautiful girl had become a broken-hearted, care-worn, poverty-stricken widow, with a houseful of helpless children!

Young woman! if a rich young man asks you to marry him, and has no occupation, or trade or calling by which he could make a living if he were thrown on his own resources, you may give him your respects, but "give him the mitten."

Whatever may be a young man's qualities, if he is fond of going to the saloon, "refuse" him.

If a young man shows by his conversation that he is an admirer of fine horses, and is pretty well acquainted with the qualities and "time" of the best racing nags of the country, when he asks your hand, give him the "mitten" only.

If you ever hear a young man speak of his father and mother disrespectfully, or contemptuously, do not encourage his attentions; he will do the same of you, and in many ways will make your heart ache before you die.

Fashion in Hair—Braids to Succeed Waterfalls.

The ultimatum has gone forth from the great centre of civilization and fashion, declaring that waterfalls are no more to be worn by the dames of the haut monde.—Paris has spoken, and from the rising to the setting of the sun there is general and submissive acquiescence to the immutable and irrevocable decision of the hair-dresser and perruquiers of the Rue de Trenchet. The waterfall, or chignon, mistakenly attributed to the artistic genius of the fair-haired Empress of the French, was first worn at a grand reception given at Buckingham Palace, the occasion being the return of the Prince of Wales to his ancestral halls from his sojourn in America. The dignified and titled dames of the British aristocracy on that night essayed the attempt to eclipse the acknowledged leader of the fashion in Europe, and they succeeded so well that, but a very short time after, this new and novel mode of dressing the hair was adopted at the court of Eugenie, with the proverbial enthusiasm and abandon of the French.—The ingenious inventor who gave birth to this method of irrigating the hair, would never in his wildest visions have dreamt of such universal popularity for his coiffure ae Niagara, as it was called.

But that period of waterfalls has gone by, never to return, it is to be hoped, and instead of those disgusting and artificial bags, which have afforded such a field of witticism and criticism, we are to have a modification of the Pompadour style, with encircling puffs and Grecian braids, trimmed with white roses, oak leaves, and clusters of moss.

There is a great rivalry among the leading hair dressers as to style, and one well-known artiste in hair, after a great and unwearied research has developed an idea of his own, to which he has given the name of Imperatrice de Russe. In place of the heavy and cumbersome waterfalls, there are three braids, of three ply each, entwined at the back of the head, surmounted by an aureola, such as is seen around the heads of the Madonnas of the old masters. The front of the hair is combed back in the Pompadeur style, and what is known as "spit curls," pendant in the region of the auricular organs. The effect is very pleasing, and when glistening with gold or diamond powder, under the refulgence of a chandelier at a ball or dinner party, presents a brilliant appearance.

Some curious caves have lately been discovered in Fife by a party of Scotch antiquarians. On the wall on one of the caves were found sculptured the forms of elephants, birds, fish, and other objects. It is supposed that in the early ages of Christianity, these caves were used as places of worship by the anchorites, and that St. Adrian dwelt in one.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1865.

We have been forced to omit our usual article on politics and passing events, in order to gratify some who wished us to insert communications. We trust that our readers will be equally enlightened and entertained by our correspondents.

The Head Centre of the Irish Fenians in Custody.

James Stephens the Head Centre of Fenianism in Ireland, the founder and guiding power, and the main-spring of the whole organization, was arrested on the 11th of November, at his residence in Dublin. Mr. Stephens was enjoying himself in the metropolis, in a handsome and elegantly furnished mansion. The bill of furniture amounted to £6000. The grounds were neatly laid out. The whole establishment was complete, and known as the Fairfield House. Here Mr. Stephens and three or four other noted agitators lived, and directed in a very quiet way their revolutionary designs. When arrested, he seems to have been taken by surprise; it was at night; he refused to let the police in at first, but they broke open the doors, and followed him into the bed-room, and then, pistol in hand, saw him dress himself. Stephens' companions, Duffy, Brophy and Kickham, were asleep in an adjoining room, where they were aroused by Her Majesty's servants, and on seeing them the trio rubbed their eyes, and submitted. On the person of Duffy were found an order for $7627, dated New York, and $200 in gold; and Stephens had also £23 in gold. Full particulars have not been received.

The way the Fenian Money goes.

News from New York says that the Fenian Flag was raised last week over the Fenian Head Quarters, Union Square, in honor of the celebration of the evacuation of the city by the British in 1783. The flag-staff is the highest in New York City. The Fenian Head Quarters is now in full headway, and business is being transacted with all the regularity of an organized Government. The Bureaus of Secretary of War, Secretary of the Treasury, and other Departments, are properly organized and at work. The building is one of the finest in the city, and its interior arrangements, furniture, carpetings, desks, &c., are of an elegant description. The edifice is leased at $1,000 a month. Fenian dupes must be numerous.

The Hon. Mr. McGee's Speech.

The friends of the Hon. T. D. M'Gee, lately gave him a dinner, at which several eminent men of Montreal and also of the Government were present.

In our issue to-day will be found selections from Mr. M'Gee's speech on the occasion, to which we direct the attention of his country men in this section of the country. If Mr M'Gee speaks the sentiments of his mind, and we have no reason to doubt it, Irishmen, and of course Roman Catholic Irish included, ought to be satisfied with their position in British America, and this every right thinking man will at once admit. He also assures us that Fenianism is almost unknown in Canada, except among skedaddlers who fled from the drafts, who were too cowardly to fight and are now too lazy to work. Mr. M'Gee points to the true liberation of Ireland and the Irish:—to deliver them from want and to try to elevate them in the social scale, so that they may rise to be equal to the Negro at least, and above being the scoff and reproach of their Yankee "Losses."—We recommend the speech to the attention of Roman Catholics in the County of Peterborough. We only regret that space will not permit us to give it entire.

Hugh McKinnon, Deputy Chief of Police in Hamilton, and brother to the man who has figured so notoriously in the Hamilton Courts of late, attacked the Leader's correspondent and chastised him rather unceremoniously for his reports and structures concerning himself and his brother. He has been fined $100 and cost to Jail for 6 months. Served him right.

At the request of G. S. Daintry, Esq., Lessee of the Cobourg and Peterboro Railway, we insert his letter which appeared in the Review of last week, and ask for it a perusal. Light on any subject is not to be despised.

A horrible murder has been committed in Brooklyn; the man was murdered by his companion or acquaintance, and robbed of about $20,000. Later news says the murderers have been found out.

Prison and Asylum Reports for 1864.

We have received a copy of the Reports of the Inspectors of the above institutions for 1864, which contains considerable information concerning the Prisons and Asylums of the Province. These statistics may be of some are in social science compilations, and may afford information from which rules may be deduced for ameliorating punishment and lessening crime. The total number of prisoners for the year, in Upper Canada Jails, was 6216—3962 men, 1985 women, 311 boys, 163 girls. The total costs of the Jails is put at $81,134. The total earning of the prisoners, $693—a very small sum indeed, considering what might be done.

The total number in Lower Canada Jails for the year was 13,016—7533 men, 4729 women, 568 boys, 286 girls. The total cost of the Jails, $134,954; and the earnings of the prisoners, $3962.40. In Lower Canada, therefore, the prisoners are made to do more to support themselves than in Upper Canada.

In regard to our own County Jail, the number of inmates for 1864 is set down at 66: 56 men, 6 women, and 4 boys. The cost, $1229; and the average cost per head per day 10½ cents. There does not appear any earnings. It would appear from the Report that the large towns and cities only employed the prisoners at manual labour. That this is so, is surely to be regretted, as it does seem possible that an individual could earn, at almost any work, the sum of 10½ cents, and thus support himself. In favour of this view, we quote from the Report relating to the Penitentiary:—"The earnings of the female prisoners for the year reached the sum of $3,348—a large amount considering the number of the prisoners, (not exceeding 60 on the average, total 66); or, thus, about $39.60 each." Their keeping, at 10½ cents per week amount to $38.38; and hence they can be made to support themselves. Unfortunately, we have no table of what the males did. The cost of the prisoners in the Montreal Jails per head was only six and one-sixth cents.

On the subject of labour, the report of one the Inspectors is worth being brought before the public:

The carelessness or indisposition of many of the Gaol officials to carry out the regulations and suggestions of the Inspectors, especially that of providing labor for the prisoners, is a powerful means of neutralizing the advantages which the Gaol might otherwise effect.

There are two modes of punishing the prisoners, calculated to make his imprisonment corrective, or, at least deterrent.

One is by separate, or, perhaps still better, by occasional solitary confinement, a punishment most unpalatable to the ordinary gaol-goer, and the other, by hard daily labor, which is generally equally disagreeable.

In carrying out the former mode of treatment no great effort nor sacrifice of convenience on the part of the Gaoler is required, but as the latter would cause some trouble not hitherto experienced, and would probably unduly stimulate the usual torpid habits of his assistants, the experiment is left for other generations to deal with.

The excuse usually given the Inspectors on the subject of labor is, "That stone for the prisoners to break cannot be obtained," or if it could be procured, that when broken "the Town Council would give no compensation for breaking it," or, in some cases, "the corporations would not take it even without charge, being able to get gravel more conveniently."

But surely an intelligent Gaoler should be able to devise other modes of labor for his prisoners than that alone of breaking stone. He should be a man of sufficient ingenuity not to allow a single prisoner sentenced to hard labor to remain a day in Gaol without employment of some kind or other.

In the absence of any more useful occupation, would it not be better to employ our prisoners even in moving the stone or cord-wood from place to place, and to repeat the operation daily, to allow them to indulge in continual idleness, rehearsing their wicked exploits, and hatching mischiefs.

In some Gaols they are treated so tenderly, as to be sparsed the cutting of the wood for their own stoves.

What, I would ask, is to prevent those officers, if zealously disposed, from establishing, within the Gaol, such works as the making of split and birch brooms, axe-handles, bed and foot mats of straw, flag or corn husks, by the men, and of knitting, making straw, rag and husk mats, listing shoes and straw hats by the women: yet, not one of these is done in any Gaol that I know of, if I except a little knitting in, perhaps, one Gaol out of every twenty.

The cities furnish the greatest number of criminals: Montreal no less than 4036; Quebec next, 1728; Toronto, 1595.

The most curious part of the Report refers to the Lunatic Asylum; from which it is found that there are nearly 1,500 insane persons in Upper, and 1,400 in Lower Canada, and that neither sections of the Province has accommodation for more than two-thirds of these numbers—thus depriving about 1000 of these unfortunate creatures of the care they need and of the treatment they require. An elaborate Report of Dr. Workman, on Asylums and their Inmates, Insanity and its causes, we must leave to refer to again.

From our Police Court report, it will be seen that an unfortunate man named Gilbert Peck is again in Jail, and must stand his trial at the next Court of Quarter Sessions, for having stolen a sheep, the property of Mrs. Conway, from Yonderly Farm. Mrs. Conway's man, it appears, traced the sheep to Peck's house, and then found the skin at the Tannery of Mr. Clark, Ashburnham; but he had purchased it from Thomas Hall, Butcher, who had bought it from Peck. It will be seen that Peck admits his guilt, and pleads a starving family as an excuse. This, however, could not always be his plea; for not long since he was tried for robbing clothes-lines and stealing harness—and then narrowly escaped getting a term in the Provincial Penitentiary. This time, however, the crime comes home too plain to admit a chance of escape; and thus, by giving way to his covetousness, he deprives his family of whatever support he may have been able to afford them. It will be admitted that it is a boon to the community to get clear of such a character; yet there is deep cause for sorrow, that a man who might earn an honest livelihood, for the gratification of a peculiative disposition, has deprived his family of the protection which he could have afforded, and has brought himself to a shameful and ignominous position in the County Jail, and may yet go to the penitentiary.

Grand Concert.

A concert in aid of the Bazaar of St. John's Church, and under the management of Mr. Heathfield, will be held in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening, the 5th of December. The Port Hope "Glee Club" are announced to take part in the proceedings. To hear them will amply repay and fully satisfy all who may go—we are sure. In other respects we have no doubt but that the evening will be pleasant and let us hope, profitable.

Sad Accident.

On Sabbath last, Mr. J. McIntyre, of Douro, was coming down George St. in a buggy, the horse by some means started to run; turning round Ormond & Gilmour's Store rather short, the buggy was upset when Mrs. McIntyre was thrown out and had her arm broken. Dr. Harvey, we learn, was immediately sent for and set it.

Grand Bazaar

We invite the attention of our readers to the Bazaar in aid of the Separate School Fund. It will commence on Monday 18th December, and continue the remainder of the week.

New Publication.

A new weekly paper published in New York City, and styled "The Home News," has been received. It purports to be devoted to the interests of Irish Protestants in America. It has our warmest sympathies.

Cholera in Jerusalem.

On the 23rd of October, the cholera was making sad ravages in the city of Jerusalem. Business was stopped, shops closed, and the inhabitants fleeing in all direction.

The Committee of the Peterborough Protestant Home, beg to acknowledge with thanks the receipt of $5.75, the proceeds of a service at the Baptist Chapel, North Dummer, on Thanksgiving day.

The Lady's Friend.

The DECEMBER number of this favorite magazine is a superb one. The leading steel engraving, in illustration of the text,

"Children's children are the crown of old men,
And the glory of children are their fathers."

is one that will go home to many hearts. The engraved title page is truely beautiful—it is a gem of art. It represents The Past and The Future—while, around,

"The little birds sing East, and the little birds sing West" to use a well-known line from Mrs. Browning's beautiful "Rhyme of the Duchess May." The Double Colored Steel Fashion Plate for this number will be pronounced by the ladies "superb," or else we are very greatly mistaken. Then there are engravings of the new fashions in jackets, cloaks, embroidery, coiffures, bonnets, &c. The literary matter is excellent as usual:—"Only a child," (illustrated) by Miss Frost; "Over Sea," by Florence Percy; "My Court-ship," "My beautiful Sister," by Louise Chandler Moulton; "Wrecked," by Mrs. A. L. Muzzey; "Mr. Brown's Boys," by Frances Lee; "Changes in the Household of Cecelia Bird, Spinster," by Mrs. Margaret Hosmer, "Giovanno Tosini," by Miss Auber Forester, "Told by the Sun," by Beatrice Colonna; New Publications, Receipts, The Fashions, &c. &c.—making altogether a splendid number.

Price $2.50 a year: 2 copies $4.00; 8 copies (and one gratis) $16. Now is the time to get up clubs for 1866. Specimen numbers for this purpose will be sent for 15 cents. Wheeler & Wilson's celebrated Sewing Machines are furnished as Premiums in certain cases. The prospectus of this magazine for next year embodies a splendid list of contributors.

POLICE COURT.

November 27th, 1865.

Gill. Peck, an old offender, was in Court this morning to the charge of having stolen a sheep from Mrs. Conway, Yonderly Farm, on the 24th instant.

William Morrison deposed to the sheep having been stolen, having traced foot-marks of men and sheep to Peck's house, and testified to the skin shown in Court as being the skin of the sheep so stolen.

Thomas Hall, of Ashburnh m. deposed to have bought the skin now shown from the prisoner Peck, on Saturday morning.

The prisoner, in reply to the charge, admitted having taken the sheep, but said his family were starving and he had to do it.

He was committed to take his trial at the Quarter Sessions; and Thomas Hall and Wm. Morrison were bound to appear to give evidence in the matter.

OIL.—Further Indications.

Yesterday at four o'clock, Sheriff Hall, Esq., H. T. Strickland, T. F. Nichol, and F. H. Knapp, Esquires, with several others, visited the borings at Blythe Mills, when one of the company present set a lighted match to the top of the bore, which instantly ignited and continued to burn with great vehemence for a space of ten minutes, when it was extinguished by means of the sand pump being lowered; an effort was previously made to put out the flame by means of buckets of water, but without effect. In about three minutes after the sand pump had been taken from the bore, a great escape of froth fermented from the hole, resembling soap suds, and which froth emitted large and continuous quantities of gas, which readily burnt on a lighted match being applied, entirely consuming the whole of the frothy discharge. On several pailsful of the liquid being thrown into the river, the oil was seen in large quantities floating on the surface of the water. All present expressed their entire satisfaction of the success of the future, and Mr. Cragie affirmed his confidence that if the well were now pumped, a good paying well would be the result.

COM.

Peterboro', Nov. 22nd, 1865.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—Inclosed I send you an article which, as you will see, was intended for the Review; but the Editor thinking it would not suit his views to have both sides of any one question go to his readers, refused to insert it. Would you have the goodness to give it an insertion in your widely circulated Journal, and much oblige.

Yours, &c.,

WM. TOOLE.

Peterboro', Nov. 29, 1865.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—I notice in your issue of the 24th inst., an article headed "Councillor Toole's Trickery," which at first sight I considered unworthy of notice, on account of the low petty spleen exhibited therein, which, however, duly characterizes the columns of that hireling journal; and by persuading myself that the labourer is worthy of his hire, I thought perhaps you were not so much to blame after all. And being anxious to set the matter right before your readers, I now proceed by asserting that the article in question is a tissue of falsehoods. You say that I drafted a bogus petition and gummed it over the original. I challenge you for the proof of it; in which if you fail, I may be under the necessity of compelling you to retract. It is true I drafted a petition, but neither attached it to the original, nor did I suggest that course. It is also true that I am an interested freeholder on King and some other streets in Peterboro'; but I have yet to learn, sir, that you are an interested freeholder in Peterboro' or elsewhere. And as to my Literary defects, I challenge you, sir, with all your literary accomplishments, to come and contest the next election with me in the North Ward, and see if the ratepayers with whom you sympathise so deeply, will not prefer to bear with my infirmities, rather than to have a learned know nothing represent them. Nor will I even hint that you acquired your high literary attainments at a Poor School in your native country.

With respects, I am yours,

W. TOOLE.

Peterboro', Nov. 29, 1865.

Railway Extension.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Review.

SIR,—In your last issue I noticed a letter under the signature of John Fowler, who claims to have developed the resources of the Counties of Peterboro' and Victoria, by the two lines of railway in which he is interested, and desires his readers to believe that he intends to build an extension to Lakefield, provided the Municipalities interested will assist him. I observe in the same paper a proposed By-law to authorize the Port Hope, Lindsay, and Beaverton Railway Company, to run the Railway along the streets and thoroughfares of the town, and across the river at Dickson's dam, with a view to connecting with the Peterborough and Chemong Railway, which it seems Mr Fowler intends to appropriate, although within a fraction of one-half of the entire stock is held by gentlemen who are adverse to making such connection. I would, sir, offer a word or two of warning to your Councillors before they commit themselves to a policy which will prove suicidal to the best interests of Peterborough, and I think it but right that your town-people should also consider the propriety of granting, without any equivalent, a right to cut up their streets with rails and crossings, to the danger of the lives and comfort of the inhabitants.

In the first place, I say that the attempt thus being made will if successful, prove pr judicial to the interests of your people. Your lumber merchants and others know that my competition last summer reduced freight from nine shillings to seven and and six-pence per thousand feet, and that a material reduction also took place in other freight. That before the Cobourg line was re-established the character acquired by the rival Company, and its employees was that of high charges and incivility.

Many of your people hailed the competing railway connection with pleasure, as affording a means to prevent the extortion of a monopoly. Since that time the Cobourg Railway Company have not been idle, they have been strengthened by an union with a rich and powerful Company owning the Marmora Iron Works: and the opening of navigation will develope the plans of a powerful combination which will prove nearly as beneficial to Peterborough as it will prove to Cobourg. Do the people of Peterborough desire to deprive themselves of these advantages? Do they wish to confine themselves to their one railway? Do they wish to shut the door against the Cobourg connection? Do they wish to see the trade carried past their Town, and a new and prosperous rival to the north of them established at Mr Fowler's terminus, instead of Peterborough being, as she is, the flourishing terminus of the Cobourg road? If they desire these results they will assist the Council in the passage of this By-law, they will give Mr. Fowler all the powers he wants, to obstruct and hinder the Cobourg competition.

Sir, I think if your people are wise, they will not commit such a mistake. Their policy is to stand neutral, to do nothing to favor one road at the expense of the other, and I think in common fairness we have some claim to the consideration of the Peterboro' people in this matter.

We were the first in the field, and nearly ruined ourselves in establishing the connection years ago, and now when we again turn up to rescue your trade from a monopoly, if you turn to us the cold shoulder, and determine to strengthen our rivals at our expense, we shall feel I think that we have not been very fairly treated. But I don't anticipate this result, for I know there are many among your townspeople who wish us well in our undertaking, and I trust they will exert their influence to arrest a proceeding which, natwit standing all the fine talk of Mr. Fowler about the resources of the country, &c., &c., is nothing less than a bold effort to obstruct a rival, and so keep a monopoly for the purpose of putting money into his own pocket.

Your readers should be made aware that there is now a suit pending in Chancery to wind up the Chemong Railway Company, the period having passed for the completion of the road, and the Charter having expired, any attempt therefore on Mr. Fowler's part to connect with the Chemong Railway would be a contempt of Court, and will be promptly punished. I may in conclusion give you a brief programme of the Cobourg plans for the coming season.

The lock and dam at Whitlas will be repaired this winter, in order that the steamer and scows may at the opening of navigation run up to the town.

Next season the same line of railway and steamboat connection will be maintained with additional accommodation for travellers and freight.

During the same season the Marmora connection will be completed and the rich ores from that region will be on their way to market by the month of August at latest.

The filling in of the Bridge across Rice Lake will be finished in the following winter; and the year 1867 will see a complete and permanent Railway to Peterborough amalgamated in an open and legal manner with the Peterboro' and Chemong Railway, for the purpose of running up to the mills, and eventually tapping the marble and slate quarries to the North East.

I trust I have succeeded in giving your readers some matter for reflection.

The people of your town should clearly understand that their future prospects, comforts, and convenience depend in a great measure on their action on this By-law. The passage of which is not needed to give them the Millbrook branch which they have already, but which may deprive them of the Cobourg connection which they would be better with, than without.

I am, sir,

Your obedient servant,

G. S. DAINTRY,

Lessee of the Cobourg & Peterboro' Railway.

Cobourg, Nov. 29th, 1865.

SMUGGLING.

The Secretary of the Treasury seems determined to break up the smuggling which is carried on to such a large extent along the whole Northern and Northwe tern frontier. Agents sent out by the Department are passing back and forth at short intervals for the purpose of seeing that officers are discharging the duties and reporting any remissness in this respect, to the head quarters, while the District Attorney has instructed the U. S. Marshals to bring before the courts for trial and punishment such offenders as it is in his power to detect and arrest. Only a few months ago a respectable citizen of one of the frontier towns of this district, was arraigned before the U. S. Court at Buffalo, and sentenced to a term in the penitentiary, and notwithstanding the efforts of influential friends to have his sentence commuted to a money penalty, the judge refused to yield, and he was committed to prison.

Another offender was arrested here a short time ago, and we understand is under bonds to appear for trial, and on Friday a couple of the most respectable ladies of our village were arraigned before the United States Commissioner on a charge of smuggling, and must necessarily have their sensibilities shocked by the notoriety which of necessity must follow, if not be subjected to heavy expense and penalties.

In this connection, we understand that the collector at this port, has received instructions to compel the payment of duties on articles of clothing, purchased in Canada, by persons residing on this side, and in case of refusal to pay the legal duties, to prosecute for the penalty. Some way, it has come to be a widely entertained notion that the purchase of wearing apparel and bringing it across the lines on a person's back, was a legitimate transaction, but the Treasury department has decided otherwise and issued imperative instructions to inforce this decision.

The high tariff on foreign Merchandise and the low prices at which many articles may be purchased in Canada, offer large temptations to all as everybody to indulge in smuggling, and ingenuity is taxed to its utmost to prevent detection and the Department constantly receiving knowledge of these facts, is urging and enforcing a corresponding vigilance upon its servants, and is employing detectives to look after both smugglers and officers. Under such a state of things everybody crossing the lines and coming into the United States must expect to be regarded with suspicion, and called upon to go to the "Captain's office."—Ogdensburgh Republican.

A FEMALE SMUGGLER'S PUNISHMENT.—Our readers will remember that a few months since an account was given in the Daily Union of the detection of a Mrs. Wellwood in smuggling whiskey across the river. Her plan of concealing the "crayture" was ingenious as it was curious. At the time of her arrest, eight large black bottles, each containing two quarts of the best quality of whiskey, were found concealed under the expansive skirts, where they were securely fastened by a machine manufactured for that purpose. Mrs. Wellwood was properly indicted by the Grand Jury, and yesterday pleaded guilty to the charge. She was sentenced to pay a fine of $50, and the costs of prosecution, which altogether amounts to a snug sum.—Detroit Daily Union.

The Hon. Thomas D'Arcy M'Gee and the Fenians

As to the usefulness of the speeches made at London and at Wexford, I can have nothing to say. I thought it necessary to show my countrymen the reverse of the American medal always glistening before their eyes. I set the truth clearly before my own mind, and equally so before them. My intentions were the best, whatever the result. (Cheers.) It was not a pleasant report for me to make, or for a member of my country to hear, that for so many of her emigrants democracy and degeneracy had proved identical terms. It was not a pleasant subject to sketch those demagogues, natives of Ireland who have made themselves the masters of the passions of so many of the Irish in the United States who are at this moment coming over prejudices, if not in gold, certainly in greenbacks, to the astonishment and derision of sensible men; but I was careful not to permit the impression that this degenerate class, though unfortunately too numerous, included all my countrymen in the United States. I was careful to do justice both to the domestic and public virtues of a very different class—(cheers)—against whom the worst reproach we can make is that they failed in a robust resistance to the demagogues and their dupes, that they allow the lowest and least worthy among them to speak for all; that, content with avoiding the contamination themselves, they make no concert d effort to keep their less intelligent compatriots out of the jaws of those who daily devour them as their prey. (Cheers.) If any justification were needed by any one of the severity with which I spoke of the Yankee fri demagogues, they may find it in the shameful farce now displayed before our eyes under the title of the "Irish Republic." (Laughter.) We have had on the boards, before the Irish Ambassador and King O'Neil, but these performances are all eclipsed by the Irish Republic and the President O'Mahony. (Laughter.) An Irish Republic on Manhattan Island, with Senators from Tennessee and a senator from Massachusetts with a president taken from the lunatic asylum and Mr Train—if there really be such a person as Mr. Train—as its orator. I say if there be such a person, for I always suspected that Train was a work of fiction like "Orpheus C. Kerr" or "Bird o'Freedom Sawren"—(Laughter.) As an extravaganza on American oratory the character is not badly sustained—a little too improbable perhaps, but if the e be really such a person, and if he really made the mad speech he is reported to have made in lavender colored gloves to the Fenian Congress at Philadelphia, only fancy what a Congress it must have been. (Laughter.) This late exhibition of mingled knavery and folly at Philadelphia, I admit, is chiefly calculated to inspire disgust, but it also excites commiseration for the dupes and indignation against the demagogues concerned in it. When we see how delusion at this side of the Atlantic begets delusion at the other, how the astute organizers profit by the plunder of the confiding ignorant; when we see how the dupes who really run risks are dragged on in Ireland to their ruin by knaves who lie up in clover on Manhattan Island; when we see Irish misery pay for a palace in Union Square; when we see the treachery that betrays the sworn brother to the outraged law, what else can we feel but indignation against the authors of such cruelness and misery and infamy. (Cheers.) They the authors of a liberation of Ireland! They liberate Ireland! Why don't they liberate the Ireland at their own doors from the poisonous and murderous surroundings of the tenement houses of New York and Boston? (Cheers.) Why don't they liberate their own Young Ireland from sanitary destruction—that Ireland in America, which according to the New York Times contributes 88 per cent. of the deaths of children on the whole number of deaths in that great city? They liberate Ireland! Why don't they liberate those children of a larger growth, more than fatherless, who are swept daily from among them to the far west, there to undergo the fate of changelings and apostates an alien people. (Cheers.) The New York protectory, established by sane and good men to diminish the swollen volume of Irish vagrancy and juvenile crime, asked the other day for $28,000 to carry on their work. There is a chance to liberate a part of Ireland at all events. (Cheers.) Why don't these inordinate patriots lend a hand to these, where they can be of use? Why don't they try to liberate the Irish laborers in New England, where they work in the social scale below the negro, and scarcely above the beasts they drive for their Yankee "bosses?" There is a work for them to do if they were only honest and they only tried, but I admit there is one objection to it insuperable to the Fenian mind: it is practicable, it is possible therefore it is avoided and despised. (Loud cheers.) My right reverend friend, the Archbishop of Halifax—(cheers)—who was here the other day, assured me the Fenianism was entirely unknown within his jurisdiction. In Lower Canada it has neither a local habitation nor a name; and though, as I said at Wexford, there may be some of the specie somewhere among us, since the number of fools, we are assured on good authority, is infinite—(laughter)—yet, compared to the great, orderly, law-abiding, religious mass of the provincial Irish, they are not a drop in the bucket or a bucket in Lake Ontario. Our friends from a distance, if they think it worth while, can speak for their own actions. I speak in presence of Irish gentlemen from almost every section of the country, and I say to the alleged sympathy existing here, in the city and district of Montreal, I say all the statements that have appeared are shameful fabrications. (Cheers.) What, I ask is the character and position of the Irish Catholic inhabitants of this city and district? I do not flatter them—I respect them too much to flatter them—but I believe every administrator of the law in this vicinity will bear me out when I say that there is perhaps no more orderly or law-abiding portion of our population. Like the western wheat when shipped through our cooler Northern waters, they avoided fermentation by taking the Canadian route—(laughter)—but if they are not so easily fermented as they are in New York, neither are they so apt to get damaged. They are a religious people, blessed with an exemplary clergy, whom they honor and obey—(loud cheers)—no good cause appeals to them in vain, and I question if there are congregations in the city which, according to their means, more liberally respond at the call of every charity. (Cheers.) Large numbers of them, about 3,000 in this city alone, are tax-paying proprietors. We know that having full freedom in all matters, civil and religious, they need no new light from the dark lantern of the Fenian Know Nothings. [Cheers and laughter.] I call the Fenians Know Nothings for they are, as far as we are concerned, a gen ine duplicate of the original Know Nothings, and they would no doubt be backed up in their designs on Canada by the other Know Nothings for purposes of their own. "To the banks!" would be the cry of one set: "to the convents!" of the other. The hate of Cain and the cupidity of Judas and the lust of Belial would be the inspiration of these well assorted lies; for the objects of both would be plunder and of all outrage. (Cheers.) Who for a moment supposes that any man dwelling amongst us, buying, selling and mingling freely with his fellow citizens, would lend himself to such villany? (Cheers.) I repeat, for the Irish inhabitants of this section of Canada, that there are no grounds for so foul a slander. I am happy in this respect to echo the declaration of our national society at its last monthly meetings, in the Canadian address proposed by our secretary Mr. Clarke, "that the Irish Catholics of this province in the event of any emergency requiring their assistance, will be found in the future, as they have been in the past, ever ready to defend the cause of law and order." There was not a dissentient to that resolution, and there would not have been had it been put to the whole of the people represented by the society. (Loud cheers.) It is well the true state of feeling should be known. Nothing ought and nothing can, if the facts alone are heeded, shake our mutual confidence in each other. Let no man attempt to embody us at any time by sect or class or race or society. (Loud cheers.) Such distinctions will and must exist; but in the presence of those who would be the only gainers by such divisions, let all such distinctions be buried and forgotten. (Loud cheers.) The c ne of Canada is no man's monopoly, but every man's equal and bounden duty. In the discharge of that duty, if called upon actively to discharge it, we shall know if it is over neither Orangemen nor Catholics, (cheers)—nor any other distinction but one, who are ready to defend their country! (Cheers). The Fenians in the United States—feeling in their hearts, for all their fustian about the glorious republic, that they are not really at home there—feeling that they have not conquered for themselves a new country in the new world—may try to solace themselves with a conspiracy in lieu of a country, but the Irish in Canada who, looking back to their small beginnings a few years ago have already made such handsome fortunes, who have already required so much property, who already exercise by common consent so large a share of legitimate influence—they have a position to guard, and I guard it they will with national ardor and impetuosity. (Cheers.) Mr. Chairman, in holding this language I am morally certain I speak for nine hundred and ninety-nine out of one thousand of all my countrymen in Canada, for all the old and known residents, for all but a handful of those who are known as "skedaddlers"—(laughter)—runaways from the first and second American drafts, who would not fight for the United States where they were in it, and who would be demoralised now here under any form of government that required duties to be discharged in return for rights conceded. If there are any Fenian sympathizers among us they are altogether of this class, and the Americans ought to know by this time what reliance to place upon them and their reports. (Laughter.) He does not conceal his contempt of the whole farcical affair from his English correspondents, and precisely because he despises Irish intelligence and Irish position he laughs and lets it go on; but let it be spread to the extent of one per cent. American credit, and see how mercilessly he will pounce down on these Irish disturbers of his commercial and political relations. But some of my good friends in Ireland and Canada and in the United States too, who detest Fenianism as candidly as I do, are of opinion that I should have diluted the severity of my strictures at Wexford by a strenuous statement of Irish grievances and a loud call for their redress. I would willingly be one, for instance, to lay any proper representation on behalf of Ireland from her Majesty's loyal subjects in British America at the foot of the throne; and if it were thought indispensable with any official position in Canada to do so, I declare here, in the presence of my colleagues and constituents, that I would not allow that impediment to stand in the way twenty four hours. [Loud cheering.] This or any other common sense course I will be found always ready to take, but just as ready will I always be to oppose the mad and cruel councils of those who for such a misguided portion of the Irish people at home and abroad to cultivate no other politics but "undying hatred to England." Apart from the anti Christian blindness and guiltiness of such a popular creed, its folly alone ought to condemn it. It is dashing the earthen pot against the pot of iron. It is the weak defying the strong. It is the powerless challenging the powerful. To English reason and justice, policy I would appeal, and there is no man living more open to reason, if you do not strive provoke his pride, than the Englishman. (Cheers.) But I know full well that a rich empire will not be bullied by a poor people; that if on a first-rate power even first-rate abuse will extort nothing. I speak these words in sober earnestness to my countrymen in Ireland and in America who have been sitting in judgment and condemning my own course, sometimes with very slender knowledge of the facts which have determined its direction. [Hear, hear.] God knows the Ireland I loved in my youth is near and dear to my heart. She was a fair and radiant vision, full of the holy self sacrifice of the elder time; but this Billingsgate of beldame, reeling and disheveled from the purlieus of New York, with blasphemy on her lips and uncleanliness in her breast—this shameless impostor—resist with detestation and scorn. Her manners and her morals were unknown to our fathers, and long may they remain odious and unknown in the land of our fathers. [Renewed cheers.]

Death of Tom Sayers.

He was born in 1826, and was consequently only 39 years of age when he died. He was brought up to the trade of bricklaying, but having a turn for the prize-ring, and showing the qualities necessary to success in it, he soon became a boxer by occupation. His first fight in a regular stricken field was at Greenhithe in 1849, where he beat Crouch. His next fight was with Collins, in 1850, which was interrupted by the police, twice, and finally abandoned, and a new match made for the stake of £25, which he won after a hard fight of eighty-four minutes. His next venture was a challenge to Jack Grant, a very expert boxer, on which a match was arranged for £100 a side. This fight was won by Sayers, and gave him an immediate and extensive notoriety among the class to which he belonged. After beating Jack Martin in 1853, he was beaten by Nat. Langham. This was the only fight ever lost by Sayers, and was won by the stratagem and superior adroitness of Langham, who succeeded in closing both his eyes by successive blows, though Sayers was at most perfectly fresh in other respects.

The fight with Heenan, which caused so great an excitement, occurred on the 17th of April, 1860, and was decided to be a drawn fight. We believe that Sayers had not appeared in the Ring since then, and though his gigantic American opponent has received a terrible defeat from King, since then, Prize fighters are seldom long-lived men; the terrible punishment they receive, the arduous training which they have to undergo, all tend to undermine the constitution and shorten life. The effects of this brutal profession upon the mind are, as a matter of course, very lowering and degrading. It is said, we trust with truth, that poor "Tom's" end was peaceful.

THE HEAD CENTRE'S WINNINGS.—The following paragraph is from the Munster News, a Roman Catholic journal published at Limerick, Ireland, just received by the Asia.

The Fenian Head Centre.—It is said that John O'Mahony has £5,000 a year from the American Fenians, and that Mr. Stephens had £1,500 whilst occupied in Ireland.—Whilst in Ireland the report goes, the latter dined at the house of an acquaintance, and grace being said at dinner, he exclaimed—"Oh, if this be your way yet, we will never have a revolution in Ireland," whereupon the Catholic hostess, feeling indignant with the expression of so irreligious a feeling, called the servant to bring Mr. Stephens his hat, with a hint that his absence from her table would be much more agreeable than his presence, as a a scoffer, at her board. There are hosts who, loving Ireland as well and more wise than he, would have treated him less ceremoniously than the good lady after the utterance of any such 'sentiment.'

EARL CLARENDON.—Earl Clarendon, the new Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, is a nobleman of considerable ability. He was born in the year 1800, succeeded to the title in 1838, was appointed Lord Privy Seal in 1840, which office he held until 1841, when he became Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, which position he held until the following year. He was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland during the troublous times from 1847 to 1852, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs from 1853 to 1858, Minister Plenipotentiary at the Peace Congress held in Paris in 1856, and was appointed Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, April 4, 1864, which position he now vacates for the more important one of Chief of the Foreign Office.

A NEW OPENING FOR CANADIAN TRADE.—Despatches have been received from the Imperial Government, respecting the opening of trade between Canada and the west Indies and the South and Central American States. The gentlemen appointed to arrange matters will leave England early in December, and will go upon their mission armed with full power to negotiate on commerce for the benefit of these Colonies in Her Majesty's name with our sister Colonies and the British West India Islands, and also with Brazil and the Spanish and French West Indies. The arrangements are to be concluded by the end of March next. We have no doubt but that the results of this mission will be most beneficial to Canada.

Considerable excitement has been occasioned in Mexico lately by the news recently received from General Mejia, to the effect that half the army lately besieging the Imperial garrison of Matamoras was composed of Federal soldiers, who had crossed the Rio Grande. Several of these men dressed in Yankee uniform have been made prisoners, tried by court martial and sentenced to death as "filibusteers." It is said that the decree condemning to death all persons taken in arms against the Empire has induced many rebels to lay down their arms and surrender to the authorities.

STRONG OCCURRENCE AT PALMERSTON'S GRAVE.—It is stated that when the Dean of Westminster pronounced the words, "dust to dust, ashes to ashes," over the grave of Lord Palmerston, the chief mourner, as a last precious offering to the dead, threw into the grave several diamonds and gold rings. Another account states that the vault was so constructed that it would not permit the throwing in of any earth at the solemn portion of the funeral service. This merely attracted a great deal of notice, and was received with various degrees of approbation. To some it appeared a great improvement, as taking away all the earthly hideousness of burial; but others thought that the traditional solemnity of the grave suffered when the dread words, "Ashes to ash s, dust to dust," are not accompanied by the usual symbolic sprinkling of earth on the coffin. The chief mourner responded to the words by casting several valuable rings into the grave.

PROSPECTUS
OF THE
21st Vol. of the Montreal Witness
FOR 1866.

TWENTY EVENTFUL YEARS have run their course, since the Montreal Witness first saw the light, and though they have been full of changes there has been no change in the reasons for commencing it, namely, the great importance to society of a wholesome family newspaper.

Is a Mother's Magazine desirable in a family? The Witness has had as much matter every year of the kind inserted in Mother's Magazines as any monthly publication under that name.

Is a Children's Magazine of Sunday School Paper desirable? The Witness has had more of the class of reading suitable for these publications than any of them.

Is an Agricultural Paper of great benefit to the country? The Witness has had about as much on that subject monthly as would fill a good-sized agricultural journal.

Is a Temperance Paper of great importance it families and the country? The Witness has had more on that subject than any ordinary monthly temperance paper.

Is a Commercial Paper wanted by men of business and farmers? The Witness has fully as much commercial matter as any exclusively commercial paper.

Is a Literary Paper wanted? The Witness has had a goodly proportion of Poetry, Tales, Reviews, and other literary matter.

Should a witness for truth, and against error, injustice and vice be sustained? The Witness has done its best in all these respects.

Is a newspaper essential to an intelligent family? The Witness has given more news than most papers in Canada.

A brief calculation will show the economy of procuring all these papers together instead of separately. The cost, if taken in the latter way, would, instead of the price of the Witness, be about as follows:—

Mother's Magazine	$1 00
Children's Paper	25
Agricultural Paper	1 00
Temperance Paper	50
Commercial Paper	1 00
Literary Paper	2 00
Weekly Newspaper	1 00
	6 75

This shows a very great difference in first cost be idea the saving in postage.

We would not be understood, however, to mean that any one should be satisfied with the Witness only. On the contrary, we think it is a wise economy to subscribe for various useful periodicals. There is, probably, no way in which a small sum of money yields so large a return of pleasure and profit. Our only object is to show how economical it is to subscribe for this paper.

There is another view of this matter, which is not a small reward for our twenty years' labour During that time a very large number of families have been brought up with the Witness as their family paper. Parents and children have perused it regularly, and to it found the best selections we could make from the best writers of the world All know the power of a family paper to modify the views, opinions, and conduct of those to whom it obtains access, and if this one has aided in the bringing up of some thousands of families in principles of religion, temperance, integrity, and intelligent enterprise, what finite arithmetic can reckon up the gain?

The Witness reaches now in all its editions some seven thousand subscribers all over the country, besides an average circulation of some four thousand in the city of Montreal; and for this extensive circulation we are exceedingly thankful, but it is a matter of deep regret that the proportion of the people reached is yet so small.

There are probably about six thousand Protestant families in Montreal of which we reach about two-thirds; but there are about 300,000 Protestant families in the rest of Canada, of which we only reach 7,000, or less than a fortieth part. There is surely room here for a very large extension of all our editions.

The Daily Witness is by far the best of our editions for business men, having more reading matter and a great many more advertisements than any other edition. It has also full market reports daily. The subscription is $3,00 per annum.

The Montreal Witness (semi-weekly) contains nearly all the reading matter of the Daily, together with semi-weekly market reports and prices current. Subscription $2,00 per annum.

The Weekly Witness contains all the matter of permanent interest of the Semi-weekly, with weekly summary of news and market reports Subscription $1,00 per annum.

The Canadian Messenger, published twice a month, contains the Temperance, Agricultural, Scientific, and Educational matter of the Witness, but without news, markets, or advertisements, as it goes post free. Subscription 25 cents per annum.

All these rates are payable invariably in advance, and the paper stops when the term subscribed for expires.

It should not be very difficult to get some one of these editions into almost every family if a friend of that family would only suggest the matter to them.

The price is so low that we cannot afford commissions, and indeed we have always received the greatest aid, in the way of obtaining subscribers, from parties who had no object in view but disinterested patriotism and benevolence To all such, and may their number greatly increase, we hereby render hearty thanks for past favors, and ask them to continue their good offices.

The Witness is now dressed in a new suit of types, and no effort will be spared to keep it in the very front rank of Canadian journalism.

Advertisements not at variance with the character of the Witness will be inserted for one cent per word for one insertion and a half cent per word for each subsequent inser ion, no advertisement being reckoned as less than 25 words.

Letters for the Witness or Messenger containing money should invariably be registered, and when this is done the remittance is at our risk. All communications to be addressed to "MONTREAL WITNESS," or 1866. PROSPECTUS 1866.

OF
The Globe Newspaper.

THE publisher of The Globe has to announce that very great improvements in the publication of this journal will be made in the coming year. A new font of beautiful type, cast specially for The Globe, has been imported from the celebrated Scottish Foundry of Miller and Richard, Edinburgh. The quality of the paper used in printing the journal will be much superior to that heretofore employed. Arrangements are now being made for increased Telegraphic facilities; and the corps of Writers, Reporters and correspondents, will be strengthened—increased effort will be put forth in every department to render The Globe more worthy than ever before of the immense circulation it has for so many years enjoyed throughout British America.

The year 1866 is likely to be a most eventful period in the history of Canada—a year in which the current events of the day will be of the deepest interest to every inhabitant of the country.

The new Parliamentary Buildings will, early in the coming spring, be opened for the first time at Ottawa.

The Government is pledged to present to Parliament, at the opening of the session, either a Bill for completing the Confederation of all British America, or a Bill establishing a new Federal constitution for Canada alone, based on the principle of Representation by Population in the popular branch.

On the 17th of March, 1866, the American Treaty of Reciprocity will come to an end; and the negotiations for its renewal, or preparations to meet the change, will be watched with much interest.

Arrangements for acquiring possession of, and opening the North-West territory for settlement, will be speedily made, and to these The Globe will devote special attention, as it has has hitherto done to everything connected with the subject.

With the settlement of the constitutional question that has so long distracted the Province, numerous questions affecting the material progress of this country will be thrown open for consideration. Among these will be:—

The subject of Banking and Currency.
Enlarging the Canals, and otherwise improving the Internal Navigation of the country.
Reduction of the Customs' Tariff.
Interest on Money.
Opening up new Territory to settlement.
Free land grants to actual settlers.
A Homestead Law.
And many other vitally important subjects.

In the discussion and settlement of all these matters, The Globe will, as heretofore, take an active part; and from the sources of information at the command of its conductors, it is not doubted that in its columns the earliest intelligence and the most reliable information will continue to be found.

THE DAILY GLOBE

will continue to be mailed from the office at $4 per annum, payable invariably in advance; but can be procured regularly from the news-dealers in all the cities and towns throughout the Province.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE

will also be much improved in the year 1866. The paper will be of superior quality, and the new Scottish type will give it a greatly improved appearance. An editor has been engaged, whose special duty it will be to condense and arrange the matter for this edition, and to select intelligence specially adapted for country readers. A portion of each week's paper will be devoted to the publication of some interesting tale; and the markets and prices current will continue to be given with promptness and accuracy.

The Weekly Globe will continue to be published at TWO DOLLARS per annum, payable strictly in advance. Some exceptions to the rule of advance payment have been heretofore made—but from the 1st of January, 1866, no paper will be sent from the office without prepayment.

CLUB RATES.

During 1866 we will send:—

Six copies one year for	$10 00
Ten " "	15 00
Fifteen " "	22 50

and an extra copy of the Weekly to the person who gets up the club of fifteen.

Twenty-five copies one year for	35 00

and a copy of the Weekly Globe to the person who gets up the club of twenty-five.

Fifty copies one year for	65 00

and a copy of the Daily Globe one year to the person who gets up the club of fifty.

Eighty copies one year for	100 00

and a copy of the Daily.

Payment must be always in advance.

Each paper is addressed separately.

All the papers included in any club must be mailed to one Post-office.

When additional names are added to any club during the year, they must be sent to the Globe Office by the person who made up the Club; and the money sent with such additional names must be such a proportion of the year's subscription at the Club rate as will pay up to the expiration of the Club.

No exception will be made to these rules on any ground whatever.

THE PRETTY MACHINE.

You may see them at work any time of the day,
Or, what a delary perfection their movements display!
There's a waiting and swaying as onward they go,
And the dirt of the pavement before them they hoe!
It's the finest invention that ever was seen,
This pretty, new-fangled street-sweeping machine.

They are small in shape, they are easy to move
And the walk of a city they vastly improve,
You may have them trimmed gaily, or have them in quite plain,
It's the neatest invention that ever was seen,
This pretty, new-fangled street-sweeping machine.

There are some who declare they demand too much room,
That some who prefer, too, the old style of broom,
But these are old fogies, who always cry down
Everything of decoration with anger and frown;
It's the neatest invention that ever was seen,
This pretty, new-fangled street-sweeping machine.

It will collect folds round the owner they fly,
It will glimmering slopes to the pavement supply!
Why, the use of contractors for cleaning the streets
Will be nearly done by the fairies we meets;
It's the neatest invention that ever was seen,
This pretty, new-fangled street-sweeping machine.

Varieties.

AN INDIANA BOY TAKEN IN BY A FAST YOUNG WOMAN.—John Henry Dean, a young man living in Guilford, Dearborn County, recently married a fascinating young female at Lawrenceburg, and brought her home to his parents. Becoming satisfied that the young person was not of the right stripe," John Henry started with her back to Lawrenceburg, for a visit, as he said, but sneaked off the boat at Madison and returned to Guilford. The young wife soon discovered the trick, and, on Friday last, arrived at Guilford, and seeing her fickle lord load made an assault upon him with pistols (having two revolvers and a large six-barrel shooter on her person.) John was completely taken by surprise and filled in dismay, pursued by the valiant knight and blood-thirsty dame. Thus they run over half a mile, several pistol shots increasing the speed, until reaching a house, the man took refuge, and finding a rifle, fired at the pursuer when not more than forty rods distant; but nothing daunted, the woman ran up to the house, and, facing the dones fearlessly, retired. The ensuing morning the matter was amicably arranged, and the young woman is again in Lawrenceburgh, ready to pick up another unsuspecting and unsophisticated man.—Lawrenceburgh Ind. Register.

MANNERS.—"I make it a point of morality," say a writer, "never to find fault with or thwart for its manners. They may be awkward or graceful, blunt or polite, polished or rustic. I care not what they are, if the man be, as well, and acts from honest intentions with out eccentricity or affectation. All men have not the advantage of "good society," as it is called in school themselves in all its fantastic tricks on ceremonies; and if there is any standard of manners, it is well founded on reason and good sense, and not upon these artificial regulations. Manners, like conversation, should be extemporaneous, and natural. I always am, act a man that meets me with the same prepared smile on his face, the same bending of the body, and the same premeditated shake of the hand. Give me the boor with a true ring—genuine politeness and welcome salutation.—How are you, my old friend?"

One of the latest fashions with the ladies is wearing long ends of narrow ribbon around the neck. Few of the uninitiated know the significance of the same. When they wear the ends hanging in front, it means that the lady is married," down the back, that she has a feller coming to see her, but isn't engaged," over the left shoulder it means, "fellers, come, follow me." If she does not wear any, it means that she is engaged, and don't wish to have anything to do with any other feller."

SOLD.—A gentleman at a ladies' fair, lately being solicited to buy something by a fair creature who kept a table, said he wanted to buy what was not for sale—a lock of hair. She promptly cut off the coveted curl, and received the sum asked for it—one hundred dollars. The purchaser was showing his prize by to a friend,—"more rather badly so," said the friend; "to my certain knowledge, she only paid eight dollars for the whole wig."

The other day a dog fell into one of the Lisbon docks. A laborer named Harper observed down the side of the dock, being held by the waist by the owner of the dog. He succeeded in reaching the animal and in lifting it to the owner, who, to secure it, let go his hold of Harper, who then fell back into the water and was drowned.

A singular scene has taken place at a Jewish synagogue in Sheffield, the congregation throwing apples and walnuts at one another—Roman carnival fashion. As might be expected a row resulted, "claret," was drawn, and eyes blacked. Summonses were taken out, but, mum, the affair was arranged.

You have considerable floating population in this village, haven't you? asked a stranger of one of the citizens of a village on the Mississippi. Well, yes, rather, was the reply; about half the year the water is up to the second story window.

An Irishman and a Yankee met at a tavern and there was but one bed for them. On entering the Yankee said he did not care which side of the bed he took. Then said Pat, you may take the under side.

A robust countryman meeting a physician one day ran to hide behind a wall.—On being asked the cause, he replied, It is so long since I have been sick, that I am ashamed to look a physician in the face.

Mr. Brown, said a colored preacher, discoursing on the difficulties of the sinner, it sure as to row a boat over Niagara Falls, but a tremendous job to row back again.

If Brigham Young's 100 wives favor their lord with curtain lectures, what, oh! what must be the nature of "Young's Night Thoughts?"

When an old man is angry he is apt to strike his staff. We know many a general who ought to give his staff a good shaking.

A free horse is generally better than a dead one, but it isn't desirable to have a horse "alive and kicking."

Why are washerwomen most unreasonable people? Because they expect soft water when it rains hard.

The Great Original Painting

OF THE

BATTLE OF THE BOYNE!

By HER. WEST, Pres. Royal Academy.

SPARKES, BOURNE & Co., would respectfully announce that they have now ready for delivery a splendidly got up COLORED LITHOGRAPH of this magnificent HISTORICAL PAINTING, representing the Battle at the moment of the death of the gallant DUKE SCHOMBERG; and which is published on the finest paper—size 22 x 28 inches.

This Picture—a faithful copy of the great Original—will be found incomparably superior to anything ever offered to the public either in this country or Great Britain. It has been executed by the first Artistes of the day, and no trouble or expense has been spared to make it worthy of the justly celebrated Painter, and the GREAT HISTORICAL FACT which it represents, and which ought never to be forgotten by those who now enjoy the CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY which this event, more than any other in our history, was the means of establishing and perpetuating.

In times like these, when the principles of our Forefathers are being assailed on every hand, it is especially needful for us to bear in mind from whence sprung our Constitutional form of Government: and nothing contributes more to aid us in keeping in remembrance those momentous passages in our history than faithful representations by great Masters. And certainly no historical Subject has been more ably treated than the above event by this celebrated Painter.

In presenting this Picture to the Protestant Community, and especially to those who are more fetchingly alive to the vast benefits conferred on us by the ever memorable events of 1690, the Publishers feel every confidence that in its efforts will be fully appreciated, and that this Picture will find an honored place in every Protestant home in the British Provinces.

AMERICAN

Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering

SEWING MACHINE!

COMPANY,

627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses, thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

Two Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that the beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produce a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c., &c., it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c., &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P.S.—A novel patented BUTTON HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to behold a dream of fairy with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong Iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old system of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over String Bass, of which Mr. Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wolfenhaupt,	A. Barili,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strakosch,
Wm. Henry Fry,	Charles Fradel.

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strakosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal verisimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr. S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

SEWING MACHINES.

EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms. { 536 Broadway, New York, / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nansook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it almost impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

$10 A DAY to AGENTS.

LLOYDS GREAT TOPOGRAPHICAL RAILWAY and COUNTY MAP of ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND and WALES—Six feet large, mounted and varnished: cost $100,000 and four years time; was published July 28, and is the best map ever made since the world was found; shows 200,000 cities, towns villages, market places, post offices, castles, country seats and 20,000 miles of rail and railway stations, with the distance between each station marked plainly, and the official name and total length of each railway in actual operation up to June, 1865, is given. The railway stations are all numerically and alphabetically arranged. The lakes, rivers, hills and mountains are exhibited, with the altitude of each in feet, made from trigonometrical surveys by our own engineers, draughtsmen and Photographers sent to England expressly to make a superior map of that country, the whole engraved on steel, colored superbly in counties, mounted and varnished. Price 8 shillings sterling ($2). No map at $10 can compare to this. Canvassers throughout the world wanted. Also men, with a small capital, to go to Canada, Chicago, Cincinnati, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, East and West Indies, Australia and California, to open offices. Can make a fortune wholesaling this and other maps to sub-agents. Eighty thousand copies of this map were subscribed for in England before going to press, as can be shown by our agents' letters to us. Ten new maps now under way

Select Poetry.

THE CHRISTIAN'S DAY.

WAKING IN THE MORNING.

Lord, let my thoughts on angel wings
At waking rise to thee,
E'en ere the lark at heaven's gate sings
Her hymn of ecstasy!
And as the light through night's dark stole,
Increaseth more and more,
May brighter ardors in my soul
Thy providence adore.

WALKING OUT INTO THE FIELDS.

While drinking in the healthful air,
While gazing round on earth and sky;
Lord, let my heart the influence share,
Which nerves my frame and fills mine eye.
Let rapture wake the grateful glow,
Till thou alone my worship be,
Since all that nature can bestow
Of bliss and beauty flows from thee.

TAKING REFRESHMENTS.

As oft I break my daily bread,
Or plentiful or scant,
O! may I ne'er forget to spread
The board of humbler want!
And as my temperate cup I take
With fervent gratitude
May that glad act the memory wake
Of Christ's atoning blood.

GOING TO REST.

When slumbers soft as noiseless snow
Descend upon mine eyes,
Lord, let me sink to rest as though
I never more should rise!
Let thy blest Spirit from my breast,
The world and sin, have driven,
So that if death these lips have pressed,
My soul may wake in heaven!

ANNA MARIA PORTER.

Literature.

THE ORIGIN OF PETROLEUM.

LECTURE BY PROFESSOR WILBER.

From the London Free Press.

Prof. Wilber rose and said:—Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentleman: My object this evening is to present to you, in as comprehensive a form as possible, the causes reasons and philosophy of Petroleum. I shall present a few of the prevailing theories concerning it, and also the true one.—I have brought a few samples, which you see, of bituminous coal or asphaltum.—Coal and petroleum are closely and intimately related to each other. Let us go back to the Devonian and carboniferous era of ages ago. Last night I will put before you (drawing a diagram) a series of rocks. The Devonian is the lower series, and above is the carboniferous series or coal fields. The lower contains all oil, the upper coals, and both are closely connected.—There is one theory promulgated that the coal fields have been the result of oil formations, and another that oil has been reduced from the coal fields; both are popularly taught. Some geological teachers pretend to show that oil is but the droppings from coal beds. In Pennsylvania we have coal rocks overlying the oil stratum; while in Canada West there is no coal. It is because the coal rocks lie above the oil rocks, and are so intimately associated with them, that the theory that oil comes from coal beds is generally accepted. The conclusion is very natural too. So rich is the coal in oil that the very best specimens contain 117 gallons per ton. The hard mineral matter only serves as a nucleus around which the oil clusters. Ordinary coal will give eighty gallons per ton, while coals from Prince Edward Island give 120 gallons. Because coals are so fat, it is supposed to be easy fo oil to pass out of them and into other systems; and hence the theory generally adopted. The gum beds of Enniskillen were formed from the evaporations of petroleum, and if so, why not account for all coal fields in that way?—One half of mankind accept the coal theory for oil, and the other half the oil theory for coal. Neither is right, but both are wrong. The coal districts of North America cover an area of 300,000 square miles. There is coal enough in the United States and Canada to make eleven hundred cubic miles. A careful estimate of the coals in North America shows a sufficient quantity to last for five hundred thousand years, beyond which the present inhabitants need entertain but little concern. I prophecy that the world will last that long, in order that this coal may be used up in the legitimate way. I once took issue with a preacher on this point, who informed me the world would be consumed with fire and smoke about the beginning of 1866. I proposed to him that if an architect had built a new house and stored it with sufficient coal to last for twenty years, would it be his purpose to burn the whole down immediately? He could only pity my false doctrine, and went his way, saying, "Cannot any person see that we want all this coal to assist in burning up the earth? Now, if we have this vast amount of coal at command, every ton capable of giving 80 gallons of oil, and Pithole and other oil regions should dry up, how would it affect our great wants? It is comparatively a trifling matter to take the oil out of coal, wherewith to supply its place, by the simple process of distillation. In the ordinary process, coals part with oil with great difficulty and torture, requiring so great a heat that nature does not afford the means. In gas works, for example, the heat required is sufficient to char it. In no place where coals and oil are found together do we find any such disturbing agency. Right over the oil reservoirs we discover that coal possesses as much oil as anywhere. Indeed, it yields more oil in these very districts than out of them, and therefore the doctrine of mutual dependence is absurd, Take another view regarding shales or slates which rise above the coals. They contain a quantity of oil which is more easily drawn than from coals. One-third the heat only is required. The slate system varies in thickness in different countries, from 100 to 10,000 feet. All kinds of slate will yield oil readily. There is one other coal field I have not mentioned—the Anthracite deposits. It is the best kind we have. It gives a bright cheerful fire, devoid of smoke. This formation, however, is rather limited in quantity. It only exists in Pennsylvania, to the extent of about five hundred square miles. Some suppose that the oil which once existed in the anthracite has been driven off, and accumulated in adjacent or subjacent rocks, thus giving rise to quantities of petroleum. But the heat which changed the old bituminous coals to anthracite was sufficient to vaporise all the oils, and dissipate them in the air. The beds lie in a sloating direction; they were once level and regular, but owing to the irruptions of nature, have been upturned and broken, causing the oil to evaporate from them into the atmosphere. My opinions regarding the relations of coal and oil were more firmly fixed on hearing there were no coal fields in Canada. Next, as to the oil found in slate rocks. Some people finding among them animal remains, pretend to say that these animals were composed of a fatty, or oily matter, which upon extinction of life became absorbed in the rocks, thus producing oils. Again, others insist that, from the myriads of coral insects which have filled the oceans of all ages, the tissues or substance of their bodies has been converted into oil. More especially is this theory upheld, because we often, in the loose fret-work of coralline rocks, see small quantities of oil and the reasoning is proper—like attributing honey in the bee-comb to the bees as a source. But we find no traces of animal matter in petroleum, which is purely and essentially composed of vegetable matter. It is said that the vast amount of oil found in Canada originally came from Pennsylvania. But we find that the rocks incline in the opposite direction, and it is therefore a difficult matter for it to flow up hill. There are many theories concerning the origin of carbon oils or petroleum. They can be classed as ingenious, absurd, amusing, ludicrous and plausible, and we shall not on this occasion consider them. The following view or theory, however, is steadily gaining ground among the best observers. It affirms that petroleum results from sea-weed deposits upon the ocean bed, not unlike the accumulations of peat and vegetable matter in ancient swamps, which have originated all our coal basins. The coal fields are all alike, and from one you may learn all. The same remark applies to the oil fields. There are ten extensive oil regions on the earth known to be productive. The area of the oil rock in Canada West is about 2,000 miles.—The oil basins contain hydro-carbon in liquid form, and coal beds hydro-carbon in solid form. This is the only difference. All coal beds have a stratum of clay underneath, and no coal can exist without it. As every one knows coal is formed from peat plants which grow up rapidly and take in carbon from the atmosphere. These plants grow up, elaborate carbon, and fade into the earth, turning into coal by slow but sure degrees, from year to year. So slow is the process that probably not more than half an inch is added in a century. After millions of tons of sea weed have been submerged or deposited in the shallow basins of the sea, they are closely covered by the accumulating clay or limestones or sandstones accoading to the quality of local forces and materials. The same is true of the ancient peat-swamps, as they became submerged beneath 1,000 fathoms of water compressing the whole mass in a workable seam of coal. But this is a mere outline of the new theory. Those who are familiar with the forms and forces of matter, and understand the causes of the earth's changes, will appreciate it. The oil fields are probably as large as the coal fields.—They were not sought for till 1860, and of course were not discovered. Ten years ago 40 barrels of petroleum could not have been sold in the United States or Canadas. When found near the surface, oil is thick owing to the easy evaporation of the more volatile portions. Thick oils have a great value, owing to their lubricating power for railway purposes. In comparing the two oil regions, Canada and Pennsylvania, we find that Canada oils are all heavy, and worth three times as much per barrel as the supply at Pithole. The Canada oils have also a greater illuminating power. They yield a greater per cent of refined from the same quantity of crude oil; they are found nearer the surface; the cost of production is less; there are no taxes or duties; here are far better facilities for transportation; in Canada four-fifths of the wells are successful—in Pennsylvania only two-fifths. The centre of the corniferous limestone or oil bearing rocks in Canada West is about 2,000 feet thick and gradually thins out.—In all there are about ten thousand square miles of it, Wherever is found the greatest thickness of this limestone, there oil will be found in larger quantities than anywhere else. I believe future investigations will prove this deposit to be not only the safest to invest in, but really the richest one in America. (Applause.) Our citizens are being converted to this truth, judging from the number of American capitalists present and it is a pleasure to know that in order to show good will and reciprocate favors, you are willing to annex four States to Canada, viz. Maine, New York, Michigan and Illinois. It will be like hitching four spirited steeds to a royal coach—they will take it along. (Applause.) Among the promises to be fulfilled this evening are two—1st, That we would show you how to save a fortune; and 2nd, How to make one. The infallible rule for the first is to keep it when you have it, and for the second, "Strike ile."

A dashing young bachelor lately appeared in Central Park, New York, with two handsome ponies, whose tails were done up like a ladies waterfall, and cooped up in small fish nets. The resemblance was capital, and the team created great sensation.

A young lady remarked that she could not understand "what her brother George Henry saw in the girls that he liked them so well; and that for her part, she would not give the company of one young man for that of twenty girls."

Who Should not be a Husband.

Should that man be a husband who loves his money better than his wife or child; and is ready at any time to sacrifice their interests to his love of gain? Or should he bear the name who regards his wife as he regards his fine coach and horse merely as a needful appendage to his estate, not a bosom friend and helper till death?

Is he worthy to be a husband who deliberately turns his back upon a home made pleasant by all the attractions that an anxious loving wife can throw around it, and seeks his pleasure in gaming and drinking saloons; or it may be—in the house of her whose steps go down to hell? Is it the part of a good husband to lounge away evening after evening at the village bar-room or store, while the lonely wife is wearily working or watching at home?

Ought that man to assume the responsibilities of a family who "cannot bear children," and who, instead of carefully assisting in the care of them, will only fret and scold if his rest happens to be disturbed by the cries of his infant?

Has that man a call to be a husband who seldom or never admits that anything which he does can be anything but right and proper, while he has a habit of throwing the blame of everything that goes wrong upon his wife, as if, forsooth, it were a legitimate convenience to have a wife upon whom to heap the faults he will not bear himself, and cannot so conveniently charge upon others?

Is that man fit to be a husband who thinks a woman need never be tired, or sick, or out of patience; although the care and labor of rearing a numerous family are constantly wasting her strength and nervous energies to a degree that only mothers can know—to say nothing of the additional burden of keeping the house, and attending to the various domestic duties, as well as the wearing anxiety to please an exacting husband?

Did'nt that man make a mistake when he married and left his mother, and is constantly referring to the good lady in this wise: "my mother did'nt do so; why can't you do as she did?"

Does that man deserve the name of husband or father who practically teaches his children to disregard their mother's counsel and authority by his own want of respect and deference toward her? The same question may be asked of the father who does not hesitate to let fall on the quick ear of childhood language or doubtful propriety, perhaps of profanity and obscenity—while the mother protests in vain, or weeps and prays in secret, and against hope, that the father's baneful influence may be counteracted, and their children grow up pure and good.

Is be a husband or a petty tyrant, who has not sufficient confidence in his wife to trust to her judgement any share of the furnishing of the family, scarcely the purchase of her own clothing; although her taste and prudence may be vastly superior to his own. Thereare are husbands whose sense of justice is so delicate, that they can coolly put in their own pocket to spend when and as they please every dollar of the mutual earnings, while the wife, if called upon to subscribe to any charitable, literary, or other objects, is compelled to reply, "I would gladly do so, but have not means—Mr. ——keeps all the money.

Has he call to be a husband who spends fifteen or twenty dollars per cannum (more or less) for tobacco, and thinks he does a great kindness if he allows his wife to give away two or three; while he regards the expenditure of a few dollars for books papers, or lectures, as an extravagance, not to be thought of; and anything promotive convenience in his house as an unnecessary outlay?

Finally, is any man or woman fitted to assume the responsibilities of husband or wife whose life is not under the control of a high moral principle; who has not learned to govern the passions, and bring the love of self into subservience to the welfare and happiness of others? Our questions may seem to some to be overreaching and needless; but our close observation of some who are apparently regarded by themselves, at least, as moderal companions, and even among those professing godliness, has made them painfully prominent in our considerations. And we present them in the hope that they may lead such to consider more carefully the obligations resting upon them and the manner in which they are discharging them.—[Congregationalist.

ONIONS AND POULTRY.—Scarcely too much can be said in praise of onions for fowls. They seem to be a preventive and remedy for various diseases to which domestic fowls are liable. Having frequently tested their excellencies, we can speak understandingly. For inflammation of the throat eyes and head, onions are almost a specific. We would therefore, recommend giving fowls and especially young chicks, as many as they will eat, as often as twice or three times a week. They should be finely chopped. A small addition of cornmeal is an improvement.—Genesee Farmer.

A poor woman named Barlow has given birth in London to a child with two heads. The baby, five weeks old, is a deep affliction to its parents, having been born with a second head attached to the first in such a manner that the smallest twist or sudden movement would cause immediate death. The poor mother is unable to lay it down without fear, and unable to dress it without the assistance of another person.

A gentleman, who had the curiosity to spend a dime in answering an advertisement which promised valuable advice for that amount, received by mail the following answer:

Friend, for your ten cent postage, please find enclosed advise which may be of great value to you. As many persons are injured for weeks, months and years, by the careless use of a knife, I before my advise is, when you use a knife, always whittle from you.

Why is a man charged with a crime like types? Because he should not be locked up till the matter was well proved.

How Long People will Live.

We hear much said about the uncertainty of human life, but we are apt to ignore the fact that it is only to man's individual existence that this uncertainty attaches.—Nothing is more conclusively established, for example, than that the dread reaper's scythe cuts a clean swath over the surface of our earth every thirty-three years, garnering into eternity, during every century, so to speak, three full successive crops of humanity. Thus every year, as it wings its flight, takes note of the death throes of thirty million mortals, who at the rate of one in every second of time, or ninety thousand each day, experience a change of worlds. Their places are supplied by births of equal number, and this new growth springs up to meet its fate from the same sickle's inexorable sweep. One quarter of all who are born die before reaching seven years of age; only one-half pass their seventeenth year. There is, therefore, a natural law of mortality, the operations of which, while they may appear eccentric, uncertain, and irregular, as to individuals, are fixed, systematic, and calculable when applied to masses or communities of men. For instance, an English writer has asserted that out of 100,000 persons born at any particular time, a certain number will yield a clear life in each year; in other words, the aggregate will be diminished in an increasing but regular proportion till none are left alive. Of the entire number named, only one-half will reach forty-five years of age. 60,941 will live to the age of twenty-nine; and out of the survivors exactly one in a hundred will die in the following year.—37,996 will live to be sixty years old; and 1,121 will die in their sixtieth year. So nicely, as well as frequently, have such observations been made, that rules comparatively correct, may even be applied to large numbers of people of the same age. Taking 10,000 persons of the age of fifty-two, we will find that 152 will die before reaching fifty-three, and so on. It is said that, with reference to the whole population of London, the same number of deaths by consumption occur in that city each year, and similar regularity is confidentially predicated of the various other contingencies to which life is subject.

A Roadside Dialogue.

"And so Squire you don't take a county paper?"

"No Major, I get the city paper on much better terms; I get a couple of them."

"But Squire, the county papers often prove a great convenience to us."

"Why I don't know any convenience they are to me."

"The farm you sold last fall was advertised in one of them, and thereby you obtained a customer. Did you not?

"Very true, Major, but I paid three dollars for it."

"And you made more than three hundred by it. Now, if your neighbours had not maintained the press and kept it up and ready for use, you would have been without the means to advertise your property. And your brother's death with a long obituary notice. And the destruction of neighbour Sigg's house by fire. You know these things are exaggerated till the authentic account of the newspaper sets them right,"

"O, true, but—"

"And when your cousin Splash was up for the Legislature, you appeared much gratified at his defence which cost him nothing."

"Yes, yes, but these things are news to the reader. They cause the people to take the papers."

"No, Squire Grudge, if all were like you. Now, I tell you, the day will surely come when somebody will write a long eulogy on your life and character, and the printer will put it in type with a heavy black rule over it, and with all your riches this will be done for you as a pauper.

Your wealth, liberality, and all such things will be spoken of, but the printer's boy, as he spells the words in arranging the type of these sayings, will remark—"Poor mean devil, he is even sponging his obituary!" Good morning Squire."

PRINTING WITHOUT INK.—A gentleman, a large capitalist, and one of the most successful inventors of the day, has succeeded in chemically treating the pulp, during the process of manufacturing paper in such a manner that when the paper is pressed upon the inked types, the chemical particles are crushed, and a perfect black impression is the result. The advantage sought to be obtained in the discarding of ink on the rollers; and by revolutionizing printing machinery, and printing from a continuous roll of paper, it is calculated that the time occupied in impressing large quantities of paper will be nominal in comparison to the requirements of the present day. Cleanliness in the printing office would thus become proverbial, and the time now wasted in making and distributing the roller obviated. We have been assisting this gentleman in some parts of his experiment, and further information is withheld at his own request, until letters patent shall be obtained.—London Typographical Advertiser.

Says Ruskin, "It is a no less fatal error to despise labor when regulated by intellect than to value it for its own sake. We are always in these days trying to separate the two; we want one man to be always thinking, and another to be always working, and we call the one a gentleman as the other an operative; whereas the workman ought often to be thinking, and both should be gentlemen in the best sense. As it is, we make both ungentle, the one envying, the other despising his brother; and the mass of society is made up of morbid thinkers and miserable workers. Now it is only by labor that thought can be made health; and only by thought that labor can be made happy, and the professions should be made liberal, and there should be less pride felt in peculiarity of employment, and more in excellence of achievement."

What is that which is so brittle that if you name it you are sure to break it? Silence.

The President's Message.

This remarkable document was transmitted to Congress on the 5th instant. It is a very lengthy one, and treats of a variety of subjects. The most prominent are: The perpetuity of the Union, State rights, each State to decide on matters of change affecting itself, and many other matters. The cry against Great Britain is not wholly subsided; the charge of aiding and abetting the South is still set forth, and the matter of the pirates is to be treated as a great international question. On the subject of Mexican or other interference, the Message says little; but intimates that the action of monarchies may compel the United States to declare herself protector of Republicanism on the western hemisphere.

An Important Chancery Case.

THE UNITED STATES IN A CANADIAN COURT.

The famous Propeller Georgian, concerning which there was so much a do during the border troubles, is again coming into notice. A bill has been filed in chancery and an injunction granted by Mr. Vice-Chancellor Esten restraining all interference by the defendants with the vessel. There are two Plaintiffs—the United States, and Mr. David Thurston, the American consul in Toronto. The defendants—G. S. Denison, the younger; W. W. Cleary, and the Attorney General for Upper Canada. The celebrated W. L. McDonald is the chief witness for the United States. Said McDonald has obtained pardon, and now wishing to gain favour, hands over all correspondence in his possession, and to this offers evidence in the matter. Col. Thompson it would appear used McDonald in purchasing the vessel but afterwards used Mr. Denison and had the writings so drawn that Denison could swear he was the owner by his giving notes, which it is set forth were never intended to be paid, as Denison received $250 to make some alterations which McDonald was employed to do.

"McDonald's carpentering operations on her were put an end to by his arest on a charge of breaking the neutrality laws. The bill and evidence contain long and interesting correspondence between Denison and McDonald as to the changes proposed, in which Thompson is sometimes referred to as the "old man," or "the Col." the vessel was to be rigged with wire ropes as being better for a warm climate, and after a cargo was obtained was to start for Halifax—what her future was to be in the deep blue sea is matter of conjecture. The vessel has, it is well known, been under an embargo for some months and is still at Collingwood.

The fall of the Confederacy is set out and the bill claims the boat for the United States as heirs at law of the late government, and prays for a decree of the court to that effect, and that meantime the defendants, Denison and O'Leary, may be restrained from interfering with the vessel or the promissory notes given by Mr. Denison as above.

An ex-parte information was granted as stated above on Friday last on the application of Mr. Geo. Murphy. None of the defendants have yet answered or had an opportunity to tell their story which may of course clash, as to matters of facts, with those of Mr. W. L. McDonald, and we may also expect some nice points of international law to arise.—Globe.

Fire.

The Stave Factory of the late Geo. May, North Monaghan, was destroyed by fire on Saturday morning last. The fire broke out about half-past two. The fire was the work of incendiaries; as the parties who fired the building were seen and pursued, but escaped. An eye-witness says that they came from the direction of the gravel road and made off in that direction also. The barking of dogs aroused some of the neighbors and one of these we are informed, followed some distance after those whom the dogs were in pursuit of, but they had got too far away. This was about a quarter to two in the morning, and the premises were consumed at half-past two. No insurance. The loss we did not learn.

A proclamation appears further prorogueing Parliament till the 15th of January, not then to meet for the despatch of business.

The late Whitby Bank cases, of the Bank of Montreal against Sheriff Reynolds, have been heard in Toronto during the late term. The charge of Chief Justice Richards was in favour of the Bank, and refused to grant a new trial. The Globe remarks that something in the shape of Clear Grits implied that in certain cases it is worthy to take more than seven per cent, and that these there is ground for complaint, and argues that this will militate against our needed institutions, rendering them liable to vexatious litigation when an unscrupulous borrower may choose to give them trouble. Our own opinion is that law and practice are both at variance with high moral principles. The law, as it stands, appears to favour an indirect way of procuring more than what is declared legal interest—viz: seven per cent—by permitting the banks to make their notes payable at a different agency, thus thereby a commission may be obtained—and practice fully carries out the evasion. If the rate now allowed is too little, let it be increased to a stated sum. Every one knows that to discount a note at any of the banks for a year, will cost ten per cent. Then why not have the legal rate ten per cent. It may as well be paid directly as indirectly, is the way of commission, &c. The law, as it stands, lends a kind of legal sanction to a covert way of obtaining about three per cent per annum extra. This should not be. On the other hand, it would be manifestly unjust to allow any one to rob the bank of both principal and interest, fear of this induces the courts to give decisions that are evidently contrary to law. We agree with the Globe, that this subject requires further legislation, although we may not be able to see the wisdom of Free Trade in money, as regards large institutions, as the Globe does.

St. John's Church Bazaar.

The Concert so much talked of in aid of this Bazaar "came off" on Tuesday evening with "great eclat." The Town Hall was densely crowded—most uncomfortably so—and the Committee will, no doubt, realise a handsome surplus. The "Tea and Coffee" business, however, proved—as most people anticipated—a nuisance. Tea and Coffee are all very well in assemblies held in Churches and School Rooms, where refreshments may be essential to the continuous infliction of a dozen speeches; but in a Concert Room!—well—Tuesday evening's experience was enough to convince the most sceptical. The programme was well arranged and must have given general satisfaction.

In an Amateur Concert it would be entirely out of place to criticise minutely the individual performers particularly where, as in this instance, all did so well. Especially noticeable, however, was the brilliant Duett Ojos Criollos and the Song Ah! I have sighed to rest me; also the Encore to "Tramp, Tramp," which fully equalled the harmony of the Port Hope Warblers. The Comic Songs were enthusiastically received, as they usually are.

The invaluable services of Mr. Heathfield cannot be over-rated. As a tinist he is unsurpassed, and his finished execution and excellent taste must always establish his artistic reputation.

Altogether the Concert was a great success and the Committee must feel indebted to the ladies and gentlemen who so readily came forward to aid in so good a cause.

The Senior Board of Education for this County held the semi-annual Examination of Candidates for Teachers, on Tuesday last. The members of the Board present were: Revs. J. M. Roger and E. Roberts, and Dr. Poole. The following is a list of Candidates and of the Certificates obtained:

FIRST CLASS.

Charles H. Hunter, Otonabee; Alexander Haggart, Smith; Mary Ivison, Peterboro'.

SECOND CLASS.

James Dewart, Dummer; Walter H. Kidd, Dummer; James Collins, Hastings; Isaac Campbell, Springville; Jane Forsythe, Dummer; Elizabeth Driscoll, Asphodel; Jane Becket, Asphodel.

THIRD CLASS.

The New Map of Peterborough and Ashburnham.

The Messrs. Fitzgerald & Bolger, P. L. S. are publishing a new map of the Town and village of Ashburnham. It is neatly got up, and contains the names of owners—as far as can be ascertained—of every Lot and subdivision of Lots. The dwellings of Brick wood and stone are distinguished in different colors; the entrances to the private residences are also exhibited on the map; and the whole is undoubtedly very accurately and tastefully executed. Subscribers are now required to reward them for their trouble We trust that their labors will be properly appreciated, and that a long list will very soon be furnished.

The Protestant Home.

The thanks of the Committee of the Protestant Home are due for the following donations, during the month of November: Mrs. A. H. Campbell, two pairs blankets; Mr. A. Stewart, 100 lbs flour; Mrs. A. W. Kempt, a parcel containing a variety of articles; Mrs. Wallis, vegetables; Mrs. Ormond, one goose; Mrs. Ware, vegetables and pork; a Friend, two inkstands; Mrs. Kirkpatrick, six bushels turnips and a rag carpet; Mrs. Patten, 2 lbs woollen yarn; Mrs. Ivan O'Beirne, two chairs; Mrs. Jas. Hamilton, a cart-load of wood; Mrs. Mark Burnham, a parcel of men's clothing.

Literary Club.

We are requested to state that the meeting this evening will be open to the public. W. H. Scott. Esq. will read an essay, and Messrs. Jas. Hall and Knapp will give recitations, after which the subject for debate, viz: "Was the Emperor Napoleon a greater General than the Duke of Wellington," will be taken up. Leaders—D. Haggart and Jas. Hall. In order to prevent the frequent interruptions to the speakers caused by persons coming in every moment, it is proposed that no person will be admitted after 8 30 p. m.

Coal Oil.

There was a current report here last evening that "ile" has actually been discovered in considerable quantities. We had not time to make proper inquiries before going to press. We wish the report may prove true.

Coal Oil—Lakefield.

A preliminary meeting was held in Lakefield, on the 30th ult., by a number of the inhabitants, for the purpose of forming themselves into a Petroleum Company; when John G. Stapin waswchosen Chairman, and W. C. Nicholls Secretary. A Committee consisting of Robert Strickland, John G. Stapin, and W. C. Nicholls, Esqr. was appointed for the purpose of preparing stock-books and constitution to be submitted to the Company; and thus our friends at Lakefield are going a prospecting. We wish them success.

We invite the attention of our readers to Mr. James Campbell's new avertisements, in to-day's issue. He has removed to George Street, three doors from Hunter Street; where his stock of every article found in a first-class Grocery Establishment will be found complete; and he assures the public that he will sell very cheap. Intending purchasers would do well to give Mr. Campbell a trial. Just 3 doors from Hunter Street.

From our Port Hope exchanges we learn that our enterprising townsman, Mr. G. A. Stewart, P. L. S., is preparing a Map of the Town of Port Hope. The Town Council appointed a Committee to report on the wisdom of the Council giving a reasonable sum towards defraying the expense of getting it up. This Committee met and after comparing the new Map with a projected map of the late J. K. Roach, decided in favor of Mr. Stewart's map, and adopted a report recommending his purchase thereof, and also the giving of $100 extra to have it lithographed.

A new Literary periodical to be styled The Argos, is about to be published by Alexander Strahan & Co., Montreal. The prospectus does not launch into a column of promises, never to be fulfilled, but simply announces that it will be left to "The Argos to make friends or lose them." and that its first number will be issued on the 15th inst. We must await its birth before speaking of its merits or demerits.

T C. Walbridge, Esq., M. P. P. for North Hastings, has been feted lately. There were about 75 persons present. Mr. Walbridge's speech on the occasion occupies five columns of the Chronicle. He endeavoured to clear up his position in reference to the working of the Marmora Railway, but has signally failed to do so. Mr. Flint has evidently the best side of the question.

Ex-Alderman Patterson, of Hamilton notoriety, who was so wound up in the burglaries at that place, and who fled for fear of being arrested in connection therewith, has lately returned and given himself up. Bail has been accepted, and he awaits his trial. The principal witness, however, is reported missing.

It is said that the Iturbide family have renounced all claims to the Mexican throne for the sum of $100,000 each. This family established Mexican independence; in the year 1823 they resigned their claims for $25,000, but again sought for the crown.—Once more the family resign their claims for $100,000.

An important decision has lately been given in the Lincoln County Court, before I. M. Lawder, Esq., when it was decided that a woman cannot carry on business in her own name while her husband liveth, and this more especially when the intentions are to defraud the husband's creditors.

ASHBURNHAM COUNCIL.

December, 4th, 1865.

Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—The Reeve and Messrs. Bennet, Strickland and McGregor.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and approved.

Accounts from J. Z. Rogers, for $14,58; Geo. Richie, $4,62½; R. D. Rogers, $30,62; were recommended to be paid.

Reports of Returns of the Weight Scales, up to 30th ult., were received; but one of them not being satisfactory was referred to the Reeve to have it adjusted if possible.

A By-law was passed for regulating the Market in the Village of Ashburnham, and providing one to take care of the Market House.

Council of Smith and Harvey.

December 4, 1865.

The Council met. All the members present. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

Application was made by Authbert Branch, to have $6.00 refunded which he had paid as fine for two Bulls running at large, and stated that said Bulls had strayed from his premises in consequence of his fence having been removed to prevent it from being destroyed by fire. Application granted.

The Reeve read a notice from S. Smith, Esq., Attorney, stating that a writ of summons would shortly be issued out of the County Court against the Council at the suit of Jno. W. Moore, of the Township of Smith, for damage he had sustained by injury his horse had received whilst travelling along a crossway on the 12th Concession of Smith, said damage being laid at £50. Mr. Moore was present, and after some discussion the case was referred to arbitration. Mr. Dean was appointed arbitrator by the Council, and Mr. Moore appointed Mr. Bloomfield.

The petition of Joseph Smith and 35 others was read, praying that the Council would pass a By-law to repeal a By-law adopted by the duly qualified Municipal Electors of the Municipality under authority and for enforcement of the Temperance Act of 1864. A By-law was passed for the purpose petitioned for, and the Clerk was directed to advertise the time and place, when and where a poll would be opened to determine whether or not the repealing By-law would be approved by the electors of the Municipality.

A By law was passed to fix the place where the election of Councillors for the Township of Smith, for 1866, shall be held.

The Treasurer was directed to pay to A. Smith, Esq., the sum of $87.46, being the difference between the amount received from the Clergy Reserve Fund and the amount the Receiver General advised the Reeve was payable to the Municipality.

And also to the following indigent persons as charities, viz; to William Adams, $10; Widow Freeburn, $5; and to Widow Gallaspie, $6.

The Council then adjourned till the second Monday in January next.

LITERARY ASSOCIATION.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

SIR,—Allow me to throw out a hint for those attending these interesting meetings of this society. The proceedings invariably begin at 8 o'clock. How is it that parties continue to drop in at intervals till 9, interrupting the proceedings to the annoyance of all concerned, both readers, speakers, and listeners. Those of the audience who find it inconvenient to be punctual had better remain at home. By doing so they would oblidge at least one

PRESENT OR LAST OCCASION.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—As there are localities in our town becoming notorious for their dirt and filth, especially to the tavern yards, &c., caused by carelessness and indifference to common decency; so much so that it is exceedingly detrimental to the public comfort and health, and as a similar nuisance readiness may exist there, without redress, I may say I appealed for the removal of it. I beg to refer to a decision of Chief Constable Arnott, when called upon to take notice of a privy which was situated close to the front of a respectable store on one of the leading streets.—He, Mr. Arnott, said that in his opinion it was no nuisance, (although the quadrangle was therein announced in all its filth) to the passers by. Now it is needless to say that Chief Constable Arnott was remiss in his public duty; but I have good grounds for stating that his opinion in the matter is very distasteful to the public generally, and I would take this occasion as inquire of our City Fathers if Chief Constable Arnott comes up to the requirements of his duty as defined by their Committee.

A RATEPAYER.

Peterborough, Dec. 5th, 1865.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—I see by the last issue of the Review that the Editor of that paper is still prosecuting his wanton and unmanly tirade of abuse against me—perhaps for want of some better employment. He calls me a liar, a fool, and a host of other things; but whether his conduct since and including his first attack on me, shows ignorance or folly, I am willing that his readers should judge. As to my going into the Review office, it is true I did; but there are so many Editors and Editoresses there, that a person hardly knows (in the very absence of what is said to exist even among thieves—honor) whether you have the right one or not. I asked the foreman, Mr Burk, if Mr. Bennett was in; he said he was not. I asked him did he represent that worthy there during his absence; he said he did. I then told him that I wished him to insert my letter; he said distinctly that he would unless it was fearfully long. I then handed it to him, to satisfy him on that point; and, although he had already promised to publish it, and after having told me that he represented Mr. Romaine, he then said that I must call again, which I considered equal to a refusal and a breach of promise too. But, sir, the Editor appears rather uncomfortable in his present position, notwithstanding it is the one of his choice. He evidently wishes to take another tack, and to carry the attention of his readers with him, while he evades the point at issue; but that position being chosen by himself, I insist on his keeping it until he either substantiates his assertion or else apologises to me. He says, I suppose, in the face of his assertion, it matters not whether I gummed the petition over the original or some one else did it. Now, I verily believe he is fond of plums, I will give him one hundred dollars when he shows that I did it; besides, I will give him ten dollars if he finds a respectable man whose name is on said petition that is dissatisfied with the change made in the heading. If he will not do so, I may be forced to take measures of compelling him. He further tells the public that there are a great many other things I have yet to learn. I readily acknowledge that; and I say God forbid that I should go through the ordeal through which he has passed to learn any of the things which I suppose he alludes to; for, sir, he has at least tried to do what is declared impossible for either the Ethiopian or the Leopard to do, and like those animals, has not really succeeded; for he still delights in lies—a mark of one not very highly spoken of for moral character.

With many thanks to you, sir, for your kindness in inserting my last, and in hopes that you will insert this also,

I remain yours truly,
WILLIAM TOOLE.

Auld Scotia and Scotia's Sons.

Auld Scotia! wee bit bonnie Isle,
Fain wad I sing for your renown;
But wae's me, auld, I canna spin
Can ne'er be tauld wi' my bit pen.
There our guid Queen she likes to gang,
Among the broom an' heather lang,
Or sit aside the bonnie burn,
An' grieve for ane that can't return;
Tu o'e the raven on the rock,
Or watch the mist—John Paddon's cloak—
Her waning cheek grows fresh an' fair
Wi' Scotia's scenes an' Scotia's air.
Birthplace o' mony a gallant chield,
Her hill an' glen the battle field,
Her lofty peak, crag, rock an' scar,
Their watch-toor in the time o' war,
When border warriors crossed the Tweed,
Ta spleet in twa ilk Scotchman's head;
They crossed the Merse—the muirs the gain—
Ta ficht—aye, rather ta be a sin;
Whene'er the chaps wad show their face,
The warlike Scots were on the chase,
The Scottish steel their ranks wad thin,
Some in the ground, some homeward rin,
Far fra auld Scotia's bonnie braes,
Whar aft we played in youthfu' days.
Na time nor distance can deface
The love o' hame in Scotia's race.
Another year o' work an' care
Has gone, an' Scots ha' met ance mair,
Ta sing o' Scotia, far away,
And celebrate St. Andrew's Day.
Some care the Scotchman rather richt—
May-be that's a wee thing richt—
But, richt or wrang, a heart they've got
Ta love ta help a brither Scot;
Why your Society, I believe,
A needy Scotchman will relieve;
If honest want has brocht him low,
Ta him some help ye wad bestow;
When canld the drift o' winter blaw,
An' frost that wad maist lock your jaw,
Ye've are warm an' plenta meat,
Mind them that's canld an' nought to eat.
Na dout there's some o' Scotia's race
That's poor enuch in this same place;
They hate ta beg, or yet apply
Ta you, who wad their wants supply.
Misfortune may hae been their lot,
And left them here without a groat,
Ablins it was affliction sair
That drained their purse an' left them bare;
Perhaps they has themsel's ta blame—
A wafu' life o' sin an' shame;
Ta tell the truth, richt weel I ken,
Scots has their faults, like ither men.
Forsooth, there's guid an' honest Scots,
Whar poverty seems but their lots,
They idle gang—ta work they're willin'—
But, ah! they canna mak' a shillin':
Sea that puir Scots wi' grief he's shaken—
Provisions dear—nae wages makin'—
His puir bit wife in silence greetin',
Wi' hung e'his wee bairns greetin';
Though sad your fate cheer up a wee,
Your brither Scots some help will gie;
Although gien bites in quicksin gane,
Better ta has ena' fish than nane.
O, lang may your society prove
A source o' charity an' love;
Should want some canny Scot oppress,
May your free gifts relieve distress.
Lush, muckle pleasures maun it gie,
Ta meet this nicht 'mang mirth an' glee,
The haggis pee an' oaten cake,
Ta toast an' cheer for Scotia's sake.
Ance mair wi' hand an' heart o' thine,
The card o' freendship ta entwine,
Ta ane an' a', wi' heart, I say:
"Aff may ye ha'd St. Andrew's Day."

WILLIAM TELFORD.

Smith, Nov. 30, 1865.

To a Friend:

I was grieved with what you told to me—
Shame on those narrow-minded Scots that be Forever striving to display their power,
Preventing others of a social hour;
They feel no good, at I see in their own eyes,
To mingle with inferiors they despise;
They shudder at the gust, though it is small,
And swallow up the camel, hair and all;
They are not Scots—they only bear the name—
Loyal Scots would brand them with the stigma —shame!
I always find auld Scotia's sons at heart
Are glad to meet but very loath to part.

Collectors on the frontier report that smugglers are becoming alarmed at the precautions made to apprehend them, and that the business is falling off. Merchants along the line, both in the States and Canada, are shutting up their shops and suspending operations. Since the system of closely examining the clothing of females who cross the frontier, that class of travel is falling off. Not one woman crosses the St. Lawrence now where twenty did before.

For the Examiner.

Innovation, Precedent and Theory.

"Be not given to change" is the pithy exhortation of a time serving state priesthood, to their credulous flocks, on all appropriate occasions. Liberal your Politics, Free your Opinions, Christian in word and in deed, be ye Queen's men in spirit and true to your superiors, for ye and the Sheep who grow wool for your mantings, and entrust to their keeping in season and out of season."

"We must be guided by precedent" exclaims the fiery judge as he sits enthroned on the Bench, dressed like a fantastic old dandy on a holiday; "we must be guided by precedent, and not decide according to the simple dictates of justice;" accompanying these last words with a stern look, and giving the curls of his wig an aristocratic toss of defiance to all Liberals; "not according to the simple dictates of justice" he repeats "as there is an end to one learning and Lordships, and our law books (of which there are tens of thousands) may go the scullery, for the edification of the Cook and Kitchen maid."

"It is all theory, sheer theory" mutinies some would be Aristocrat; who by means of low cunning and "shaving" has acquired a little property. "All very fine for you smart Hiberdarto talk about," having contemptuously at his opponent. "The system you propose is a mere Utopia gotten up for the purpose of applying other people's property to your own use," bestowing (as he gives his last home thrust) a nervous glance at his brick-and-mortar erection, to see if it is not already in the possession of some villainous liberal, like the gates of Gaza on the shoulder of Samson.

There is nothing Mr. Editor which excites our risible propensities more than the bugbears raised by men who have acquired a little property, concerning the evil intentions of men who hold liberal political opinions. That state priests, would-be-Aristocrats, and lawyers, should tremble at the very suppositions of innovation is not astonishing; because they know well that there is little probability of any change in either Great Britain or her colonies, being made in coming years for their exclusive advantage. To make the world, therefore, believe that those who seek for the well-being of their country in the wholesome correction of what is wrong either as it regards the government, or any other moral reform are men who want to fill their own pockets at the expense of the country, is only what might be expected of State-priests, Aristocrats and their imitates; but that men of whom better things might be expected, should be silly enough to believe them, and to dread any prospective change in the laws of our common country is as ludicrous as it is injurious.

The predominance of reason is seriously obstructed by the superstitious devotions paid to the Idol, precedent; and the foolish dread of that Hobgoblin, innovation, has frightened the Leader, the Peterborough Review and the Montreal True Witness and others of the same kidney almost half out of their wits. What are they afraid of? with the priests of Oxford and Rome, I will answer: "Their craft is in danger." Innovation, which they so much dread, is almost as comprehensive in its meaning as the word "change," which from the beginning of the world, to the present time has been in constant operation. The whole history of science, arts, laws, &c., is but the history of different kinds of innovations. All the memorials of the past, from savage rudeness to civil refinement, are but the details of various innovations.

Innovation, however, is to be reckoned good, according to its qualities. If it is calculated to promote the greatest possible happiness of the greatest possible number, it is good; but if it has a positive tendency to aggrandize the few at the expense of the many, it is evil, because its qualities diminish the amount of human happiness and virtue.

Intimately connected with these, and equally discordant with reason, is the fastidious antipathy prevailing against theory.—All the contrivances which facilitate the means of subsistence, and administer to the comforts of life, owe their production to preconceived theories.

Accident may have made some fortunate discoveries; but it was the ry that rendered them profitable. Conduct the business of the world without principle, without science, without system, &c. in short without theory, confusion follows, and chaos comes again.

FENIANI.

The examination of Stephens, the "Head Centre" of the Fenians in Ireland, and his accomplices, has been occupying the attention of the public. Mr. Barry, Q. C., M. P., prosecuted. Mr. Michael O'Laghlen, instructed by Mr. Lawless, appeared for the prisoners.

THEIR APPEARANCE.

Everyone seemed favourably impressed with the appearance of Stephens, the alleged "Head Centre" in Ireland, who, from his personal appearance, as well as his reputed position in the conspiracy, is almost the only man of mark among the Fenian prisoners Pre-eminently a "smart man," he is rather below the middle stature, with smooth cheeks, a fair complexion, a fine, large auburn beard, and hair of a light-brown colour, curling round the back of the head, the front and top being entirely bald, showing a very good development of the intellectual and moral faculties. "firmness" being remarkably large. The eyes are small, lively, and restless. The temperament is evidently sanguine and nervous, indicating quickness of perception, energy, and determination. He speaks fluently and correctly, with a slight Yankee accent. His manners are gentlemanly, saving a certain abruptness and impatience. He was, however, apparently very much at ease during the day, not at all like a prisoner charged with a great crime, but rather like an attorney watching a case, with a full consciousness of his own superior ability and the goodness of his cause, with a sovereign contempt for "the other side."

Mr. Kickham is quite a contrast to Mr. Stephens. He is a much taller man, with lengthened features, sallow complexion, abundance of dark hair and beard, and rather a heavy manner, which may be accounted for by the fact that he is very deaf, and is obliged to converse with the aid of a trumpet with a very long tube. He is an educated, gentlemanly person, apparently earnest and truthful. He anxiously and strongly repudiated what he called the assassination doctrines that had been laid to the charge of the Fenians. Duffy is a delicate-looking youth, having the appearance of a compositor in the habit of working all night. Murphy is a healthy-looking young man, of respectable appearance, very like what he professes to be, a builder. Like Messrs. Stephens and Kickham, he was dressed in fine black broadcloth. Stephens seems to pay particular attention to his toilet and strives to maintain the character of a man of high cultivation and elegant taste. He is said to be a good scholar, acquainted with modern languages, and to have been a private tutor in two or three highly respectable families in this country.

The United States Congress was opened at Washington, on Monday. The President's message states that relations with England and France were never more satisfactory than at present. We trust it will long continue so.

Cholera is reported as having appeared in the Island of Guadaloupe, one of the French West India Islands; and in consequence the dread of this terrible plague has reached to other places and causes consternation.

We understand that the prisoners Lewis, the "Notorious Robber," who was demanded from our authorities, on a charge of robbery committed in Oswego, has been remanded to jail to await the arrival of the U. S. officers, to whom he will be handed over after the proper formalities of extradition have been completed. Unless the thieving dignitaries act on the principle of "dealing gently with the erring," we fear our colored friend will have a "hard row to hoe."—Belleville Chronicle.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION.

THE PEERAGE IN CANADA.

The New York Herald of Friday last contains a letter from its Toronto correspondent—who must be a worshipper, worded in fulsome terms of the Prince of Wales and in which he says:—Above (which we take the privilege of italicising) is an inquiry and item by your reporter, for you and the Sheep who grow wool for your mantings, and entrust to their keeping in season and out of season."

"From returns just made to the Provincial Council of the Brotherhood of Genesis I am enabled to give the following figures, which will surprise everybody not familiar with the sentiments of the friend of Canada. I give only a few of the towns. The first column shows the number in sympathy, and of course cannot be relied upon; but the last shows the number already enrolled:—

"These figures, I am informed, include many persons residing outside of the corporation limits, but members of the local centres or lodges.

"The number armed is also given in the returns; but it is one of the secrets of the Brotherhood which I am unable to get at. I am assured, however, that over half of the enrolled members are armed either with rifle, gun, revolver or pike—many with rifle and revolver, which seem to be the popular weapons."

Latest from Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2, 1865.

Mr. Chapais has arrived here.

A large quantity of new furniture is about to be manufactured for the government offices under the direction of the Board of Works.

The river is still open, but every little freight is offering, so that the Montreal boat has ceased running.

Today the weather is mild-half snow and half rain.

The Canada Gazette of to-day contains a militia general order directing all correspondence, except on finance, to be addressed to the Brigade-Majors of the respective Districts.

The names of twenty-eight new insolvents are published.

DIED.

At "Auchanellan Cottage," Ashburnham, on Monday, the 4th December. Donald Kerr, 4th son of the late Donald Macfarlane, aged 20 years and ten months.

The funeral will leave the family residence, to-day, at one o'clock, p. m.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

21st Vol. of the Montreal Witness

FOR 1866.

TWENTY EVENTFUL YEARS have run their course, since the Montreal Witness first saw the light, and though they have been full of changes there has been no change in the reasons for commencing it, namely, the great importance to society of a wholesome family newspaper.

Is a Mother's Magazine desirable in a family? The Witness has had as much matter every year of the kind inserted in Mother's Magazines as any monthly publication under that name.

Is a Children's Magazine of Sunday School Paper desirable? The Witness has had more of the class of reading suitable for those publications than any of them.

Is an Agricultural Paper of great benefit to the country? The Witness has had about as much on that subject monthly as would fill a good-sized agricultural journal.

Is a Temperance Paper of great importance to families and the country? The Witness has had more on that subject than any ordinary monthly temperance paper.

Is a Commercial Paper wanted by men of business and farmers? The Witness has fully as much commercial matter as any exclusively commercial paper.

Is a Literary Paper wanted? The Witness has had a goodly proportion of Poetry, Tales, Reviews, and other literary matter.

Should a witness for truth, and against error, injustice and vice be sustained? The Witness has done its best in all these respects.

Is a newspaper essential to an intelligent family? The Witness has given more news than most papers in Canada.

A brief calculation will show the economy of procuring all these papers together instead of separately. The cost, if taken in the latter way, would, instead of the price of the Witness, be about as follows:—

Mother's Magazine,	$1 50
Children's Paper	50
Agricultural Paper	1 00
Temperance Paper	50
Commercial Paper	1 00
Literary Paper	2 00
Weekly Newspaper	1 00
	6 75

This shows a very great difference in first cost be idea the saving in postage.

We would not be understood, however, to mean that any one should be satisfied with the Witness only. On the contrary, we think it a wise economy so subscribe for various useful periodicals. There is, probably, no way in which a small sum of money yields so large a return of pleasure and profit. Our only object is to show how economical it is to subscribe for this paper.

There is another view of this matter, which is not a small reward for our twenty years' labour. During that time a very large number of families have been brought up with the Witness as their family paper. Parents and children have perused it regularly, and in it found the best selections we could make from the best writers of the world. All knew the power of a family paper to modify the views, opinions, and conduct of those to whom it obtains access, and if this one has aided in the bringing up of some thousands of families in principles of religion, temperance, integrity, and intelligent enterprise, what finite arithmetic can reckon up the gain!

The Witness reaches now in all its editions some seven thousand subscribers all over the country, besides an average circulation of some four thousand in the city of Montreal; and for this extensive circulation we are exceedingly thankful, but it is a matter of deep regret that the proportion of the people reached is yet so small.

There are probably about six thousand Protestant families in Montreal of which we reach about two-thirds; but there are about 200,000 Protestant families in the rest of Canada, of which we only reach 7,000, or less than a fortieth part. There is surely room here for a very large extension of all our editions.

The Daily Witness is by far the best of our editions for business men, having more reading matter and a great many more advertisements than any other edition. It has also full market reports daily. The subscription is $3,00 per annum.

The Montreal Witness (semi-weekly) contains nearly all the reading matter of the Daily, together with semi-weekly market reports and prices current. Subscription $2,00 per annum.

The Weekly Witness contains all the matter of permanent interest of the Semi-weekly, with weekly summary of news and market reports. Subscription $1,00 per annum.

The Canadian Messenger, published twice a month, contains the Temperance, Agricultural, Scientific, and Educational matter of the Witness, but without news, markets, or advertisements, as it goes post free. Subscription 25 cents per annum.

All these rates are payable invariably in advance, and the paper stops when the term subscribed for expires.

It should not be very difficult to get some one of these editions into almost every family if a friend of that family would only suggest the matter to them.

The price is so low that we cannot afford commissions, and indeed we have always received the greatest aid, in the way of obtaining subscribers, from parties who had no object in view but disinterested patriotism and benevolence. To all such, and may their number greatly increase, we hereby render hearty thanks for past favors, and ask them to continue their good offices.

The Witness is now dressed in a new suit of types, and no effort will be spared to keep it in the very front rank of Canadian journalism.

Advertisements not at variance with the character of the Witness will be inserted for one cent per word for one insertion and a half cent per word for each subsequent insertion, no advertisement being reckoned at less than 25 words.

Letters for the Witness or Messenger containing money should invariably be registered, and when this is done the remittance is at our risk. All communications to be addressed to "MONTREAL WITNESS," or TALE.

There's a new young lady's here to-day,
I wonder what's her name?
His father fixed on only pay—
Do look at Sallie Dame.

Who's that young lady dressed in green?
It can't be Mrs. Leach;
There's Mr. Jones with Parson Giles—
I wonder if he'll preach.

Look at Nancy Sleepers veil,
It's full a breadth too wide;
I wonder if Susannah Ayers
Appears to-day as bride?

Lord! what a voice Jane Rice has got,
Oh! how that organ roars;
I'm glad we've left the singers seat;
How can Miss Jones intimate secrets!

What ugly shawls those are in front!
Did you observe Ann Wild?
Her new straw bonnet's trimmed with black
I guess she's lost a child.

I'm half asleep: that Mr. Jones,
His sermons are so long;
This afternoon we'll stay home,
It's over; do come on!

Varieties.

Not to be Outdone.

In Artemus Ward's new book is the following:—

Years ago, a certain Mr. Blaze was an agent of the California Stage Company. There was a formidable and well organized opposition to the California Stage Company at that time, and Mr. Blaze rendered them such signal services in his capacity of agent that they were very sorry when he tendered his resignation.

'You are some sixteen hundred dollars behind in your accounts, Mr. Blaze,' said the President, 'but in view of your faithful and efficient services, we shall throw off the half of that amount.'

Mr. Blaze seemed touched by this generosity. A tear stood in his eye, and his bosom throbbed audibly.

'You will throw off eight hundred dollars—you will?' he cried, at last seizing the President's hand, and pressing it passionately to his lips.

'I will' replied the President.

'Well, sir,' said Mr. Blaze,' I'm a gentleman, I am, you bet! And I won't allow no Stage Company to surpass me in politeness. I'll throw off the other eight hundred dollars, and we call it square! No gratitude, sir, on thanks—it is my duty.

A proud person, and his man, riding over a common, saw a shepherd with a new coat on, tending his flock. The person asked him, in a very haughty tone, who gave him that coat. "The same that clothed you, the parish," said the shepherd. The person, nettled at this, rode on a little way, murmuring, and then bade his man go back and ask the shepherd if he would come and live with him, as he wanted a fool. The groom went accordingly to the shepherd, delivered his message, and concluded, as he was ordered, that his master wanted a fool. "Why, are you going away, then?" said the shepherd. "No," answered the other. "Then," said the shepherd, 'you may tell your master that his living cannot maintain three of us.'

The Norfolk Roanoke House folks, a few days since, hearing of the whereabouts of a guest who had decamped without going through the usual formality of paying his bill, sent him a note.

Mr ———. Dear sir: Will you send amount of your bill, and oblige, etc. To which the delinquent made answer: The amount is $80 61¼. Yours respectfully.

Lord Palmerston used to tell this anecdote of himself: "When I was a young man, the Duke of Wellington made an appointment with me at half-past seven in the morning, and some one asked me, 'Why, Palmerston, how will you keep that engagement?' 'Why,' I said, 'of course, the easiest thing in the world, I'll keep it the last thing before I go to bed.'"

Bawancipire, French Ambassador to Spain, was telling Henri Quatre how he hated Madrid. "I was mounted on the smallest mule in the world." "Ah," said Henri, "what an amusing sight, to bigest ass, on the smallest mule!" "I was your Majesty's representative," was the rejoinder.

In a chancery suit, one of the counsel describing the boundaries of his client's land, said, in showing the plan of it, "We lie on this side." The opposite counsel then said a good humored grin, observed, "If you lie on both sides whom will you have me believe?

A lover wrote to a lady who rejected him, saying that he intended to retire "to some secluded spot, and breathe away his life in sighs." To which the lady replied, by inquiring whether they were to be medium or large size. The man has not since been heard of.

Murphy was asked why it was so very difficult to waked him in the morning. "Indeed, master, it's because of taking your own advice, always to attind to what I'm about; so whatever I sleeps I pays attintion to it."

"Suppose a fellow should fail so badly that he could not even 'pay his addresses,' what should his lady love do about it?" asked a fop of a young lady. "She should at once grant him his discharge?" was the prompt response.

The question, Why do printers not succeed as well as brewers? was thus answered: Because printers work for the head and brewers for the stomach; and where twenty men have stomachs, but one has brains.

We sleep, but the loom of life never stops; and the pattern which was weaving when the sun went down, is weaving when it comes up to-morrow.

A Dutchman describes New York as berry fine people, who go about de streets a beating each oder, and dey call dat pizzness.

The Japanese say, "The tongue of woman is her sword, and she never lets it grow rusty for want of using it."

Sam Slick says he knew a man down East whose feet were so big that he had to pull his pantaloons on over his head.

The man who made an impression on the heart of a coquette, has become a skilful stonecutter.

It is a short step from modesty to bumfility, but a shorter one from vanity to folly and weakness to falsehood.

CONSOLING APHORISM.—For a nation to be largely in debt is, in the nature of things, much to its credit.

SHERIFF'S SALE OF LANDS.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias, issued out of Her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas and to me directed, at the suit of MELANCTHON H. SEYMOUR, HAMILTON H. WHITNEY and CHARLES EDWARD MAYNARD, Plaintiffs, and against the lands and tenements of WILLIAM SNYDER, Defendant, I have seized and shall offer for sale by Public Auction, at the Court House, Peterboro', on TUESDAY, the SECOND day of JANUARY next, at the hour of TWELVE O'CLOCK, NOON, all the right, title and interest of the above named defendant in and to the undermentioned lands and tenements, viz, Town Lots Numbers 18 and 19 West of George and North of Simcoe Streets in the Town of Peterborough; also part of Lot No. 6 West of George and North of King Streets, also in the Town of Peterborough, and described as follows, viz., commencing at the distance of one hundred and ninety-four feet South from a point on Charlotte Street, West twenty feet from the North-east corner of Lot No. West of George Street and South of Charlotte Street in the said Town of Peterborough, thence West to within the distance of twelve feet from the Western limit of the said first mentioned lot, thence South sixty-two feet thence East to within the distance of twenty feet of the Eastern limit of the said first mentioned lot, and then North to the place of beginning.

SHERIFF'S SALE OF LANDS.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Her Majesty's County Court for the County of Peterborough, and to me directed, against the lands and tenements which were of Peter Burns, deceased, at the time of his death, in the hands of Julia Burns. Admini-tratrix of and singular the goods and chattels which were of the said Peter Burns, to be administered, at the suit of Michael Hallihan, I have seized and taken in execution, all the right title and interest of the said Peter Burns, in the hands of the said Julia Burns to be administered, in and to the following lands and tenements, viz:

The west half of lot No. 24, in the 9th concession of the Township of Otonabee; and also part of lot No. 6, west of George street and south of Simcoe street, in the Town of Peterborough, and described as follows:—Commencing on Simcoe street at a distance of twenty-eight feet six inches west from the north-east corner of the said last mentioned lot, thence west twenty-eight feet six inches, thence south to within the distance of ten feet of the southern boundary of the said last mentioned lot, thence east twenty-eight feet six inches, thence north to the place of beginning; together with a right of way from Aylmer street ten feet wide.

All of which property I shall offer for sale, at the Court House, in the Town of Peterborough, on TUESDAY, the 20th day of FEBRUARY, 1866, at 12 o'clock, noon.

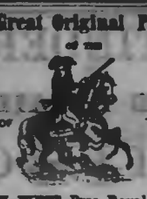
The Great Original Painting



BATTLE OF THE BOYNE

By REV. WEST, Pres. Royal Academy.

SPARKES, BOURNE & Co., would respectfully announce that they have now ready for delivery a splendidly got up Coloured Lithograph of the magnificent HISTORICAL PAINTING, representing the Battle at the moment of the death of the gallant Duke Schomberg; and which is published on the finest paper—size 22 × 30 inches.

This Picture—a faithful copy of the great Original—will be found incomparably superior to anything ever offered to the public either in this country or Great Britain. It has been executed by the first Artists of the day, and no trouble or expense has been spared to make it worthy of the justly celebrated Painter, and the GREAT HISTORICAL FACT which it represents, and which ought never to be forgotten by those who now enjoy the CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY which this event, more than any other in our history, was the means of establishing and perpetuating.

In times like these, when the principles of our Forefathers are being assailed on every hand, it is especially needful for us to bear in mind from whence sprung our Constitutional form of Government; and nothing contributes more to aid us in keeping in remembrance these momentous passages in our history than faithful representations by great Masters. And certainly no Historical Subject has been more ably treated than the above event by this celebrated Painter.

In presenting this Picture to the Protestant Community, and especially to those who are more feelingly alive to the vast benefits conferred on us by the ever memorable events of 1690, the Publishers feel every confidence that their efforts will be fully appreciated, and that this Picture will find an honored place in every Protestant home in the British Provinces.

The Publishers would call attention to the following recommendatory Letter which they have received:

Toronto, June 10th, 1865.

Messrs. SPARKES, BOURNE & Co.,

GENTLEMEN,—We are very much pleased with the Photograph of the Drawing of your forthcoming Colored Lithograph of the "Battle of the Boyne," and are of opinion that if the execution of the Work in Progress is carefully carried out, your anticipations of a very large sale will be fully realized.

1866. PROSPECTUS 1866.
or
The Globe Newspaper.

THE publisher of The Globe has to announce that very great improvements in the publication of this journal will be made in the coming year. A new font of beautiful type, cast specially for The Globe, has been imported from the celebrated Scottish Foundry of Millar and Richard, Edinburgh. The quality of the paper used in printing the journal will be much superior to that heretofore employed. Arrangements are now being made for increased Telegraphic facilities; and the corps of Writers, Reporters and correspondents, will be strengthened—increased effort will be put forth in every department to render The Globe more worthy than ever before of the immense circulation it has for so many years enjoyed throughout British America.

The year 1866 is likely to be a most eventful period in the history of Canada—a year in which the current events of the day will be of the deepest interest to every inhabitant of the country.

The new Parliamentary Buildings will, early in the coming spring, be opened for the first time at Ottawa.

The Government is pledged to present to Parliament, at the opening of the session, either a Bill for completing the Confederation of all British America, or a Bill establishing a new Federal constitution for Canada alone, based on the principle of Representation by Population in the popular branch.

On the 17th of March, 1866, the American Treaty of Reciprocity will come to an end; and the negotiations for its renewal, or preparations to meet the change, will be watched with much interest.

Arrangements for acquiring possession of, and opening the North-West territory for settlement, will be speedily made, and to these The Globe will devote special attention, as it has has hitherto done to everything connected with the subject.

With the settlement of the constitutional question that has so long distracted the Province, numerous questions affecting the material progress of this country will be thrown open for consideration. Among these will be—

The subject of Banking and Currency.
Enlarging the Canals, and otherwise improving the Internal Navigation of the country.
Reduction of the Customs' Tariff.
Interest on Money.
Opening up new Territory to settlement.
Free land grants to actual settlers.
A Homestead Law.
And many other vitally important subjects.

In the discussion and settlement of all these matters, The Globe will, as heretofore, take an active part; and from the sources of information at the command of its conductors, it is not doubted that in its columns the earliest intelligence and the most reliable information will continue to be found.

THE DAILY GLOBE

will continue to be mailed from the office at $6 per annum, payable invariably in advance; but can be procured regularly from the news-dealers in all the cities and towns throughout the Province.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE

will also be much improved in the year 1866. The paper will be of superior quality, and the new Scottish type will give it a great improved appearance. An editor has been engaged, whose special duty it will be to condense and arrange the matter for this edition, and to select intelligence specially adapted for country readers. A portion of each week's paper will be devoted to the publication of some interesting tale; and the markets and prices current will continue to be given with promptness and accuracy.

The Weekly Globe will continue to be published at TWO DOLLARS per annum, payable strictly in advance. Some exceptions to the rule of advance payment have been heretofore made—but from the 1st of January, 1866, no paper will be sent from the office without prepayment.

CLUB RATES.

During 1866 we will send:—

Six copies one year for	$10 00
Ten " "	15 00
Fifteen " "	22 50

and an extra copy of the Weekly to the person who gets up the club of fifteen.

Twenty-five copies one year for	35 00

and a copy of the Weekly Globe to the person who gets up the club of twenty-five.

Fifty copies one year for	65 00

and a copy of the Daily Globe one year to the person who gets up the club of fifty.

Eighty copies one year for	100 00

and a copy of the Daily.

Payment must be always in advance.

Each paper is addressed separately.

All the papers included in any club must be mailed to one Post-office.

When additional names are added to any club during the year, they must be sent to the Globe office by the person who made up the Club; and the money sent with such additional names must be such a proportion of the year's subscription at the Club rate as will pay up to the expiration of the Club.

No exception will be made to these rules on any ground whatever.

AMERICAN

Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering

SEWING MACHINE!

COMPANY,

627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLES made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produces a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c., &c., it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c., &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON-HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $4.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $3, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMETS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in TUNE than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two scorched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old heresy form of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Barili.
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry.	Charles Fradel

Mr. SIGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal verisimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5.—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr. S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

SEWING MACHINES.

EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salerooms, { 536 Broadway, New York, / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nansook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it almost impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

But in a more especial manner do we solicit the pat onage of

$10 A DAY to AGENTS.

LLOYD'S GREAT TOPOGRAPHICAL RAILWAY and COUNTY MAP of ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND and WALES—Size feet large, mounted and varnished; cost $100,000 and four years time; was finished July 28, 1 s the best map ever made since the world was formed; shows 200,000 cities, towns, villages, market places, post offices, castles, country seats, and 38,000 railways and railway stations, with the distance between each station marked plainly, and the official name and total length of each railway in actual operation up to June, 1865, as given. The railway stations are all numerically and alphabetically arranged. The lakes, rivers, hills and mountains are exhibited, with the altitude of each in feet, made from trigonometrical surveys by our own engineers, draughtsmen and Photographers sent to England expressly to make a superior map of that country; the whole engraved on steel, colored superbly in counties, mounted and varnished. Price 5 shillings sterling ($2). No map at $10 can compare to this. Canvassers throughout the world wanted. Also one, with a small capital, to go to Canada, Chicago, Cincinnati, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, East and West Indies, Australia and California, to open offices. Can make a fortune wholesaling this and other maps to sub-agents. Eighty thousand copies of this map were subscribed for in England before going to press, as can be shown by our agents' letters to us. Ten new maps now under way

CONQUERORS.

A GLANCE AT HISTORY ANCIENT AND MODERN.

They flashed like meteors through the rank,
Flinging brightness round their track—
A purple glory, such as streams
From tropic sunshine's parting beams,
Mantling the West at daylight's close
With richest blush of Eastern rose.

Go, studying lump of breathing clay,
And coax Millenniums passed away;
And o'er the waste of parish'd years,
What worth thy ardent quest engages?
What but the great Man-killers power
The splendours of the conquering hour.

Who heeds the wreck of human joy
When conquering outrage shout "destroy!"
And what's the worth of million groans
Of flaming towns, and perished thrones;
But added ruby light to fling
Around the forehead of a king.

With kindling eyes and throbbing heart
Go, thread the maze of history chart
Track age on age of glory, bright
With battles wild and flickering light;
And what amid the blaze appears?
One conqueror girt with million spears!

Earth with its mountains and its floods
Luxuriant pinion, and waving woods,
Its sunlight, and its thousand springs,
Is but a scene where wildering plays,
The victor's light, the lurid blaze.

From Nimrod, seek to Zenghis Khan
The mysteries of life in man!
From Irak's prophet search ye on
To myriad-stared Napoleon;
And own 'tis folly closed in death,
The sport of every conqueror's breath.

Historian, what the body so vast,
On human kind thou lavished last?
Is it that o'er a nation's name
Thou flingst some mighty falsen fame?
And o'er the dust of empires blest,
Thou rear'st a Wellington's monument?

MARRIAGES AND MEANS.

BY ISA CRAIG, AUTHOR OF PRIZE POEM ON BURNS' CENTENARY.

Marriage is by far the most important act in the life of a human being. More than any other act it influences the future, not of the individual only, but of the community—of the race. All civilized nations have invested it with ceremony. Sentiment has woven about it every charm of tenderness and hope. Religion has sanctified and solemnized it. And all this sacredness and poetry and dignity has been the growth of the true instincts of man, causing him to seek for happiness in the higher region of his nature, and then to advance in morality and purity.

Marriages that are mere calculations of means, though not unfrequent in certain classes of society, are never popular. The great mass of the people are all the other way, and never calculate at all. John and Janet marry before they are twenty, with nothing but a personal attraction, more or less strong, and trust in each other and in the future. And there is no doubt that they are building their lives on a basis of happiness—if we suppose John and Janet healthy, intelligent, and moral—more secure than Charles Edward and Sophia, if we suppose that they unfortunately begin with little or no trust in each other or the future, though with ample means and the safest of settlements. Still John and Janet would have shown themselves more intelligent and more moral, and also more faithful and devoted, if they had waited the year or two which would have given them a fairer start, and saved them many a trial; saved them, if we suppose a failure in health or a lack of intelligence in either, from sinking to that end of the social scale where the pressure on the means of subsistence crushes out all the poetry of life, deprives it of all dignity and sacredness, and makes it full of the revolting cruelties which have been noted in "Infant Mortality," and "Early Labor."

On any of our national holidays, let any close observer go and watch the people as they pour in crowds from the streets and courts of one of our great cities, and betake themselves to the parks and open spaces. Let such a one go to the Primrose Hill or Hampstead Heath on Easter Monday, if he wants to see for himself how early the people of England marry. From a little distance, Primrose Hill looks like a gigantic ant-hill covered with its moving mass. Penetrate the mass, and what a crowd of young, pale, feeble mothers and sickly little ones it is. The bulk of the parents are little better than the children themselves, and one longs to see them enjoying themselves like girls and boys, and not dragging about these sickly infants with such a look of care. Premature marriage tells surely on the health of the young mother, especially in the working-class. Herself a worker from a very early age, she is longer of reaching maturity than the girl of a higher class, on whose strength no such demand has been made, and who have had better food and more of it. Yet before she is full grown, a fresh demand is made upon her strength, and she has to support a child, and to engage in all the round of domestic duty which falls to the lot of a working man's wife, if she is so fortunate even as to be spared further labor. The feeble health of the mother tells also upon her child. Its stamina is small, and it easily falls a victim to disease, or grows up weaker than its parents. It deteriorates in every possible way from the comfort, and happiness, and prosperity of the home.

That the marriages of a very large proportion of the working-classes are premature, the census proves. Among girls, they begin at the age of fifteen, as many as thirty-five being married at that age in 1861. According to the same authority there were ten husbands who took themselves wives at the advanced age of sixteen. At sixteen, the marriages of girls count by hundreds and at eighteen by thousands, while hundreds of young men are married at the latter age. At twenty, men and women marry at nearly equal rates. In 1861 there were 50,000 young women to 48,000 young men.

This is by far the largest number that takes place at any age. After that the numbers rapidly decrease, and the proportions alter, more men than women marry after twenty-five. Nearly two-thirds of the population are, therefore, married before they reach the age of twenty-five. If three years were added to all the ages under twenty-five, a marvelous change would be made in the health, and comfort, and well-being of the community; but this would pre-suppose a great increase in intelligence and morality, for the years of youth wasted in vice and folly are productive of worse results than premature toil and care. It is so very impossible to suppose that the mass of the people are incapable of rising to the level of thousands of the same race? We think not. In the middle class and among those who are rising into it, marriage is frequently deferred, with advantage longer than this. The result is increased means of life, as the product of increased intelligence and moral power.

In Lancashire the young people of the working class often choose a holiday in which to marry en masse. As many as sixty or eighty marriages are on such an opportunity celebrated at once in the parish churches of Manchester. Here it may be noticed that all who sign the register with a cross are not unable to sign their names. There is no time to write the full name, and the young women as they pass the register make the cross with a single dip of the pen, in order to expedite the exit of themselves and companions from the throng of brides. Many of these young wives when the holiday is over, go back to their labour in the work-room or factory as if nothing had happened. It seems all very well at the onset; but it is the beginning of weary years of toil, to which is to be added all the pains and cares of motherhood. It is, indeed, a bad beginning for the young wife to go out to work, and should, if possible, be avoided; for it is when entering the new home that the habits of the new life are formed; and if the wife is absent from the first, the centre of attraction and the source of comfort is absent too. The custom holds out a temptation to the idle and improvident young man to marry independent of his own exertions. I shall never forget meeting a number of mill-girls in one of our largest manufacturing towns, respecting 5000 of their class, who were forming a Friendly Society. "The married ones are worst off," said the spokeswoman; "a lot worthless fellows come and marry us, and then go idle, and live off our earnings." But I said, you are not obliged to marry the worthless fellows, and earnestly exhorted them to get up a feeling among themselves that it was best for both not to work in the mill after their marriage, and to make known their intention, so that the idle fellows might be less tempted to marry them. It is an undoubted fact, that the idleness and vice of the husbands cause many wives to seek employment to the neglect of their children, and that they are thus responsible for the infant mortality which results. In some districts the cause is poverty, the wages of the man not being sufficient to maintain the wife and children. Of such districts Dr. Edward Smith says: "The labor of the women in the fields (whatever may be its disadvantages, add however desirable it may be that it should not be necessary) is, under present circumstances, of great advantage to the family, since it adds that amount of income which relieves them from the pressure of want, and enables the whole family to be better fed." This necessity, where it exists, must be met by other means; but the custom of [illegible] women working away from their home prevails where the wages of the men are quite sufficient for the family. The husband and father spends his earnings on himself in the low indulgence of the public-house and beer-shop, and throws upon the wife and mother the chief burden of supporting herself and her children. "The poor mother returns home after her hard day's work, very tired, but she must do her household work, prepare supper, and sit up washing and mending the children's clothes long after her husband is asleep. When, at length, wearied out, she does go to bed, it is with the knowledge that she will have to rise at an hour earlier than he needs to do in the morning, to dress the children, and give them their breakfast, before starting to her work. If, then, this short night's rest is broken in upon by the cries of a sickly infant, we cannot be surprised if a dose of opium is given to quiet it, nor need we wonder that its death should be a matter of little regret."

So writes a Lincolnshire lady, who is intimately acquainted with the lives of the women of that county. She says "it is sheer want and necessity, which in nine cases out of ten compels the mother to desert her infant;" for it is desertion when she knows that if she goes out to work her infant most probably will pine and die. But what is she to do if her husband spends the greatest part, or even the whole of his earnings, in the public-house? Unless able to find work, she and her children must starve. She is forced to sacrifice the infant for the sake of her other children, like the unhappy mother, pursued by the pack of wolves, who threw out of her sleigh one child after another, in order that the infant might be saved. "It is horrible," continues the same lady, "that a mother should have to choose between the lives of her elder children and that of her infant; but when the choice is forced upon her, she does right to save those whose sufferings from want would be the most acute; besides which, if without food herself, she would not long be able to support the infant." It is almost a relief to hear a voice lifted on behalf of these poor mothers, and to be told that a cruel necessity is laid up on them; a relief from the oppressive thought that multitudes of women were so degraded as to relinquish the strongest instinct of their nature. It would be impossible to stop all the avenues of labor to married women, and it would be no cruel one as it is impossible; but it is clearly a law of nature that the women who is bearing children should not be required to earn her subsistence by daily labor. She cannot fulfil the duty of nursing her child if she is to be absent from it all day, exhausting her strength in toil. It breaks the marriage compact, which secures protection to children and the care of the mother during infancy in the protection necessary. It is on the father, as the stronger and least burdened of the parents, that the duty of providing for the mother and child rests, and on him rests also the sin and wrong of neglecting to do so. Of such a one it is written—"He hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." It is not long since the degrading work of mining was prohibited to women. "Tell Queen Victoria," said Isabel Hogg to the Commissioners, after recounting fearful sufferings of wives and mothers, "that she will have the blessing of all the Scotch coal women if she will take them out of the pits." Taken out of the pits, they were, to the great blessing of all concerned; and though Queen Victoria may not be able to take mothers out of the fields and the factories too, she and every woman in her dominions may help forward the time when they shall cease to be driven there. Every increase of intelligence will prove to working men and women how evil and unprofitable it is for married women to be removed from their homes, and occupied in earning money; will develop the moral qualities on which the well-being of humanity rests; will enable men to produce the means necessary to marriage, and promote the growth of all those finer feelings which form at once its happiness and its safeguard, that so the nation may be multiplied, and the joy increased.—Christian Work for Sept.

Good Advice about the Length of Sermons.

We submit the following good advice to the English clergy generally; it is an abridgment of the chapter headed "Le Discours doit etre court," taken from a French work entitled "Cours d'Eloquence Sacree Populaire," by M. l'Abbe Mullois, chaplain to the present Emperor.—

"The sermon should be short; at all costs it must not weary the hearers. Beside, what motive is there in so much talk? I know not how it is that we have been drawn into these long discourses. Our Saviour's instructions were brief. His Sermon on the Mount, which has revolutionised the world, does not appear to have taken up half an hour. The homilies of the Fathers, too, are generally short; and St. Ambrose says:—"Necessarium profecto sit sermo qui fastidium parat, omnibus tempus commenditer non excedat." Ask whom you will, enemies and friends, say, ask the most intelligent and devout christians, and they will tell you that our sermons and services are too long. If such is their candid judgment, what must be the opinions of the masses? It would undoubtedly benefit religion were we to abridge our sermons and our services also. As regards the former, this may be done easily, and without the least detriment. Omit all generalities from the exordium; all useless demonstrations from the body of the discourse, all vague phrases from the peroration. Cut off all superfluity of words, all parasitical epithets, admitting only such as triple the force of the substantive. Be chary of words and phrases; economise them as a miser does his coin. The people love the thoughts which are formulated into single words such as vive! a bas! a la porte! merit vengeance! liberte! justice! Such words often stir them more than lengthy discourses. The masses are susceptible; they like to be moved; but nothing passes away so quickly as an emotion. To make them frequent our churches we must give them sermons of ten minutes' duration, of seven, even of five minutes; the mass and sermons together should barely surpass half an hour. This would be a most efficacious means of re-establishing religion in the hearts of the people. But, it will be objected, what can be said in seven ort in minutes? Much, more than might be imagined, especially if the preacher takes pains to prepare his sermons, mastering his subject, and knowing the persons whom he addresses. Is it not so, that a few words have frequently sufficed to revolutionize the minds of men, and to produce an immense effect? The harangues of Napoleon did not last more than a few minutes, and yet they electrified his armies. His discourse at Bordeaux, which did not take up a quarter of an hour, resounded throughout the world; had it been longer, the impression it produced would have been less. When about to compose your sermon first study your topic, seizing the salient points of the truth you are going to expound, and then write. But do not stop there. Begin afresh. Supposing you have written 4 pages, reduce them to two, retaining all the thoughts and vigorous ideas of your first draught. On ascending the pulpit, place a watch by your side, and begin thus:—"Sunday last we said so and so, let us proceed." Then enter at once upon your subject, cutting it short when the appointed time arrives. People will say and write to you that you do not preach long enough, that you tantalize your audience and rob them of a real pleasure by being so brief. Heed them not, but remain inflexible, for such persons are unconsciously real enemies to religion. Adhere more strictly than ever to your prescribed rule; then rest assured your discourses will be talked of; every one will be anxious to witness a seven minutes' sermon; the poorer classes will come, and the rich will follow. Faith will bring the one, novelty will attract the other, and thus the Divine Word will have free course, and be glorified."—Pall Mall Gazette.

REMARKS BY THE MONTREAL "WITNESS."

Notwithstanding the opinion of many excellent men in favor of long sermons, we decidedly agree with the foregoing plea in behalf of short ones, for the following reasons:—

1. It is generally the preachers who favor long sermons and the hearers short ones, and in this matter, we think, the hearers' opinion to be most likely to be correct,—at all events they are the majority. The ones to which hearers wish for a long sermon, as from Spurgeon for instance, will not do for precedents in ordinary circumstances.

2. The prevailing taste of the times is all in favor of brevity. Railroads shorten journeys; the telegraph shortens letters; abbreviations or condensations of nearly all standard works have to be published; and sermons and public prayers cannot long remain an exception to the general rule. In the times of the Covenanters a sermon might be two or three hours long; but it is to be remembered that it was then the vehicle for political, as well as moral and religious instruction. Men had no newspapers.

3. The denominations in which short sermons are the rule are, we think, going ahead of the long sermon denominations, and likely to do so still more if the present tastes of the people continue.

4. All the religious papers, organs of all denominations, and generally edited by ministers, so far as they take ground on the subject, are in favor of short sermons.

5. For one hearer who can follow without, flagging or obliviousness a long sermon, there are probably at least twenty who cannot; and with proper attention to condensation, to much could be said in twenty or twenty-five minutes as may one can carry away. A leader in the Times, intended to overthrow a whole nation on a given point, will not take more than ten minutes to read, and why should a minister require more than twenty or twenty-five to sufficiency point about? He may think that repetitions in various forms are necessary to fix the desired conviction on the mind, but where the attention of one is gained by this method, the attention of ten is probably lost. We have heard a preacher (in one in montreal) spend about half an hour in a preliminary proof from revelation, experience and observation that all must die, and the consequence was, that by the time he came to the instructive part of his discourse the attention of nearly all his audience had indeed died.

But, if educated and eloquent mini-ters cannot with impunity preach long sermons, how much more necessary is it that those of ordinary parts should be brief, and especially laymen, if they try preaching!

Curious Mishap—A Young Man Bound up Alive.

A very singular accident occurred yesterday at the piano ware rooms of J. Pierr & Co., in Broadway, by which a young man named George Seane, who is an employee of the establishment, was seriously injured and narrowly escaped dissection of the sook. So remarkable are the facts of the case, that we give them in detail as related by an eye witness. At noon yesterday, when left in charge of the packing room, young Seane suffering from great fatigue and possibly overcome by sleepiness, crawled for a nap into a box containing a partially packed upright piano designed for shipment to Col. B. Lamar, of Wilmington, N. C. There who are familiar with the construction of the "upright," will understand that when placed in a box for transportation, an open space exists above the key board, and in front of the elevation. Into this narrow bed, where straw had been put to guard against marring, the young man crept for a quiet "snoozing," and, being excessively weary, he soon fell into a deep and heavy slumber. He was missed when the packers returned, but his whereabouts not suspected. The lid of the box went on noiselessly with screws, was placed in position and secured without disturbing him the package finally marked and forwarded into the hatchway—as all luck would have it, with the body head downwards. In this position, and in a half-smothered condition, the youth found himself rudely awakened. It was long before he could make himself heard by his fellow-workmen, and the case had reached a track in waiting below before he could be got out, and then insensibility had resulted. Though bruised about the head and shoulders, badly strained in the back, and nearly suffocated, he finally revived, and was carefully conveyed to his home at Harlem.

Physicians who gave him a hasty but tolerably thorough examination, before he left the warerooms, do not regard his injuries as necessarily dangerous, though they are quite severe, and his escape is little less than miraculous.—N. Y. World.

EGGS.—Never before in our recollection have eggs been so high at this season of the year. We have seen them wholesaled at 60 cents per dozen, near the holidays, but 47 and 48 cents now obtained are high prices for even fresh Long Island and New Jersey eggs. The hens have just passed through the "moulting" season, when they are not expected to lay much; beside, with the high rates of everything else, why should not the biddies be well paid for their labors at this exhausting period? In the language of an egg merchant, they now refuse to cackle for less than a quarter. In view of these prices, is there nothing that can be done to favor the production of eggs? Yes. Give them all the food that they can eat up clean—no more; let them have dry dirt or ashes to dust in where there is sunshine, and or gravel for grindstones, pure water to drink, and they will cackle out their gratitude as they leave a new laid egg in the nest. A mixed food is desirable—clear corn is too fattening. Wheat, or wheat screenings are excellent, and mixture of these and corn, oats or buckwheat, make a good feed, with a few boiled potatoes and raw cabbage occasionally.—N. Y. Trib.

Cooper Institute is self-supporting the income for rents being about $23,000. The gallery contains 400 pictures, the library 4,000 volumes, and the reading-room 100 newspapers, besides periodicals. The School of Design, a leading feature in the institution, numbers at present about 200 pupils. The scientific department is supplied with valuable philosophical and chemical apparatus. The night school, which opened Oct. 2nd with about 1,500 pupils, a very interesting and admirable feature.

New Map

OF

Peterborough and Ashburnham,

THE undersigned beg to announce that their New Map of the Town of Peterboro' and of the Village of Ashburnham, is now complete and ready for publication.

This Map has been compiled with great care from the original registered plans and surveys, and its entire accuracy secured not only by those means, but by actual survey and careful admeasurement. In the two corporations named, not only is every Lot given and its subdivisions where divided, but the names of the owners, as contained in the last Assessment Roll, are neatly printed on each lot. All public buildings, manufactories, stores, and private residences, together with the existing and proposed railways, streets, mill-races, water-courses dams, bridges, &c., are laid down from actual measurement. The built-up portion of the town is so coloured as to distinguish at a glance the materials used, whether of wood, stone or brick; while the whole is finished in a superior manner, so as to be both useful and ornamental, in securing which neither pains nor expense has been spared.

During the ensuing week, the undersigned will be prepared to receive the names of intending subscribers, at their office, Scott's Buildings. Early application is desired, as but a limited number of copies will be published.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

21st Vol. of the Montreal Witness

FOR 1866.

TWENTY EVENTFUL YEARS have run their course, since the Witness first saw the light, and though they have been full of changes there has been no change in the reason for commencing it, namely, the great importance to society of a wholesome family newspaper.

Is a Mother's Magazine desirable in a family? The Witness has had as much matter every year of the kind inserted in Mother's Magazines as any monthly publication under that name.

Is a Children's Magazine of Sunday School Paper desirable? The Witness has had in each of the class of reading suitable for these publications than any of them.

Is an Agricultural Paper of great benefit to the country? The Witness has had about as much on that subject monthly as would fill a good-sized agricultural journal.

Is a Temperance Paper of great importance in families and the country? The Witness has had more on that subject than any ordinary monthly temperance paper.

Is a Commercial Paper wanted by men of business and farmers? The Witness has had as much commercial matter as any exclusively commercial paper.

Is a Literary Paper wanted? The Witness has had a goodly proportion of Poetry, Tales, Reviews, and other literary matter.

Should a witness for truth, and against error, injustice and vice be enrolled? The Witness has done its best in all these respects.

Is a newspaper essential to an intelligent family? The Witness has given more news than most papers in Canada.

A brief calculation will show the economy of procuring all these papers together instead of separately. The cost, if taken in the latter way, would, instead of the price of the Witness, be about as follows:—

Mother's Magazine,	$1 00
Children's Paper	25
Agricultural Paper	1 00
Temperance Paper	50
Commercial Paper	1 00
Literary Paper	1 00
Weekly Newspaper	1 00
	6 75

This shows a very great difference in first cost besides the saving in postage.

We would not be understood, however, to mean that any one should be satisfied with the Witness only. On the contrary, we think it is a wise economy to subscribe for various useful periodicals. There is, probably, no way in which a small sum of money yields a richer return of pleasure and profit. Our only object is to show how economical it is to subscribe for this paper.

There is another view of this matter, which is not a small reward for our twenty years' labour. During that time a very large number of families have been brought up with the Witness as their family paper. Parents and children have perused it regularly, and it is found the best selections we could make from the best writers of the world. All know the power of a family paper to mould the views, opinions, and conduct of those to whom it obtains access, and if this one has aided in the bringing up of some thousands of families in principles of religion, temperance, integrity, and intelligent enterprise, what finite arithmetic can reckon up the gain!

The Witness reaches now in all its editions some seven thousand subscribers all over the country, besides an average circulation of some four thousand in the city of Montreal; and for this extensive circulation we are exceedingly thankful, but it is a matter of deep regret that the proportion of the people reached is yet so small.

There are probably about six thousand Protestant families in Montreal of which we reach about two-thirds; but there are about 300,000 Protestant families in the rest of Canada, of which we only reach 7,000, or less than a fortieth part. There is surely room here for a very large extension of all our editions.

The Daily Witness is by far the best of our editions for business men, having more reading matter and a great many more advertisements than any other edition. It has also full market reports daily. The subscription is $3,00 per annum.

The Montreal Witness (semi-weekly) contains nearly all the reading matter of the Daily, together with semi-weekly market reports and prices current. Subscription $2,00 per annum.

The Weekly Witness contains all the matter of permanent interest of the semi-weekly, with weekly summary of news and market reports. Subscription $1,00 per annum.

The Canadian Messenger, published twice a month, contains the Temperance, Agricultural, Scientific, and Educational matter of the Witness, but without news, markets, or advertisements, as it goes post free. Subscription 20 cents per annum.

All these rates are payable invariably in advance, and the paper stops when the term subscribed for expires.

It should not be very difficult to get some one of these editions into almost every family of a friend of that family would only suggest the matter to them.

The price is so low that we cannot allow commissions, and indeed we have always received the greatest aid, in the way of obtaining subscribers, from parties who had no object in view but disinterested patriotism and benevolence. To all such, and may their numbers greatly increase, we hereby tender hearty thanks for past favors, and ask them to continue their good offices.

The Witness is now printed in a new and fine type, and no effort will be spared to keep it the very front rank of Canadian journalism.

Advertisements not at variance with the character of the Witness will be inserted for one cent per word for one insertion and half a cent per word for each subsequent insertion, no advertisement being reckoned as less than 25 words.

Letters for the Witness or Messenger containing money should invariably be registered, and when this is done the remittance is at our risk. All communications to be addressed to "MONTREAL WITNESS," or

JOHN DOUGALL & SON,
Montreal.

Public Notice.

THE Council of the Corporation of the TOWNSHIP OF OTONABEE, intend to, on Monday, the 18th day of December next, to pass a By-Law to provide for the stopping up and sale of a certain Road across lot No. 14, in the third Concession, and continuing across the fourth Concession part of the way on lot 14, and the remaining part of the way on lot 15, in said concession in the Township of Otonabee.

[illegible]
P. O'FLAHERTY.

Say don't you take the papers?
Here's the Widow Gilpin,
Keeps[illegible] about election time,
And when I call for strike.

"Subscribe? you cannot have a cent,
What would you be afraid?
For cash thus paid is money lent
Up interest four-fold paid.

Go, take, and take the papers,
And pay to-day, nor pay delay,
And my word for it is inferred,
You'll have gentle you're gone.

As old neighbour of mine,
While dying with a cough,
Desired to hear the latest news
While he was going off.

I knew two men, in death alike,
As ever you saw two sixpence,
And no phrenologist could find
A difference in their bumps.

One talked the papers, and his life
Is happier than a king's,
His children all can read and write,
And talk of men and things.

The other took no paper, and
While strolling through the wood,
A tree fell down and broke his crown
And killed him "very good."

And he been reading of the news,
At home like neighbour Jim,
I'll bet a cent that accident
Would not have happened him.

Why don't you take the papers?
Nor from the printers sneak,
Because you borrow from his boy
A paper every week.

For he who takes the papers,
And pays his bill when due;
Can live in peace with God and man,
And with the printer too.

A Court Scene.

The prosecuting attorney had more than his match in Mr. O'Flaherty, when that witness took the stand, and the examination took place.—

Attorney—"Mr. O'Flaherty, if you please, state whether you have ever known the defendant to have any profession?"

Witness—"He's been a professor ever since I knew him."

"Professor of what?"

"A professor of the mountain dew, Paddy's eye water, and many other temperance drinks too numerous to mention.

"You don't understand me, Mr. O'Flaherty—what does he do?"

"Whatever he pleases."

"State to the Jury, Mr. O'Flaherty, what the defendant follows?"

"Gentlemen of the Jury, the defendant foll ws the crowd when they go to drink."

"This kind of prevarication Mr. O'Flaherty, won't do here. Now state what this defendant does to support himself."

"I saw him last night support himself against a lamp post."

To the Court—"May it please your honor this witness has shown a disposition to trifle with the Court."

Judge—"Mr. O'Flaherty, if you know anything about it, state what the defendant's occupation is."

"Occupation, did you say?"

"Yes, what is his occupation?

"If I am not mistaken, he occupies a garret somewhere in town."

"That's enough, Mr. O'Flaherty."

Cross-examined—"Mr. O'Flaherty, I understood you to say that the defendant is a professor. Does his practice correspond with his profession?"

"I never heard of any correspondence passing between them."

"You said something about his propensity for drinking; does he drink hard?

"No, I think he drinks as easy as any man I ever saw."

Mr O'Flaherty was requested to take his seat, which he did with the gravity of one who had made a clean breast of it. And the judge did his best to preserve the gravity and dignity of the Court, but it was of no avail—the people would laugh, and nobody could stop them.

WHO IS IMPUNITY?—During the epidemic fever of 1863, a well to do planter in a certain region of Mississippi, used to send down his cotton by his trusty slaves, without venturing into the 'city'—about fifty houses!

After a short experience, however, he fancied they were taking advantage of circumstances, and determined to go down and look after the next waggon load himself. He was not a little afraid, however of 'Yellow Jack'—and small blame to him, and so he resolved on first consulting with a friend, as to the propriety of his venturing into the epidemic infested place.

'Do you think' said he 'I can go to ——with safety? No fear of the fever sir?'

'Oh no!' responded his friend, 'you can go there, and stay as long as you please, with impunity.'

'Ah, ah!' replied our friend, 'I am glad you have told me that, I have long been dissatisfied with ——'s shd ——'s; but I did not know there was any other place wher a fellow could put up at. Now you have told me, however, and if I don't try Impunity's. What is it?'

A Frenchman one day saw a gentleman walk up to an open snuff box in the hands of another, and take a pinch of snuff, having prefaced the act with the words, 'May I take the liberty?' On the next day the Frenchman went into a tobacco shop and asked for half a pound of liberty.

An old woman who went into the poultry business some time since, under the expectation that she could make a fortune by selling eggs, has quitted it in disgust, because, as she says, 'hens 'll never lay when egg are dear, but always begin as soon as they get cheap.

Said a very high facetiousness to his scapegrace son:—'Look at me! hear I am at the top of the tree; and what is my reward? Why, when I die, my son is the greatest rascal in England?' To this young Hopewell made answer—'Yes, dad, when you die, but not till then!'

Paddy, said a joker, why don't you get your ears clipped—they are entirely too long for a man?

And yours, replied Pat, ought to be considerably lengthened—they are too short for an ass.

It is funny to see a young lady with both hands in soft dough, and a mosquito on the end of her nose.

The music of good many performers should be like the famous music of the spheres—never heard.

It may do little good to follow good advice if you follow at too great a distance.

THE EXAMINER

1866, PROSPECTUS 1866,

OF

The Globe Newspaper.

THE publisher of The Globe has to announce that very great improvements in the publication of this journal will be made in the coming year. A new font of beautiful type, cast specially for The Globe, has been imported from the celebrated Scottish Foundry of Millar and Richard, Edinburgh. The quality of the paper used in printing the journal will be much superior to that heretofore employed. Arrangements are now being made for increased Telegraphic facilities, and the corps of Writers, Reporters and correspondents, will be strengthened—increased effort will be put forth in every department to render The Globe more worthy than ever before of the immense circulation it has for so many years enjoyed throughout British America.

The year 1866 is likely to be a most eventful period in the history of Canada—a year in which the current events of the day will be of the deepest interest to every inhabitant of the country.

The new Parliamentary Buildings will, early in the coming spring, be opened for the first time at Ottawa.

The Government is pledged to present to Parliament, at the opening of the session, either a Bill for completing the Confederation of all British America, or a Bill establishing a new Federal constitution for Canada alone, based on the principle of Representation by Population in the popular branch.

On the 17th of March, 1866, the American Treaty of Reciprocity will come to an end; and the negotiations for its renewal, or preparations to meet the change, will be watched with much interest.

Arrangements for acquiring possession of, and opening the North-West territory for settlement, will be speedily made, and to these The Globe will devote special attention, as it has has hitherto done to everything connected with the subject.

With the settlement of the constitutional question that has so long distracted the Province, numerous questions affecting the material progress of this country will be thrown open for consideration. Among these will be—

The subject of Banking and Currency.
Enlarging the Canals, and otherwise improving the Internal Navigation of the country.
Reduction of the Customs' Tariff.
Interest on Money.
Opening up new Territory to settlement.
Free land grants to actual settlers.
A Homestead Law.
And many other vitally important subjects

In the discussion and settlement of all these matters, The Globe will, as heretofore, take an active part; and from the sources of information at the command of its conductors, it is not doubted that in its columns the earliest intelligence and the most reliable information will continue to be found.

THE DAILY GLOBE

will continue to be mailed from the office at $6 per annum, payable invariably in advance; but can be procured regularly from the news-dealers in all the cities and towns throughout the Province.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE

will also be much improved in the year 1866. The paper will be of superior quality, and the new Scottish type will give it a greatly improved appearance. An editor has been engaged, whose special duty it will be to condense and arrange the matter for this edition, and to select intelligence specially adapted for country readers. A portion of each week's paper will be devoted to the publication of some interesting tale; and the markets and prices current will continue to be given with promptness and accuracy.

The Weekly Globe will continue to be published at TWO DOLLARS per annum, payable strictly in advance. Some exceptions to the rule of advance payment have been heretofore made—but from the 1st of January, 1866, no paper will be sent from the office without prepayment.

CLUB RATES.

During 1866 we will send:—

Six copies one year for	$10 00
Ten " "	15 00
Fifteen " "	22 50

and an extra copy of the Weekly to the person who gets up the club of fifteen.

Twenty-five copies one year for	35 00

and a copy of the Weekly Globe to the person who gets up the club of twenty-five.

Fifty copies one year for	65 00

and a copy of the Daily Globe one year to the person who gets up the club of fifty.

Eighty copies one year for	100 00

and a copy of the Daily.

Payment must be always in advance.

Each paper is addressed separately.

All the papers included in any club must be mailed to one Post-office.

When additional names are added to any club during the year, they must be sent to the Globe Office by the person who made up the Club; and the money sent with such additional names must be such a proportion of the year's subscription at the Club rate as will pay up to the expiration of the Club.

No exception will be made to these rules on any ground whatever.

AMERICAN
Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering
SEWING MACHINE!
COMPANY,
627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Buttonholes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or shine silks, and produces a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c., &c., it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c., &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON-HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

Also what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

☞ Write your name and address distinctly and say only what is necessary.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old harp form of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Barili.
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry.	Charles Fradel.

Mr. SIGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal verisimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianist to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5.—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supersede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr. S. B. DRIGGS, I am of the opinion that the tone result ing from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in points of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

SEWING MACHINES!

FINKLE & LYON'S
NEW PATENT ROTARY FEED
Sewing Machines.

The following facts demonstrate that these Machines comprise the highest improvements in the Sewing Machine Art, viz:

1. Each Machine is guaranteed to give better satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in Market, or money refunded.
2. They have taken many of the highest premiums at the most important Exhibitions and fairs ever held in the United States
3. They make the lock stitch alike on both sides—thus saving more than half the thread and silk used in the raveling-ridge-seams of the loop stitch and single-thread Sewing Machines.
4. They are adapted to the widest range of heavy and light sewing.
5. They have no rattling wires, or delicate attachments to keep in repair.
6. They require no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "Lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate Machine.

Please call and examine, and demonstrate for yourself, or send for Circular, with samples of sewing.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN
SEWING MACHINES.
EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salerooms, { 536 Broadway, New York, / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principle of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nansook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it almost impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

But in a more especial manner do we elicit the patronage of

Merchant Tailors,	Corset Makers,
Coach Makers,	Gaiter Fitters,
Hoop Skirt Manufacturers,	Shoe Binders,
Shirt and Bosom Makers.	Vest and Pantaloon Makers,
	Dress Makers.

Religious and Charitable Institution will be liberally dealt with.

One half-hour's instruction is sufficient to enable any person to work the Machine to their entire satisfaction.

THE AGE OF HARMONY.

O sweet is the river wantoning away of the wild wood,
And sweet is the hum of the wee mountain bee;
O sweet is the playful endearment of childhood,
And the smile of the babe on its fair mother's knee.
O sweet is the breath of the wood-blossomed bowers,
And the hills and the dales a' bespangled wi' flowers,
And the green corn fields wet wi' summer's soft showers,
For nature's a system of kind harmony.

Well, well might we glide thro' this lovely green world,
Like a smooth rinning stream in a fair flowery bank,
Were the bosoms of love ay the seats unmarred,
And man aye the kind hearted brither o' man.
And O may the time soon arrive when affection,
And justice, and truth, shall guide a' human action,
When men of each country, and creed, and complexion,
Shall join in a system o' kind harmony.

O yes, may the time soon arrive when fu' cheery,
Blest virtue shall over the universe reign;
And truth mann prevail, for the world is weary
O' bloodshed, and rain, and error, and pain,
And pride and oppression, and whitely field famine,
And curse-worn hill, and sensitive's vain dream fling
Auer war—dustful war, like a blood-thirsty demon,
Nae mair shall invade nature's kind harmony.

Like the bees o' the simmer, we're wrought anee richest,
And the fruit of our toil is enough for us a';
For to be independent, we're aye had a pride in't,
But the muckle fat drones strut our honey awa'.
The drones on our toil are the whisky-retailers,
The drones o' the law, and cheese-nit deal in,
The drones o' the Kirk, and the State, and the mailin,
Are the drones that has stole in our honey awa'.

But we live in an age that is great and eventful,
And a far better day is beginning to dawn,
When rewarded we'll be for the ill times we've kent at,
As freedom will shower down her blessing on man.
Then nae longer we'll pay for the things we've nae faith in,
And then ends o' thae lazy chaps that due nothing,
Will just hae to work for their ain meat an' claithin',
And join in a system o' kine harmony.

WILLIE VARDEN.

In a low-roofed garret near the foot of the Canongate, in Edinburgh, sat a little girl of eight years by the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Varden. To say that the room was scantly furnished would be but imperfectly to describe it; in strict truth it was not furnished at all. The only articles of furniture it contained were the bed, a chair, a trunk, and a few dishes (with nothing in them) on a shelf. On one of the walls, however,—and this was the only ornament which relieved nakedness—there hung a violin and bow.

It was just about dusk. Presently the little girl spoke.

'Mother,' she said, 'do you think Willie will be long? I'm so hungry. Do you think he will be away long?'

'I don't think he will, dear,' replied the mother, drawing the patient little watcher to her and kissing her thin starved-like face. 'Perhaps Mrs. Steele has sent him somewhere, or perhaps he cannot find the landlord. If I was well you would not want for food; but it is God's will—we must trust in Him.'

'But, mother,' said little Jessie, nestling close to her, 'do you think it is right, quite right for God to let us be p or and hungry, when we never do anything bad, and you who had once kind friends and a grand house to live in?'

'My poor little girl,' replied Mrs. Varden, tears starting to her eyes, 'we cannot understand it sometimes, but it is not only right, but for some wise purpose that He sends us these things.'

At the moment the door was opened and a boy of thirteen entered, and walking up to the bed, said despairingly:

'Mrs. Steele is at the country, and the landlord says if it is not paid by to-morrow at twelve o'clock he will turn us out and seize the things. I've been through over so many shops looking for a job, but it's no use: I am not big nor strong enough, they say. Got kicked for a young rapparee at the railway station, because I was looking for a bag or a parcel to carry. "I don't want to steal," he added, leaning hard against the bed, and looking away from his mother; "but if I comes to this"—and he closed his lips firmly, and gulping down something that was rising in his throat, left his hearers to fill up the rest of the sentence.

'Come here, my son,' said Mrs. Varden with a painful effort sitting up in bed.—'You know how wrong it is to speak in such a way, and that we would sooner die than eat anything gained by such means. You know that so long as we trust in Him, God will not suffer us to perish.'

'Oh, Willie, you wouldn't steal!, cried little Jessie, so frightened as to forget all about her hunger.

'No,' he answered, crossing the room, 'it has not come to that yet I won't steal, nor I won't beg; but I will do something that's very like it. I'll go and play on the street for money. You have often said, mother, he added taking down the violin, 'that I neglected my lessons for this, and perhaps I did, but I am going to try it as a last chance.'

'Promise me,' said Mrs. Varden, 'that whatever you do, you will do nothing dishonest—that you will not even think of it. Will you promise?'

'I promise,' he answered, 'taking her out-stretched hand; 'but I don't see much that God is doing for us. I haven't eaten a bit since morning, and I suppose it is the same with you. But I will try what I can do with this,' and he grasped his instrument under his arm, and put on a manly air. 'I am ragged but not a thief,' and he drew himself up proudly; 'and if money is to be had honestly I will get it.'

'Go, my son,' said Mrs. Varden sinking back on her pillow with an inward prayer for his success.

'And don't be long, Willie,'—cried Jessie, 'and I will sit up till you come.' And then she listened till the sound of his footsteps died away on the stairs, and they were once more alone waiting wearily and hungrily.

Now Willie Varden—although urged on by disappointment and hungry, he had thought for a moment that honest people were always poorest—had a stout heart within, and a great respect for what his mother said, so that he trudged up the Canongate quite cheerily with his instrument buttoned under his jacket, and repeated to himself—'I am ragged but I am not a thief,' with a face far more radiant than those of many who had just left the most substantial suppers, to say nothing of a dinner before that, and a good breakfast before that.

He reached the High Street just as the bells began to peal out the old curfew after eight o'clock had struck; and the North and South Bridges were thronged with people returning home after the labours of the day. He got out his violin a little below this place, and began to play some Scotch reels. The effect was wonderful. Before he was well begun a large crowd had gathered round, and were admiring and commenting upon the young prodigy, for from his short stature he looked younger than he was. He thought of the two hungry watchers at home, and sent new life and energy into his music. He flashed his bow across, while 'flying finger-kissed the strings,' when,

'Move along out o' this' said a gruff policeman with official sternness, shoving through the crowd. He was not altogether without feeling however, for when he caught sight of Willie's pinched face he whispered—'You had better go to some of the squares that are not thorough-fares.'

Willie thanked him politely, whereat the policeman expressed his wonder by a surprised stare, while the crowd showed its disapprobation of his interference, and sympathy for the performer at a cheap rate, by calling him. 'Peg,' 'More on,' &c. Willie paid little attention to this however, but, pushing his way out, walked along to Hunter Square, followed by a part of the crowd. Here he began to play once more, the crowd forming a semicircle before him. He was nervous now, but this only helped to render the tremolo passages more delicate. Presently he stopped and looked around. Not one of the crowd stirred or offered him a copper. He thought of home and his eyes suddenly and quite unaccountable filled with tears, while, as if in sympathy, the ball rose in his throat bigger than ever. He winked his eyes determined y, and tried to look indifferently at a street lamp; but it was no use. The more he tried, the faster they came; while the lamps, as if in derision, seemed to point long fingers of light at him. In addition to this he felt, for he could not see for the tears, that the crowd was moving closer to him. He was surprised too, at this critical moment to feel the earth slowly heave up and down under him, and then, after performing a few curious and uncommon antics in this way, suddenly begin to whirl round with surprising quickness. These movements suddenly ceased, and he felt himself grasped by the shoulder.

'What is the matter, my boy?'

The words was kindly spoken, and came from a gentleman who was supporting him.

'Oh, sir!' Willie sobbed, and that was all he could articulate.

The gentleman (Willie knew he was a gentleman, for who but such could have such a thick good chain and such an elegant travelling bag slung over his shoulder?) said,—

'My poor little fellow, don't be afraid. Tell me why you were crying and looking so ill? Come, whisper it if you like.'

Who could resist this? Willie could not; and he whispered—

'Mother's ill and we are starving.'

'Oh I see,' answered the gentleman, tenderly. 'Sit down on the steps and give me your cap' Then tossing to the people who were crowding round he said—

'My good people, this boy and his friends are at the point of starvation. I am a stranger here, but am willing to do something for them, and let you do the rest.'—With this he took out a big white five-shilling piece, and dropped it into the cap, went round holding it out to the sympathizing onlookers. This touched them in the right place, and they crowded round the tall gentleman, dropping in their contributions with no niggardly hands. The mechanics with the canvass over all on—bless their honest hearts!—dropped in their pennies; and the women—bless their tender hearts—dropped in their little pieces of silver; and then shillings and fifteen es followed from men with black coats on—and still chink, chink went the collection, till Willie's cap hung down quite heavily, and the tall gentleman brought it and laid it on his knee. Strange that Willie should begin to cry again after that! Yet so it was.—He cried and smiled, and smiled and cried and then threw his arms round the tall gentleman's waist and cried 'Oh, bless you, sir,' in such a way that the tall gentleman felt very much inclined to cry too, and had to cough several times before he could manage to say—

'There now, give me your name and address, and I will try and find you out to-morrow, and see what I can do for you. I have to leave this city in an hour, but I will be back then.'

'Willie Warden, Reid's Close, Can—' began Willie.

'Willie what?' cried the tall gentleman in great excitement.

'Varden, sir,' answered Willie, timidly freightened at the sudden change in his manner and colour.

'Come here.' said the tall gentleman, huskily, taking him by the arm and drawing him away from the crowd, gazing in his face all the while. 'Your father—have you a father? is he alive?'

'We don't know, sir,' answered Willie. 'he used to drink, and mother left him in New York seven years ago.'

'And you have a little sister, Jessie?'

'Yes, sir,' replied Willie, surprised at the knowing he displayed.

'Thank Heaven! Found at last,' cried the tall gentleman, tears running down his cheeks now. 'Willie,' he added, 'don't you know me?'

'No, sir,' answered Willie; and then he added timidly. 'But are not—not—father?'

'Yes!' cried the tall gentleman, clutching him, violin and all, up in his arms, and begging him frantically, to the no small astonishment of the passers-by. 'I am your father, Willie, and not a drunkard either, but a rich man, free from intemperance. Where do you live Quick! but stay! and he hurried Willie into the confectioner's shop ordering a can of hot soup, besides innumerable scones, biscuits, queer pastries and jellies, the like of which Willie never dreamt of tasting had them put in a basket and paid for them out of a purse having that delightful appearance which denotes the presence of lots of money inside. Then hailing a cab Mr. Varden (we may call him by his proper name now) first lifted Willie and his basket into it, and, getting in himself, ordered the coachman to drive to Reid's Close quick.

Quick? I should think so. And Willie thought so too. For his father had little more than time to tell him that he was the proprietor of a large theatre in New York, and how he had been advertising and travelling about Scotland for the previous six months in search of them, when the cab drew up with a springing jerk, and they got out and began to ascend the stairs, followed by the cabman carrying the basket.

They had made up a little plan how Willie was to go in and prepare his mother for the surprise; but when were such plans kept?—No sooner was he within the door than he forgot all about it, and making up to his mother cried—'Oh, mother, father's come!' and then the door was flung open, and—and—Mrs. Varden had fainted in her husband's arms. How they kissed and hugged and cried over each other! And you can imagine, how, when they had come to, the cabman who had been rubbing his eyes with his knuckles in a lively and energetic manner was sent away with such a payment as made him say, 'Thank ye, sir,' four or five times at least; and how they got the things out of the basket on to the table, and how even Mrs. Varden made a show of tasting the good things, supported by the strong arm of her husband, of whose knee Jessie had taken sole and absolute possession; and how Willie was so unsettled that he got up between every sixth or seventh bite or so, and played the 'College Hornpipe,' or the 'Devil among the Tailors,' at a rate that no dancer—no, not though he had the suppliest of joints—could have kept up to him for a moment. How all this took place, and a great deal more besides, you can guess far better than I can tell you if need only add that Mr. Varden did not leave Edinburgh in an hour, nor in a good many hours, nor days either; and that now Willie can play as much or as long as he likes; for he is although only eighteen years of age, leader of the orchestra in one of the large theatres in New York, the proprietor of which is Mr. Varden.

An Education Good Enough for a Farmer.

The best education is none too good. Who sets out second-rate fruit, if he can get first-rate? or who sows poor wheat if he can get the best? What is the best education that a Farmer can have? Truly that which will fit him for most successfully tilling the soil, for business intercourse with men, for taking a creditable position in society, for serving best his fellowmen and honoring his God. To help us to decide what course of mental culture—for that is what we generally mean by education,—will best accomplish these ends, let us see what men are the best farmers, and what their education has been. As a general thing, we believe that among those farmers who work with their own hands more or less, and are not merely proprietors of estates which they may or may not personally manage,—those not bred to the business of farming, are by far most successful. Many of them were born on the farm, and others took to farming after learning other business. Is then the education which the farmer boy picks up after he leaves the farm, while he is at work in the machine shop, shaving the jack-plane, or behind the counter, the best he can have? No, indeed; but he gains something which makes him a better farmer than his neighbors.—Premising that he would not have returned to farming, or taken it up if he had not a love for it, he has probably gained, in the shop or store.—First, a just estimate of the value of accurate accounts, of knowing the pecuniary success or failure of the simplest ventures; Second, a high estimation of the value of knowledge of his business, which makes him read and think, as well as work: Third liberality in regard to the views and opinions of others. It has made him quick witted also, and not set in his own way. Besides, contact with men has given him confidence in himself when he knows where he stands, and a lack of confidence when he is not sure of his ground. Such a man will always succeed as a farmer. He may be dreadfully green for a year or two, but in a short time he will beat the old farmers out and out. If our readers will testify, they will confirm what we say, and point out neighbors of theirs that they used to laugh at for their blunders and city-bred farming, which, perhaps, was half book farming and half guess work, who now are beyond being laughed at; or at least the laugh is on the other side. These men have gained their farming education by the hardest. Our boys ought to have a better chance.

The Home School is where the boy gets his first notions and principles, and these will have their effect upon him to the day of his death.

The Common School is where the foundations are laid of whatever literary or book education the boy ever gains, together with the establishment of correct habits of study and thought, a taste for mathematics, quickness at figures, etc.

The High School, whether it be Academy, College, or Agricultural College, is supposed to bring the young man forward to the threshold of manhood with knowledge enough to enable him to make a good start, and with such habits of study and thought that he will always value knowledge and seek it. Finally there is—

The School of Experience, in which we are all pupils and always have been, from the time we first learned we could not reach the moon, and that the candle-flame was too hot a place for our fingers. It is in the school of experience that men educate themselves in their judgment of probabilities, in the estimation of men for what they are worth, and in many other things which have a great influence on their success or failure, superiority or mediocrity in whatever business they follow.

This last excepted, the other schools mentioned are named in order of their importance in forming character and developing the mind. The boy should have the best instruction where and when this development takes place. The best teachers are by no means those who know the most, they are those who inspire the child, or youth, with a desire to do best, or to learn most, those who guide the young mind into those channels in which it can and will pursue useful knowledge with zest. A child of fourteen well started, will do well under poor teachers, after that.

For Whom do Fashionable Women Dress?

The idea that ladies who lavish enormous sums annually in personal decorations, dress to fascinate their husbands, lovers, or men in the aggregate, is a vulgar error. A fashionable woman is not half so anxious to win the admiration of the men as to provoke the envy of her own sex. The truth is that gentlemen know very little about the commercial value of female attire, and, (except where they are called upon to pay the bills,) care less. An elegant and becoming toilet, however, inexpensive generally satisfies them. Not so our first family belles and dowagers. Cost is their standard of excellence in costume. And what consummate sumptuary critics they are. No tradesman is a better judge of the article in which he deals than the lady of fashion is of all the articles her sisters wear. With a single side-long glance, rapid, keen, searching, she can reckon up the habiliments of a rival in the beau monde, almost to a shilling. No pawn broker, however, accustomed to gauge the price of costly trumpery, could come nearer the mark.—Imitation lace, and false jewelry, however, trait emblant, do not deceive her for an instant. She sees through the cheat as easily as a banker detects a forged bill, and sneers inwardly at the vain attempt to cope with her genuine extravagances. She triumphs in the reflection that all her splendors are sterling, and that her "own" sharp eyed as herself, can distinguish cheap fine-ladyship and the rumous grandeur it is intended to cope with, as well as she can. But in her eyed man sees no difference unless it is pointed out to him. Is it not obvious, from these premises, that the richly-bedizened goddesses of Fashion's Empyrean dress to provoke envy in each other rather than to command manly worship? Of course, they like to be admired by men, but to be envied by women is a supreme luxury.—[Home Journal.

Approved Remedies for Every-day Maladies.

For a Fit of Passion.—Walk out on the open air; you may speak your mind to the winds without hurting any one, or proclaiming yourself a simpleton.

For a Fit of Idleness.—Count the ticking of a clock; do this for one hour, and you will be glad to pull off your coat the next and work like a negro.

For a Fit of Extravagance and Folly.—Go to the workhouse, or speak to the inmates of a gaol, and you will be convinced—

Who makes his bed of briar and thorn.
Must be content to lie forlorn.

For a Fit of Ambition.—Go into the churchyard, and read the gravestones; they will tell you the end of ambition. The grave will soon be your bed-chamber, and the earth your pillow; corruption your father, and the worm your mother and sister.

For a Fit of Despondency.—Look on the good things which God has given you on this world, and to those which he has promised His followers in the next. He who goes into his garden to look for cobwebs and spiders, no doubt, will find them; while he who looks for a flower may return into his house with one blooming in his bosom.

For all Fits of Doubt, Perplexity, and Fear.—Whether they respect the body or the mind—whether they are a load to the shoulders, the head or the heart—the following is a radical cure which may be relied on, for I had it from the Great Physician—'Cast thy burden on the Lord, and He will sustain thee.'

For a Fit of Repining.—Look about for the halt and the blind, and visit the bedridden and the afflicted and deranged; and they will make you ashamed of complaining of your lighter afflictions.

FLEAS ON DOGS—HOW TO EXTERMINATE THEM.—Make ordinary soft soap made in the old-fashioned way from wood ashes, rub the dog thoroughly with it, first wetting his coat completely. Let the soap remain say 10 minutes—wash him clean, and the fleas will have vanished—not left to return again, but have been killed "as dead as a mackerel." Their dead bodies will begin to appear almost immediately after the application of the soap. Doubtless a weak solution of potash would answer the same purpose, but always having the soap at hand, I have used that only. The soap and water not only eradicate the fleas, but perfectly cleans the dog's skin and coat and is calculated to improve his condition and appearance generally.—Country Gentleman.

The redoubtable General Tom Thumb has, it is said, been served with an income tax notice by the Southampton Commissioners. His yearly receipts are estimated at from £10,000 to £20,000. The General will probably appeal.

TO OUR READERS.

Another Season has almost transpired since last we had occasion to address a word of greeting to our readers. Many are the changes that have taken place during the year that is now hasting to a close Our own happy land is still free from the war cry or the fell sweep of pestilence or disease.—We have also been blessed with an abundant return of the Season. And this Season would be a fitting one to remember the poor in liberally. Let us hope that those who have plenty will give of their abundance to those who are in want. It is very satisfactory for us to know that plenty reigns as well as peace. Knowing this, we can with the wish assure our readers of the certainty of a Merry Christmas. We wish our readers therefore all the Compliments of the season.

THE MAYOR.

Unexpectedly we find ourselves with two candidates for this important office, Mr. W. H. Scott, and Mr. Thomas Chambers—Mr. Perry having resigned. This gentleman filled the office with dignity, and to the general satisfaction of at least a majority of the ratepayers, and it is only to be regretted that he did not still remain in the field, as he would have been certain of re-election. The present candidates are both confident of success. Mr. Scott rests confident in the strength of his friends; Mr. Chambers in his claims on the ratepayers, as an old resident among them, and his acquaintance with the municipal matters of the Town. The railway question is more or less interwoven with the present election, and it is to be feared that the people may loose sight of the great object—the best man—in their eagerness about railway extension. We have had to find fault with the tumult and noise of the present Council; yet, notwithstanding all the noise, they are leaving the financial condition of town in a better state than it has been for many years. But as to who will be Mayor for the coming year. Were we in search of a man of education, intelligence and address, we could not make a better choice than that of Mr. Scott—a lawyer, consequently well fitted for the onerous duty of Police Magistrate, and duly qualified for the duties of Mayor. We had almost expected that he would have been returned without opposition. He, however, rests satisfied of result. Mr Chambers appeals to the ratepayer on the score of long acquaintance with him, and the interests that he has in Town matters, on account of his being a proprietor of considerable real estate in Peterborough. On railroad matters they both claim to hold the same views. One of the two can only be elected, and we trust that the electors will choose the right man. It is not to be drawn from the above remarks that we are wholly indifferent as to the result. We cannot be indifferent altogether. But want of space this week forbids us making any lengthened remarks on this matter.

We regret to learn that Goodwood, the residence of Mrs. Edward Brown, was destroyed by fire on Sunday morning last about 8 o'clock. One of the chimnies had taken fire a short time before and as was thought, had been effectually put out, but about an hour afterwards the flames were seen by the neighbours, bursting through the roof. All efforts to save the house were ineffectual, but by the prompt action and great exertions of the neighbours, much of the furniture and household effects were saved. Considerable loss was nevertheless sustained. The house was insured to a small amount.

Springville.

There will be a Soiree in the Presbyterian Church, Springville, on Christmas day. A good tea and appropriate addresses will form the order of the day. Certainly it is better to spend a quarter in that manner than in the way that too many do at Christmas times. It is also a nice distance for a pleasant drive, and we would direct pleasure seekers that way on Christmas day.

The King of Belgians, and uncle to Queen Victoria, is dead. He was 75 years of age.

NOMINATION FOR MAYOR.

Since our last, affairs anent the Mayoralty have taken a material change. Then there appeared to be very little chance of raising an opposition to Mr. Perry. A number of influential men thought it would be better to bring out another candidate, and consequently got up a numerously signed Requisition to W. H. Scott, Esq., to the desire of which Mr. Scott assented. At a quarter to ten, therefore, on Monday morning, we had the prospects of Messrs. Perry and Scott contesting the Mayoralty. The friends of Messrs. Scott and Perry having had private meetings, came to an agreement that appeared satisfactory to both; and in consequence of this, Mr. Perry withdrew from the contest.

At ten o'clock the people were assembled at the Council Chambers, when Wm. Hall, Esq, proposed, seconded by W. A. Scott, Esq, Mayor, that W. H. Scott, Esq., be Mayor for the ensuing year. And very many considered that Mr. Scott would be elected by acclamation.

After a delay, however, of more than three quarters of an hour, there appeared a moving of the people, when Capt. Kennedy moved, seconded by Patrick Ryan, Esq., that Thos. Chambers, Esq., be Mayor for the coming year. In proposing Mr. Chambers, Mr. Kennedy said that he needed not to tell those present who the gentleman proposed was, as he was one of the first settlers of the country, and also one of the earliest citizens of the Town; and a gentleman, too, who, if elected, would fill the office faithfully and ably.

Mr. Ryan seconded the nomination without any remarks.

A Voice—Hats off.

Mr. Chambers, in addressing those present said,—That perhaps it was not best to allow Mr. Scott to go in without a little opposition; that railroad or no railroad seemed to be the order of the day. He found, however, that public opinion was very strong against the proposed extension.

A Voice—Why did you vote for it?

He (Mr. Chambers) thought that what was done was past redemption, but he considered that the extension to the river would be a great advantage to the Town. He also thought that the settlement or compromise with Mr. Perry was not satisfactory. But as for railroad or no railroad, he would do what he believed would be in favor of the Town, if the people thought proper to elect him.

A Voice—What about salary?

To which he answered that he could not live without something to live on; but would not further detain them.

Mr. Scott being called on, came forward amid repeated cheers, and said—He had a little opposition; and as Mr. Chambers thought he (Mr. Scott) ought not to be elected without opposition—being brought forward by his friends, he would not shrink from the ordeal. In reference to Mr. Chambers not considering the arrangement with Mr. Perry satisfactory, he would explain the nature of the arrangement, and his own position. He had been asked what he would do in the matter of the late By law; to which he answered that he would not seek to repeal it, but would merely allow the law to take its course in the matter. He understood that legal proceedings were being taken, or would be taken, to quash the By-law; and he (Mr. Scott) would content himself with allowing these proceeding to take their due course, as he did not think it wise or politic to interfere unduly with the actions of the past Council; for, if each succeeding Council would do so, there would be never-ending scenes of confusion. He personally thought that the By-law ought to have been submitted to the people; at the same time, he agreed with Mr. Chambers that what was done was past redemption, and ought to be left as it now is. In regard to the promises he would make as to fulfilling the duties of the office, he would merely say that he would do all in his power to perform the duties of the office impartially and to the best of his ability. He was not prepared to say how well he might discharge the duties of the office, but would do all in his power to discharge them faithfully. In reference to the By-law, he (Mr. S.) did not consider that the existing Council had been elected to deal with such matters, and ought not therefore to have done anything until referred to the people. He would not take up any more of their time, but leave the matter with the people.

Landscape Drawing from Nature.

Mr. S. Wood, jr, from the American School of Design, New York City, is at present in Town, and if desired, will remain for a few days for the purpose of giving a course of lessons in an original system of Drawing from Nature. Mr. Wood has shown us testimonials of the manner in which he has been received in the principal Cities and Towns of the United States and Canada, and they appear to be from gentlemen of standing and credibility. They are very satisfactory indeed. He has also shown us some beautiful Drawings of Landscape Scenery that are well executed. Mr. Wood proposes to put his pupils in possession of the Art in 15 lessons. He also intends calling upon the principal citizens during the coming week; but any one desirous of taking lessons can find particulars by Circular, at Mr. Menzies, or by applying through the Post Office.

Literary Club.

Subject for debate this evening—"That it is expedient in the interests of civilization that slavery be abolished." Leaders, Messrs. Knapp and John Burnham. Mr. Haggart will read the "Irish Broom Maker." Messrs. Knapp and O'Donnell will also read short pieces.

Clocks.

Mr. W. Malcom advertises in this issue of the Examiner that he is doing all kinds of repairing to Clocks that may be required. From our own knowledge of Mr. Malcom we can recommend him to any person who may have a Clock to be cleaned or repaired. His residence is opposite Mr. Bradfield's Archery, on Aylmer Street.

Gymnasium.

There will be a preliminary meeting of this Club on Friday evening, over the old Bank of Toronto, when the report on the possibility of forming the Club, and its probable expense will be presented. All interested are invited.

Asphodel.

At a vote taken in this Municipality to annul the By-law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, we learn that there was one vote polled, and that one was to repeal the By-law.

UNION SCHOOL.

The half-yearly examination of the different Divisions of this institution are going on this week.

On Monday, the Junior Division was examined. This Division, in the Union School Room, is under the management of Mrs. Flavelle. The attendance is very large—97 for this month. There has been a slight falling off of about 10, on account of the holidays taking one week from the teaching days. This does appear a trifling excuse; yet so it is. We are assured that the little ones acquitted themselves very satisfactory, exhibiting manifest signs of improvement; and their pleasant little faces testify to the kind treatment they receive.

In the evening of the same day, the North Ward School, under the control of Miss Rutherford, was examined by the Principal, Wm. Lundy, Esq., James Edwards, Esq., and Mr. Stratton, being present also, and several Ladies, who appeared to take a lively interest in thier little ones. The School Room was very comfortable and tidy; the teacher is quite at home among her pupils, and the examination was very satisfactory indeed. Miss Rutherford is a very young teacher, but will no doubt be a successful one. The number present was 39—25 boys and 14 girls. Boys for the quarter, 36; girls, 22—total, 58. The children are not of an age, classification being by attainments, and it was no small part of our admiration to see little ones of 7 or 8 competing successfully with some 12 to 14 years of age. The benefit of the Ward Schools will appear more obvious after a year or two of trial. There is the advantage at these Schools of having the little ones away from larger and rougher boys, thereby saving the weaker from the strong. Besides, the small children will not have so far to go in the severe weather, the School Room, being situated in the Ward in which they live. We are of opinion that if there was one in the South Ward also, it would be an improvement on the present state of things in that Ward; and by the judicious selection of a teacher, would enable many children that are too young to travel to the Union School, or whose parents may be adverse to sending to it, to have a School at their doors.

On Tuesday, the Third Division, taught by Miss Borrowman and Mr. Griffin, were examined by the Principal—Rev. Messrs. Cantlon and Roger, and Mr. J. W. Gilmour, being present. The whole classes were not heard, for want of time: but from the reports of those present, as given in the different class-books, both of these teachers have been successful in bringing up their pupils to a good degree of proficiency—those present testifying to the good, prompt and satisfactory answering of every class but one, in which case we find it recorded "very fair.

FOURTH DIVISION.

Wednesday morning, the fourth Division, taught by Mr. Baptie, was examined before the Principal, Sheriff Hall and Mr. O'Bierne Local Supt. The number present was 49. There has been a falling off for the month of about 8. The reading of this department was on the whole good, the Principal complimenting the boys for their marked improvement. The arithmetic class, consisting of 15 boys, acquitted themselves well, showing themselves fully equal to vulgar and decimal fractions, in which they were tested. Some difficult questions were given and practically solved with readiness. This department also answered promptly and correctly the questions put in History and Geography, showing that they have been carefully trained. The boys were also tested in spelling from dictation the whole room receiving the same words and were complimented by all present for generally good spelling. A Grammar Class was also heard in which the class manifested reasonable progress, and quickness. The parsing was very good.—The remainder of the classes of this division will be heard this morning from 9 to 10.

FOURTH DIVISION—GIRLS.

Miss Beattie, Teacher. Number of pupils present, 38. The reading of this class was excellent in many cases, not easily surpassed by girls of their ages. The Arithmetic of this Division was very satisfactory to all present, each individual expressing entire satisfaction. There was a greater number of visitors present at this part of the examination than at any of the others and the most lively interest in the progress of the children exhibited. The Principal appears untiring in his efforts to have the classes carefully examined and their position clearly defined so as to be able in future to give a full report of progress, or otherwise, as the case may be. In our next issue we propose giving the report of the fifth Division, and also of the state of the School during the year.

Sabbath School Anniversary.

The Anniversary of the Wesleyan Sabbath School, held on Sunday and Monday last, was one of the most interesting and successfull ever held in connection with the School. Two deeply impressive and able Sermons were preached on the Sabbath, by the Rev. R. Jones, the President of the Wesleyan Conference; and in the afternoon the Children of the School, with those belonging to the Free Church, the Baptist, and Bible Christian Sunday Schools, were assembled in the Wesleyan Church; and the smiling happy faces of upwards of 500 children singing those beautifull Sabbath School Hymns will long be remembered by those who were fortunate to obtain a place in the crowded church. The visiting scholars and their teachers were cordially welcomed by the Rev. Mr. Brock, the pastor of the church, expressing a strong hope that it was only the first of a series of such meetings. Short and suitable addresses were delivered by the Rev. Messrs. Cantlon and Roger, also by Col. Haultain and Mr. Fairbairn.

On monday Evening, the Public meeting was held in the School Room, which proved far too small to accommodate the vast crowd that were anxious to witness the Proceedings, and many went away unable to gain admittance, about 70 children, selected from the school occupied a gallery erected for the occasion, and sung some delightfull selections with a correctness and taste seldom attained by children, reflecting great credit upon Mrs. T. Donnelly, who had trained them, some of the larger girls, under the able management of Miss Brock and Mr. Rutherford, the Superintendent, also sang and recited some pieces, adding much to the interest of the meeting. Addresses were delivered by Messrs. Glover, Cluxton, Richardson, Stevenson, and the President of the Conference. David Dumble, Esq., ably presided. But the Report of the able and faithfull Secretary of the school, W. J. Mason, was the most important of the proceedings. We are only sorry that we cannot publish the whole of his excellent Report, but the following extract will be found interesting as showing the value of Sabbath Schools and affording encouragement to those engaged in the work.

"We have occasionally been pleased to hear from some of our scholars who have removed away from us, and gone to live in new and distant parts of our country. The information received inspires us with hope, that many of those from whom we never hear are also endeavouring to benefit those around them. In this connection we will give our friends a single instance:—A little girl of 12 or 14 years of age, and a pupil of this School for some years, about 18 months ago removed with her parents to the new country north of us, going back some 75 or 80 miles. In her new sphere she found herself deprived of those privileges with which she was favoured in Peterboro'; but above all, there was no Sabbath School, and many of her new acquaintances had never attended one; with a commendable desire, on the part of one so young, to be useful, she at once set about forming a Sabbath School, and succeeded; many of the pupils being older than herself. She furnished her scholars with such books as she had, as well as a number of copies of the Sunday School Advocate, and after some time wrote to her former teacher informing her of her efforts, as well as of her success, and earnestly begging for a supply of books and papers. Her letter was read in the School, and the children at once responded to the appeal by bringing in their copies of the Advocate and other books, which were at once forwarded to the little pioneer teacher of a Sunday School in the backwoods. We would fain hope and prove that her labours may be crowned with success. Who can say how much good can be accomplished by a single Sabbath School Scholar whose mind is rightly imbued with a sense of its responsibility and impressed by the spirit of God, relying for success on Him who has promised that his word shall not return to him void."

Total number of scholars in connection with the school, we learn is 388; 210 girls, and 178 boys. Number in the infant department, 106. Average attendance for the past year, 225. Verses recited by the boys, 9,978; girls, 31,510; Total 41,488. Volumes in Library, 560; Bibles and Testaments 200. The amount of funds for the past year at the disposal of directors, $74.68.

We are happy to say that the proceeds of the present Anniversary effort will realize upwards of $100.

Hon. Geo. Brown Resigned.

Yesterday's news brings us the intelligence of the Hon. Geo. Brown having resigned his seat in the Cabinet. This is said to be because of some grave difference between himself and his colleagues on some important public question, while Mr. Brown declines to be responsible for the course adopted.—The Globe of yesterday says "that nothing but matters of the utmost consequence would have induced the Hon. Gentleman to leave the Government at this moment."

All the members of the Government are at Ottawa.

The Leader has the following on the resignation:—

A special telegram from Ottawa apprises us of the resignation of Mr. Brown. The reasons which led him to take this step are not stated, and we are given to understand that the explanations are to be withheld till the opening of the next session of the Legislature. In the difference which occurred, and which is stated to have been of a grave nature, it is admitted that Mr. Brown stood alone; that not one of his colleagues saw the matter in the same light that he did. Where twelve state-men have to decide upon any question, and eleven of them take one view and one of them another, the presumption is that the majority are in the right. Especially is it strong in this case, since Mr. Howland had powerful political motives, arising from habits of association, to side with the man who had been his leader. Mr. Macdougall will be absent from the Province all winter; and the chances are that his opinion will be that of the eleven rather than of the one. Mr Brown occupies a weak position in retiring alone, and in not being able to take with him the only member of his own party in the Government, who was present to acquaint him self with the merits of the dispute, whatever it may have been.

There can be no doubt that the question raised at the North Wentworth election went far to destroy any thing like an entente cor diale between Mr. Brown and Mr. Macdonald. And it is not at all likely that this sore had been entirely healed. At the same time, we can hardly suppose that this could have been the cause of the resignation. The question of the federation of Canada was manifestly pregnant with difficulty: but the time had not come when a final decision upon it was called for, and it certainly is not usual for public men to meet trouble half way. Though the authorized explanations cannot be given till the Legislature meets, it will be almost miraculous if the main facts do not in the meantime get wind; and in the meantime conjecture will be busy at work to solve the mystery.

The Prince of Wales Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 484, held their Annual Meeting on the 18th inst., in the Orange Hall, Peterboro, for the election of officers, when the following brethren were elected into office for the ensuing year:—

Robert Weir, W. M.
James Edgar, D. M.
William Brownscombe, Treasurer.
John Smith, Secretary.
Rev. D. Cantlon, Chaplain.
John Lockie, 1,
Edwin Morris, 2,
John McCombie, 3, } Committee.
John R. McWilliams, 4,
George Stevenson, 5,

We would direct attention to Mr. Allen's advertisement in another column. He proposes to do all sorts of white-smithing and repairing of guns, &c., &c., very cheaply. Give him a call, all you who require his services.

The work of uniting Europe and America by telegraph is being pushed forward with vigour. In May last, San Francisco was connected with New Westminster, in British Columbia; and now we are told that the line has been extended 440 miles north of New Westminster, and the wire for 400 miles more was on the ground.

Mr. Seward has issued his proclamation announcing that 27 States having passed the constitutional amendment abolishing slavery, that measure has now become law—one of the greatest social events of the century.

Billa Flint has been elected Mayor of Belleville.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN,

The rumour has been industriously circulated that a promise on my part to exert myself in favour of the Railway was the cause of Mr. Perry declining to contest the Mayoralty election. I beg therefore distinctly to deny the truth of such assertion, and to state that several gentlemen who were present at the time of the alleged promise are in possession of the facts, and to whom I will at any time refer in confirmation of the statement I now make.

Your obedient servant,
W. H. SCOTT.

SENIOR.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Will you pardon an old resident for saying a word or two regarding the above-named sentinel? It is not my intention to take up the cudgels on behalf of Senex, as it appears to me he is well qualified to speak for himself; so much so that I imagine he won't cross weapons in future with men of such calibre as Senex. I wish to refer to their letters, however, as I am inclined to take a deep interest in the Literary Club. Senex found no fault with the strictures of Senior, as far as they applied to the entertainment given by the Club; he merely condemned the thus little-ones of the latter on handying about the members' names in a public new-paper. This kind of publicity—even where, as in this instance, the gentlemen were profitably occupied—is not courted by business men. Some employers consider stadious habits or literary tastes a drawback in employees; and if Senior's judgment justifies his title, he must have known that such opinions, however erroneous, have great weight. In fact, everybody but Senior saw the drift of Senex's letter, and unanimously condemn what might, in certain circumstances, have been regarded as a fair critique, considering! The strictures gave no offence; on the contrary, they were perfectly innocent. Senior seems to think that "uniting the action to the word" is acting. I presume the word "murder" in this sense is appropriately followed by bloodshed! Anything so utterly puerile as his last letter, can scarcely be imagined, and can only be excused on the ground of his confessed ignorance of "matters" so essential to elocutionary excellence. Does Senior know, I wonder, that our great stage actors are the authorities on Elocution, and that the world is indebted for the English, "pure and undefiled," to a "Some Stuffer? Has he ever heard of Garrick, Siddons, Kemble, Macready and Keely? or does he know that those men and their followers developed the power and elegance of our language. George Vandenhoff was an actor (very inferior to these men, however,) and yet George Vandenhoff is chosen by the principal city in Western Canada to decide the merits of its chief Elocutionist. Senior proudly declaring his ignorance of the Drama, suddenly makes his debut in the columns of the Review, and reveals to the world the true characteristics of Dramatic excellence! Oh, Senior! Senior! if I had not known you and your strictures for so many years, I might have been astonished. Mr. Elitor, I will occupy no more of your valuable space, but conclude, like Senex, by asking some literary gentleman to devote a little time to the criticism of the Literary Club. Personally I can do no more than subscribe my dollar, (the member's fee, I believe) and that I intend doing forthwith.

Yours, &c.,
G.

THE RAILWAY QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—The Review appears to have got slightly confused regarding the real point at issue in this discussion. The question is simply this: Are the people of Peterboro, with their eyes open, to place Mr. Fowler in a position to continue in time to come a monopoly by which they have suffered so seriously in the past? In discussing the question it was necessary to shew clearly how injurious that monopoly had been; and there was no more certain way of doing it than by comparing the rates exacted during times of monopoly with those charged during periods of competition. This, I take it, has now been done to the satisfaction of all, excepting perhaps Mr. Fowler and his friends; and the discussion might have been safely closed were it not for some side issues again raised by the Review. These I shall notice as briefly as possible.

The Review alleges that Mr. Fowler had a right to the use of Bethune Street which he might have made available for his purpose of preventing the competition of the Cobourg road; and that the Council by the recent By-law, simply gave him a right to run along King Street in exchange for the other. As to this I contend that Mr. Fowler never had the right to run on Bethune Street; and that no Council could give him such a right.—Had he attempted to make use of that Street under the By-law of 1857 any ratepayer by an application to Chancery could have stopped him. As a matter of fact I believe he was stopped; and I rather think that the By-law of 1857 was afterwards rescinded.—At all events he removed the rails from north of Hunter Street some years ago, and has not since been in possession of Bethune Street north of that St. in any shape whatever. He had not, therefore, at the time the recent By-law was brought before the Council any right whatever on Bethune Street north of Hunter; and had, therefore, no equivalent to tender to the Council for the right to run on King Street; so that our Councillors then gratuitously gave him, so far as they could, a weapon that he might use to destroy the true interests of their constituents.

The Review asks what change has occurred to enable the owners of the Cobourg road to do now what they have failed to do in years past. That a change has occurred, is evident, else we should not have John Fowler reducing his rates so extensively, and incurring the expense he is now doing in order, if possible, to prevent the competition of that road. No one knows this better than the proprietor of the Review. The change occurred in this way: The Cobourg people during the time their road was idle were engaged in law proceedings with the view of getting the road into their own hands; and Covert & Fowler being interested parties, were as busy then as now in trying to prevent it. By resorting to every weapon the armoury of law could furnish, Covert & Fowler delayed what they ultimately failed to prevent; and it was only when parliament interfered during its last session, and settled the matter, by the Act of 1865, in favour of Cobourg, that the Fowler opposition was rendered nugatory.

Now as regards the Chemong branch, its present position is this: The stock is held in nearly equal amounts by the friends of Cobourg, and by Mr. Fowler and his friends: and he Charter of the road has expired, so that, unless by mutual agreement, neither faction can use the road. The only way to escape a dead-lock is to apply to Chancery to wind up the concern; and such an application has already been made. The first fruits of that was an injunction to prevent Fowler using the common stock for his own advantage. The branch in its present position is simply a private road; and whoever ultimately may purchase the concern could neither extend nor vary it without a new charter. The original purpose of the charter was to connect the Cobourg road with Mud Lake, and a renewal of the charter would assuredly make the connection with the Cobourg and not with the Port Hope road as the Review alleges.

So much for the Review's editorial strictures. A word or two now to its proxy correspondent.

Mr. Fowler seems to have learned by experience the truth of the proverb "when a man pleads his own cause he has a fool for his client," and has now prudently left his cause in the hands of his sub-solicitor. It would however be hard to say that the change has improved his position. It may be that "a ratepayer" feels embarrassed by his last letters on railway matters, which were death on Mr. Fowler, or it may be that he finds the case so bad that he has to resort to the dodge of trying to bamboozle the jury or the ratepayers.

"A ratepayer" endeavors to prove that competition would injure our interests, and the great fact on which he relies to prove it is that if the Cobourg people get possession of the Chemong branch they will take the lumber from the mills straight to Cobourg. Well what of that? If Fowler can get the road into his hands he will take the same lumber straight to Port Hope.—Will it make any difference to us which way it is carried? Will any one, a degree removed from idiocy, believe that we can derive any benefit from the lumber being whirled through the town at the rate of ten miles an hour? Has Millbrook, which has the vast lumber trade of Lindsay as well as Peterboro' passing it daily, increased in population and importance in consequence? If the "whole thing is so simple and so plain, and based on the laws of trade and commerce," the village of Millbrook has certainly had twice the advantage of Peterboro'? And yet, excepting this, there seems to be nothing tangible in "a ratepayer's" address. The rest of his remarks are of a purely visionary character.

One could scarcely have imagined however that a person who writes so glibly of the natural laws of trade and commerce could have enunciated the heresy that "water communication cannot compete with railways;" or imagine the possibility of taking the mineral wealth of Marmora to the front by way of Peterboro'. Nor will the ratepayers really believe, on the mere assertion of "a ratepayer," that "what is for the interest of Covert & Fowler is for our interest." Covert & Fowler have held it to be for their interest to get all they could out of the ratepayers for freight, but the latter could never see that to be for their interest. It would be the interest of Covert & Fowler to obtain the £20,000 which Fowler expects to get for the Mud Lake extension; but the ratepayers are not likely to "see the point."

This assertion that the interests are identical when Mr. Fowler has always done his best to make them antagonistic is only one more of "a ratepayers'" blunders. His pen in fact appears to be like the American parrott gun—most dangerous to those it is intended to serve.

I am, &c.,
ALPHA.

A Reply of the Committee for the Erection of New Jail.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—In regard to a Presentment of the Grand Jury, at the late Assizes, the Committee wish to record that it would have been impossible to place the Water Closets at a greater distance from the occupied portion of the building, greatly increasing its size, and materially adding to the cost of the construction. As it was insisted upon by the Inspector that the prisoners when using the Water Closets should by means of glass placed in the door be in full view by the Jailor from the opposite end of the corridor, and as the plans were first submitted to the Government and found to be satisfactory, neither the County Council nor the Committee had power to alter or amend the plans, and the Committee have carried out all the improvements suggested by the Prison Inspector. At the time the Closets were inspected by the Grand Jury, the appliances by which a stream of water is passed through the sink, was not then completed; but under the improvements now introduced, the Committee believe that all offensive odors will be entirely avoided. As for the removal of the prisoners from the old jail, so forcibly urged in the Presentment alluded to, the Committee wish to state that the preparation of the New Jail for occupation has been pushed forward with all possible rapidity, and that walls so massive require time and artificial heat to secure their being sufficiently dry to admit of their use with safety. The Committee regret that in consequence of the plans of fastenings of corridor and other doors not having been at first matured by the Prison Inspector, who had the entire arrangements in charge, an additional outlay has been required, as the extra work to be performed could only be done at a great disadvantage and at increased labour and expense.

This being the first meeting of the Committee since the publication of the Presentment, accounts for the delay of this explanation.

The influence of a Happy Home.

How often have we heard the exclamation "I cannot keep my child of the streets" I have often thought the fault was perhaps more the parent's than the children's, for if greater pains were taken to provide amusements at home parents would soon have less occasion to complain of their children's love of the streets; they in common with all mankind are searching for happiness and will naturally seek those places where they find most pleasure, home should be to the child the dearest spot on earth, he should feel that there, all his little joys are shared and all his little sorrows sympathized in A pleasant happy christian home is one of the most powerful—yes, we assert, the most powerful restraint from evil. How often has the memory of a gentle mother, a revered father and brothers and sisters loved and cherished proved a stronger restriction than the most stringent rules of employers? What would they say at home? or, how it would grieve mother? has kept many a youth from the path of ruin. A child will as readily connect enjoyment with his brothers and sisters, as with strangers, if he be only taught to do so. Let brothers and sisters play together in the house and in the garden, exercise will do the girls good and their society will have softening influence on the boys; have them mutually interested in each others pursuits and amusements, and let all be under your own control and direction, and it will not lower your dignity as a parent to now and join in a game with the little ones Teach them to be useful—let them wait upon you in little things, bring father's slippers or fetch mother's thimble, &c., it will make them happier to know they are a dlig to your comfort, and you know not how it will draw their little hearts to you; express love for them and never fail to show your appreciation of any little service. Let home be made cheerful—bright pictures should embellish the walls, and here we would say be careful what kind you select, children form ideas from pictures earlier than most people imagine—let the engravings or paintings be pure, chaste, and elevating. Have plenty of sunshine in your house, children feel oppressed in a dark room; never mind though your carpets and curtains should fade, it is better soon to have faded furniture than drooped, faded children. Let the evening table be large enough for all to gather round it, and have a bright light there, the means of lighting are now very cheap, and it is better to give children less finery than to deprive them of an every day enjoyment. Have a musical instrument if you can, at any rate teach them to sing all day at proper times, bringing joy and gladness to your dwelling like the birds of spring. Give them slates and encourage them to draw, it will afford them amusement where noisier sports would prove annoying, and they may acquire a taste for an art which will be a source of pleasure and profit to them in after life. Treat them as little intelligences each differing in taste and disposition, and while children should be taught to yield their wishes to their seniors, it is as unjust as it is unreasonable to expect to stereotype them. Save amusing or entertaining pieces to read to them, and encourage them to think and inquire about things. In short, let your child feel that home is his little sanctuary, that no one loves him so well as father and mother or will do so much for him; let him feel that his parents are his best friends to whom he can confide his little cares and sorrows. Oh! make your child's home like a bright picture, without a shade, let love attune every note of your voice, and control every action. Let home be the bright spot in your darling's future recollection, around which shall beam the sunlight of a father's affection and the soft halo of a mother's love; that in after years of care and perplexity, he may look back upon home as the calm loved port from which he was launched upon life's troubled ocean. Parental responsibility is great but He who has given the command "train up the child in the way he should go" will also give the grace and has added the promise that "when he is old it shall not depart from it.—Mothers lead your little darlings to Jesus and in their infancy dedicate and train them for the Saviour. Hold a gun, Chieftain: "I cannot learn to dance and play cards, for whenever I attempt it, comes the thought that my mother dedicated me to God in my infancy, and but for the memory of my related mother I should be an infidel;" and the influence of that mother's example and training continued to follow him till he had to give his heart to the Saviour and blessed the influences of a happy christian home. Make no impressions on your children's mind that you would not wish to endure through eternity, recollect you have the moulding of their characters, and the influences of the lessons they receive at the fireside will endure when every earthly structure shall have decayed; aye when the lasting hills shall be no more. For the language of a poet:—

> The infant's heart is a tender spot
> Where lines may be quickly traced,
> And though at the time we may mark them not,
> They can never be erased.
> A word or a look at some fitting time
> A place in the heart may keep;
> To guard your babes from the path of crime,
> When you watch your tenderest sleep.

New Map

OF

Peterborough and Ashburnham,

THE undersigned beg to announce that their New Map of the Town of Peterboro' and of the Village of Ashburnham, is now complete and ready for publication.

This Map has been compiled with great care from the original registered plans and surveys, and its entire accuracy secured not only by those means, but by actual survey and careful admeasurement. In the two corporations named, not only is every Lot given and its subdivisions where divided, but the names of the owners, as contained in the last Assessment Roll, are neatly printed on each lot. All public buildings, manufactories, stores, and private residences, together with the existing and proposed railways, streets, mill-races, water-courses dams, bridges, &c, are laid down from actual measurement. The built-up portion of the town is so coloured as to distinguish at a glance the materials used, whether of wood, stone or brick; while the whole is finished in a superior manner, so as to be both useful and ornamental, in securing which neither pains nor expense have been spared.

During the ensuing week, the undersigned will be prepared to receive the names of intending subscribers, at their office, Scott's Buildings. Early application is desired, as but a limited number of copies will be published.

Poetry.

THE STAMMERING WIFE.

When deeply in love with Miss Emily Pryne,
I vowed if the maiden would only be mine,
I would always endeavour to please her;
She blushed her consent, they the stuttering lass
Did! never a word, except, "You're an ass—
An ass—an assidacious teaser!"

But when we were married, I found to my ruth
The unerring lady had spoken the truth,
For often, in obvious dudgeon,
She'd say if I ventured to give her a jog
In the way of reproof—"You're a dog—you're a dog—
A dog—a dog-matic curmudgeon."

And once when I said, "We can hardly afford
This extravagant style, with our moderate hoard,"
And hinted we ought to be wiser,
She looked, I assure you, exceedingly blue,
And fretfully cried, "You're a Jew—you're a Jew—
A very ju-dicious adviser!"

Again, when it happened that, wishing to shirk
Some rather unpleasant and arduous work,
I begged her to go to a neighbour,
She wanted to know why I made such a fuss,
And angrily said, "You're a cus—cus—
You were always ac-cus-tomed to labor!"

Out of temper at last with the insolent dame,
And feeling that madam was greatly to blame,
To scold me instead of caressing,
I mimicked her speech—like a churl as I am,
And angrily said, "You're a dam—dam—
A damage instead of a blessing!"

Varieties.

Never put off till to-day what you didn't wish to do yesterday.

The fish is an eccentric animal. He will have his (-)whim.

A bird in the hand had better be put into a cage at the earliest opportunity, or it may escape.

"I'm going to kiss you, Araminta."—"I don't believe you, John, you haven't got the fire to do it."

BUOYANT INSCRIPTION FOR THE ATLANTIC CABLE.—"To be left till called for."

If a herring and a half cost three halfpence you had better have two for breakfast, and hang the expense!

When is a pointer not a pointer?—When he won't point at a bird. In that case, is a pointer not a disappointer?

The coats of Irish reapers who lately visited England, have been described as "a parcel of holes sewn together."

A late heavy fall of rain showed one hideous sight—an attempt to crowd two fashionably-dressed women under one umbrella.

"No one," said Sydney Smith, "looked so wise as Lord Jeffreys; his forehead and face were an indecent exposure of intellect."

There is a phrenologist in London who can tell the contents of a barrel by examining the head. He makes the examination with a gimlet.

TIT FOR TAT.—Once upon a time an Irishman and a negro were fighting, and while grappling with each other the Irishman exclaimed, "You black rascal, ere on ugh I'll fight till I die,"—"So'll I," said the negro; "I always does."

GOOD COMPANY.—Sir George Saville was remarkably fond of sailing, and, pursuing his favorite amusement on the Humber, with an old fisherman, the vessel admitted a great quantity of water. At last Sir George turned to the old man, and, with great composure, asked him how much more water the boat would hold before she would sink. "Half a bucket full, and please you, Sir George." On which the sails were unfurled, and they came safe on shore. The old man being asked why he did not appraise Sir George of his danger, replied, "Why, marry, I'se an auld man, and thought I could not die in better company."

MALE DOCTORS AND LADY RIVALS.—The "regular practitioners" are understood to feel a great jealousy of the ladies just as the Irish in New York do of negro candidates for work; and he will be a bold man who first consents to meet Miss Garrett in consultation. Let us hope the ladies may at least make the profession a little less pompous, mysterious, and ostentatiously sympathetic. No woman will ever be able to look as wise and benevolent over "our little patient," or translate its stomachache into as many hard words, as the ordinary practitioner. They will feel too certain of being found out.—London Spectator.

Mr. Higgins was a very punctual man in all transactions through life. He amassed a large fortune by untiring industry and punctuality; and at the advanced age of ninety years was resting quietly on his bed and calmly waited to be called away. He had deliberately made almost every arrangement for his decease and burial. His pulse grew fainter and the light of life seemed just flickering in the socket when one of his sons remarked; "Father you will probably live but a day or two; is it not well for you to name your bearers?" "To be sure, my son," said the dying man. "It is well thought of, and I will do it now." He gave the names of six, the usual number, and sank back exhausted upon his pillow. A gleam of thought passed over his withered features like a ray of light, and he raised once more. "My son, read me the list. Is the name of Higgins there?" "It is father." "Then strike it off" and he emphatically; "for he was never punctual; was never anywhere in season; and he might hinder the procession a whole hour!"

CHING AND CHANG.—There were two short-sighted men who were always quarrelling as to which of them could see best; and so they heard there was to be a tablet erected at the gate of a neighboring temple, they determined they would visit it together on a given day and put the visual powers of each to the test. But each desiring to take advantage of the other, Ching went immediately to the temple, and looking quite close to the tablet saw an inscription, with the words, "To the great man of the past and the future." Chang also went paying yet closer, and in addition to the inscription, "To the great man of the past and the future," read from smaller characters, "This tablet was raised by the family of Ling in honor of the great man." On the day appointed, standing at a distance from which neither could read, Ching exclaimed, "The inscription is, 'To the great man of the past and the future.'" "True," said Chang, "but you have left out a part of the inscription, which I can read but you cannot, and which is written in small characters: "Erected by the family of Ling in honor of the great man.'" "There is no such inscription," said Ching. "There is," said Chang. So they waxed wroth, and, after abusing one another, agreed to refer the matter to the high-priest of the temple. He heard their story and quietly said, "Gentlemen, there is no tablet to read; it was taken into the interior of the temple yesterday."

1866, PROSPECTUS 1866,

OF

The Globe Newspaper.

THE publisher of The Globe has to announce that very great improvements in the publication of this journal will be made in the coming year. A new font of beautiful type, cast specially for The Globe, has been imported from the celebrated Scottish Foundry of Miller and Richard, Edinburgh. The quality of the paper used in printing the journal will be much superior to that heretofore employed. Arrangements are now being made or increased Telegraphic facilities; and the corps of Writers, Reporters and correspondents, will be strengthened—increased effort will be put forth—every department to render The Globe more worthy than ever before of the immense circulation it has for so many years enjoyed throughout British America.

The year 1866 is likely to be a most eventful period in the history of Canada—a year in which the current events of the day will be of the deepest interest to every inhabitant of the country.

The new Parliamentary Buildings will, early in the coming spring, be opened for the first time at Ottawa.

The Government is pledged to present to Parliament, at the opening of the session, either a Bill for completing the Confederation of all British America, or a Bill establishing a new Federal constitution for Canada alone, based on the principle of Representation by Population in the popular branch.

On the 17th of March, 1866, the American Treaty of Reciprocity will come to an end; and the negotiations for its renewal, or preparations to meet the change, will be watched with much interest.

Arrangements for acquiring possession of, and opening the North-West territory for settlement, will be specially made, and to these The Globe will devote special attention, as it has hitherto done to everything connected with the subject.

With the settlement of the constitutional question that has so long distracted the province, numerous questions affecting the material progress of this country will be thrown open for consideration. Among these will be—

The subject of Banking and Currency.

Enlarging the Canals, and otherwise improving the Internal Navigation of the country.

Reduction of the Customs' Tariff

Interest on Money.

Opening up new Territory to settlement.

Free land grants to actual settlers.

A Homestead Law.

And many other vitally important subjects in the discussion and settlement of all these matters The Globe will, as heretofore, take an active part; and from the sources of information at the command of its conductors, it is not doubted that its columns the earliest intelligence and the most reliable information will continue to be found.

THE DAILY GLOBE

will continue to be mailed from the office at $6 per annum, payable invariably in advance; but can be procured regularly from the news-dealers in all the cities and towns throughout the Province.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE

will also be much improved in the year 1866. The paper will be of superior quality, and the new Scottish type will give it a greatly increased appearance. An editor has been engaged, whose special duty it will be to condense and arrange the matter for this edition, and to select intelligence specially adapted for country readers. A portion of each week's paper will be devoted to the publication of some interesting tale; and the markets and prices current will continue to be given with promptness and accuracy.

The Weekly Globe will continue to be published at TWO DOLLARS per annum, payable strictly in advance. Some exceptions to the rule of advance payment have been heretofore made—but from the 1st of January, 1866, no paper will be sent from the office without prepayment.

CLUB RATES.

During 1866 we will send:—

Six copies one year for	$10 00
Ten " "	15 00
Fifteen " "	22 50

and an extra copy of the Weekly to the person who gets up the club of fifteen.

Twenty-five copies one year for	35 00

and a copy of the Weekly Globe to the person who gets up the club of twenty-five.

Fifty copies one year for	65 00

and a copy of the Daily Globe one year to the person who gets up the club of fifty.

Eighty copies one year for	100 00

and a copy of the Daily.

Payment must be always in advance.

Each paper is addressed separately.

All the papers included in any club must be mailed to one Post-office.

When additional names are added to any club during the year, they must be sent to the Globe office by the person who made up the Club; and the money sent with such additional names must be such a proportion of the year's subscription at the Club rate as will pay up to the expiration of the Club.

No exception will be made to these rules on any ground whatever.

AMERICAN

Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering

SEWING MACHINE!

COMPANY,

627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE Stitch made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produce a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c., &c., it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c., &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P S.—A novel patented BUTTON-HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

☞ Write your name and address distinctly and say on your letter is necessary.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in TUNE than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old principle of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time the true Sound Base, of which Mr Deringe is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
M. A. Mareczek,	S. Fludberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Hermann Wollenhaupt,	A. Parsli,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
m. Henry Fry	Charle Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. The principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal verisimilitude, that crowning excelence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5.—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smooths delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with ease perfection, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the true results ing from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK
FOR 1866.
The Fashion Magazine of the World.
LITERATURE, FINE ARTS, & FASHIONS. The most magnificent Steel engravings—Double Fashion Plates. Wood engravings on every subject that can interest ladies. Crochet knitting, Netting, Embroidery, Articles for the Toilet, for the Parlor, the Boudoir, and the Kitchen. Everything, in fact, to make a complete Lady's Book.
THE LADIES' FAVORIT FOR 30 YEARS
No Magazine has been able to compete with it. None attempt it.
GODEY'S RECEIPTS
for every department of a household. These are alone worth the price of the book.
MODEL COTTAGES, (no other Magazine gives them), with diagrams.
DRAWING LESSONS for the Young.—Another speciality with Godey.
ORIGINAL MUSIC, worth $3 a year. Other Magazines publishes old worn-out music; but the subscribers to Godey get it before the music stores.
GARDENING FOR LADIES.—Another peculiarity with Godey.
Fashions from Messrs. A. T. Stewart & Co., of New York, the millionaire merchants, appear in Godey, the only Magazine that has them.
Ladies' bonnets. We give more of them in a year than any other Magazine. In fact, the Lady's Book enables every lady to be her own bonnet maker.
MARION HARLAND,
Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemesis," and "Miriam,"
writes for Godey each month, and for no other magazine. A new novel by her will be published in 1866. We have also retained all our old and favorite contributors.

THE SEA OF MEMORY.

Over the sea of memory,
Come sail awhile with me;
Where each proud billow beareth
Its freighted argosy.

From the mystic isles of the by-gone,
They rise a shadowy band;
Weird forms and voiceless phantoms,
That people the silent land.

A countless throng of voyagers,
Push out from the shelly strand;
I hear the dip of their golden oars
Glide forth from the silver sands.

There are infant vessels toying
With the buoyant waves of life;
And shattered barks which have battled
Long with its toils and strife.

Oh! the human hopes we cherish,
And the human loves there be,
Afloat o'er the trembling billow—
Borne to Eternity.

Afar in the glimmering distance
I watch a snowy sail,
Rocked by the wind and billow
A vessel slight and frail.

Soft ringlets stray in the sunshine,
A fair hand plieth the oar;
And far from the white deck floateth,
The name of my lost "Lenore."

Seven beautiful summers I called her
My heart's cherished idol—my bride;
And along the shores of the earth-land
Our barges sailed side by side.

But one night the portal of Heaven
Opened wide her golden bars;
And she went to her home 'mong the angels,
In the realm beyond the stars.

Alone on the wide, dark waters,
The last sail vanished from sight;
At anchor their life-barques are lying,
Close by the haven of light.

Over the fathomless river
They wait and beckon to me;
Beyond the mist of the valley,
A glimpse of the future I see.

A few more suns shall my life-barque
Seen bravely the wind and tide;
Then my spirit shall join the loved ones
Which wait on the other side.

ALICE'S ROSE-TREE.

BY EMMA GARRISON JONES.

The genial sunshine of a sweet May afternoon fell in flickering waves of gold over the mossy roof and ivy-hung chimneys of an old farm-house, standing in a green hollow, in the midst of the pleasant hill-country which stretches southward from the red battle-ground of Manassas. In the neighboring wood, the turtle dove echoed her plaintive love-lay, the partridge whistled, and the robin twittered to her young; and from the surrounding meadows came the dreamy gurgle of the brook, and the musical tinkle of bells from the cattle cropping the early clover, that sprang up green and tender, in the warm shadow of the hills.

The orchard, round about the old house was one mass of fragrant, milky bloom; and the lilac bushes tossed their purple plumes through the low windows, the soft winds scattering the leaves over the sanded floor, until the great, hospitable room, with its ever open doors, and yawning fire-place, gave forth odors sweeter than ever filled the vales of 'Araby the Blest.'

On the low window-sill, overlooking the garden, a young girl sat, on this same May afternoon, her little slippered feet hanging almost low enough to touch the star like dandelions on the grass-plot beneath; her pretty, golden hair thrown back in wavy disorder, her cheeks flushed, and her tender, blue eyes brimful of tears, as they looked, with a serious, questioning gaze, toward the evening sun, just slipping out of sight behind the swaying summit of the distant pine-grove.

'Why, Alice,' cried a manly voice, 'how's this? Come, come, I thought you meant to be so brave!'

'So I did,' her voice faltering painfully, 'but it is so hard—so hard, Archer, to—to—' And she dropped her pretty head on his arm, and gave way to a good cry.

He stroked back the soft mass of gleaming hair tenderly, and said,

'I know it is hard, Alice—harder for me than you, child—though you may'n think so—but it can't be helped; I must go. And the sooner the better. To-night.'

'To-night?'

'Yes—to-night. You don't blame me for what I'm doing?'

Blame you, Archer? Oh, you know better? And a kindling flash lit the tearful blue eyes.

Yes, yes, I do know better, he said.—But I wouldn't mind, if it wasn't for you and mother. It almost seems wrong to leave you exposed to these Southern troops with no one to protect you. But what can I do? I cannot fight against my country. Old Jacob Bradford would rise up from his grave, if his son was to turn traitor; and my grandfather, who fought at Trenton, would come back and curse me. And yet if I stay here a day longer, I'll be conscripted for Lee's army.

There were no tears in the blue eyes now, they gleamed like an unsheathed sabre.

You must go, Archer, she said, her lip that had quivered a moment before, curving proudly; God will take care of your mother and me.

I have something for you, Alice,' he said after a pause. 'See here,' and he drew from his pocket a tender little rose-tree, with the roots carefully wrapt in paper.—'I got it up at Mr. Ashton's to-day; they say it is of a rare species, and blooms every month. Come, we'll plant it, and it shall be my parting gift.'

He caught up the little garden hoe that lay near by, and went round to the old sitting-room window. Alice followed him in silence.

'Right here,' he said, digging up the soft, black soil, 'where you can see it, whenever you look out at the window; and mind—it shall be a token between us, Alice as long as it thrives and blooms, you may be sure I'm alive and prosperous; but if it wilts and dies——'

'Don't Archer, don't,' she cried, her face growing white in the deepening twilight, 'don't say that; it may die, and—'

'It will live, Alice; and I shall live, and I shall come back to you again—God has told me so.'

She looked up, with something like awe in her face, and she heard his confident words. He smiled, and, leveling the soil about the roots of the little tree, repeated half to her and half to himself, 'It will live; and I shall live—and our country will live, too.'

Then he kissed her softly, and she tripped away to the kitchen, leaving him standing there alone. The May moon was coming up over the top of the old oak tree that stood off to the eastward, flooding the surrounding hills and all the green hollows with a subdued lustre, lovelier, if not brighter, than the full radiance of day. A whippowil began its melancholy song from its perch on the old grind-stone, and the frogs set up their plaintive cry from the pond in the meadow. Sights and sounds familiar as his own being, they brought the tears to Archer Bradford's eyes, and made the broad chest beneath his folded arms swell convulsively. His heart was tender and domestic; all his affections were centered in this old Virginia home; all his deep love lavished upon his doting old mother and little, blue-eyed Alice—not his sister but something, as we have seen nearer and dearer.

By ten o'clock every arrangement was completed, and Archer's satchel, packed with clothing on one side, and eatables on the other, stood, locked and strapped, on the kitchen door-sill. He picked it up and swung it on his shoulder.

'Well, mother,' he said, putting his arm round her and kissing her tenderly. 'I must be off, or I shall get across the river by day. Take care of yourself, and may God bless you.'

'And you, too, my boy.'

He turned away, pained by the sight of her tears, and strode out toward the old red gate. Alice followed him.

He kissed her through the bars, on the cheeks, brow, and eyes, and then, without another word, walked rapidly away. She watched him until a sudden turn in the road took him from her sight; so did the poor mother, sitting on the door-sill, thinking, both of them, no doubt, of the weary days of woe and war that would intervene before they looked upon his face again.

The spring wore away; summer came and the thunders of battle rocked the old farm-house to its very centre; but the rose tree did not wilt. Though the air was hot and sulphurous it shot up young tendrils and burst into fragrant bloom; and Alice said to herself continually, He will live—he will come back to us.'

A cold and cruel winter—another spring—the harvest trampled down before they ripened, the beautiful hill-country made desolate by the ravages of war, still the rose tree bloomed and grew, and Alice's heart was full of hope. But when the summer passed, and the fall came, and the scanty harvests were gathered in; and one by one the fathers and husbands left at home, were conscripted into the Southern army, leaving weeping children and wives in comfortless homes, a change seemed to fall upon the land; the sun wore a murky glow; the sky seemed brass, and God too far off to hear.

But in those days of desolation, the rose-tree drooped and wilted, and as the winter came on, all life seemed to go out from branch and root; and Alice's hope failed. No letters reached them from Archer, and they heard rumors of terrible disasters daily befalling the Union forces.

'He is gone, Alice—we shall never see him again,' said the poor mother; and Alice found no words to disprove what she said.

The winter was dreadful. Scanty of food and fuel, the two mourners sat by their lonely hearth, with an unspoken sorrow in their white faces that awed even the fierce guerrillas, that prowed about the old farm house, into something like pity and respect. But there is nothing in this world of ours that does not, sooner or later come to an end. The wheels of time may seem slow, but they are sure. The lonely winter dragged itself away, and spring came—'a snow-drop in her hand, a solitary lark above her head.' The blue sky smiled down, and the sweet sunlight fell in genial beams, and the gentle rains descended on the fields blackened and blasted by the ravages of war, bringing up the tender grass and meek-eyed violets over the nameless graves of the fallen brave. In the garden, at the old farm-house, the pinks came up and opened their odorous petals, and the hollyhock buds swelled almost to bursting, the old fashioned roses budded, and the lilacs tossed their purple plumes through the low windows, as in days gone by.

Alice felt a strange balm dropping into her sore heart, and day by day she watched the little wilted rose-tree, as one might watch a dear face on the verge of eternity. And at last—at last her hopeful faith was rewarded, for on the topmost branch a tiny green shoot appeared.

'Oh, mother, mother!' she cried, running in, 'he isn't dead,' he'll come back to us again—the rose-tree is alive.'

But the poor mother turned despairingly from the happy face and shook her head. Age is less hopeful than youth. 'No, no, he'll never come back again,' she said.

But the spring advanced, and the little shoot grew, and one after another new shoots came out, and by full summer tide the rose-tree was in blossom, weighed down with fragrant, crimson flowers. Still no tidings came from Archer, but Alice hoped and waited. In the meantime, Lee's forces retreated before Grant, and the old flag waved again over that portion of poor, desolate, mistaken Virginia.

An evening came, in the cloudless glory of regal June. Mrs. Bradford sat upon the door-sill, swaying back and forth, and murmuring to herself in a dozed, melancholy way; Alice sat on the grass close by the rose-tree. The same whippowil piped on the old grind-stone; the same stars glittered overhead—but where was he? Heaped up amid the nameless dead on some distant battle ground—languishing in some far-off hospital—yearning for home and friends. Her blue eyes grew dim with a mist of tears, and her brave heart sick with deferred hope. But a gentle wind stirred the branches of the rose-tree, surrounding her with a cloud of delicious perfume; and at the same instant the old, red gate swung sharply on its hinges. Some one was coming down the little foot-path; a soldier, with a blue, armless sleeve dangling at his right side. Such visitors, finding their way back to Washington, and so home after the battle in the Wilderness, often crept in at the old farm-house now. Alice rose up, and placed a chair beneath the little woodbine arbor.

'Won't you sit down and have a drink, sir?' she said, sweetly, as he came up.

He sat down, while Alice darted off to the kitchen, to get the drink.

'Bring some cider, Alice called the old woman, wiping her eyes.' 'I like to give 'em the best; my own poor boy was a soldier.'

Alice brought the cider, clear and rare, a lump of ice tickling in the bottom of the goblet. The soldier took it, raised it to his lips, heard the ice tinkling with a cool refreshing sound, as he had heard it hundreds of times in his boyhood. His hands trembled—gave way—it fell, and he sprang to his feet with a passionate cry.

'Mother, Alice—don't you know me?' Did they know him? Let their happy tears, their tender embraces answer. Clasped in their arms, he, the strong man, the soldier, bronzed by the smoke of half a score of battles, sobbed like a little child. But after a while they grew quiet, and Archer sat down beside his mother on the door-sill, with a fresh goblet of cider in his hand; while Alice, with a shine in her blue eyes, beside which the June stars looked dim, went back to her seat on the grass.

'I knew you'd come,' she said, softly her sweet face dimpling with happy smile, and I told mother so, because your rose-tree came to life.'

Archer looked over at the great, crimson blossoms, and said almost solemnly.

'Yes, Alice, I live—and the rose-tree lives; and, better still, our country lives also.'

The Corry Telegraph says:—"An incident worthy of note came under our observation on Sunday night while on our way from New York to this place. At the former place a lady had taken her seat in the car of the Express train, and was soon requested by a gentleman to share it with him. She nodding assent, he became seated by her side. Both being of a seeming social turn, a general business conversation was soon entered into, which at length was changed into a discussion of personal interests, then talk of modesty, propriety, love, &c., which continued till 'we sinn' approached, and he avowed his most solemn intentions and 'popped the question.' The lady, worked up to a nervous agitation, amounting to decided tremble, gave the affirmative by reclining on his shoulder. Had a pang struck the heart of the goat, he could not have assumed a more meek attitude. Then came a silence, a 'mingling of hearts,' and repose. On the arrival of the train at Elmira the parties were made man and wife, and took the next western train, full of glee at their new association." Which party was taken in.

READING.—Keep your views of men and things extensive, and depend upon it that a mixed knowledge is not a superficial one. As it goes, the views that it gives are true; but he who reads deeply in one only, gets views which are almost sure to be perverted, and which are not only narrow but false. Adjust your proposed amount of reading to your time and inclination; this is perfectly free to every man; but whether that amount be large or small, let it be varied in its kind, widely varied.—If I have a confident opinion on any one thing connected with the government of the human mind, it is this.—Dr. Arnold.

The old adage that 'straws show which way the wind blows,' needs reviving. This is the age of straw. We use it in all departments in life. It makes beds, bonnets, baskets, boxes, and beehives. Everything that is breakable or bruisable, is packed in straw. Its uses are almost innumerable, and its value is such that the straw of a crop of rye, in the vicinity of large towns, is worth more than the grain; and within five years a new use of straw has given it a new value in many sections where the only value it had before was a very small one, for feeding and manuring purposes.—Ann. Paper.

THE TWO LABORERS.—Two men I honor, and no third. First, the toil-worn craftsman that with earth-made implements laboriously conquers the earth and makes her man's. Venerable to me is the hard hand, wherein lies a cunning virtue; venerable is the rugged face, weather-tanned, with its rude intelligence, for it is the face of a man living manlike. Toil on; thou art in thy duty, be out of it who may.—Thou toilest for altogether indispensable—for daily bread. A second man I honor, and still more highly; him who is seen toiling for the spiritually indispensable—not daily bread, but the bread of life. Is not he too, in his duty, with Heaven-made implements, conquering Heaven for us? If the humble toil that we may have food, must not the high and glorious toil for him in return, that he may have light and guidance, freedom and immortality? These two, in all their degrees, I honor; all else is chaff and dust, which let the wind blow whither it listeth. Unspeakably touching, however, is it, when I find both dignities united, and he that must toil outwardly for the lowest of man's wants, is also toiling inwardly for the highest. In him we may see the splendor of Heaven spring forth from the humblest depths of earth, like a light shining in great darkness.—Thomas Carlyle.

Are Homes for Show or for Use?

The fashion has come to prevail that the most spacious and pleasant rooms of the mansion, be it large or small—the best furniture—and the largest part of the whole thing called home, is set apart for show and the occasional entertainment of visitors, while the owner and his family who are really entitled to the enjoyment of it are rarely permitted to do so. The idea has been carried so far that much personal comfort is sacrificed and families are absolutely scattered abroad to find the room they ought to have at home. Now and then a family is found to rise above this silly practice, and such have a home worthy of possession to those who belong there and which it is a pleasure to visit. One of the New York papers made the following hit at the popular custom in language which will be recommended for its truthfulness and pertinency everywhere:

Call in at brown stone front above Bleecker, at any time except on the occasion of a great "spread," and it has the air of a very nice old maid in morning gown and curl papers—across between iron premises and painful desolation. Everything exists in a state of bagginess. The sofa is a mute, inglorious corpse in a dimity winding sheet. The chairs are put away in aprons and pantalettes. The chandelier wraps its night-gown around it. The shutters are closed to keep from fading the carpets, and only here and there, through the cracks, a little bit of sacred light peeps in and looks around in a tremulous and sickly way. Everything smells of brown Holland, and everything looks as if it considered you fearfully impertinent for daring to come and disturb its elegant uselessness and brown linen repose. It is very much like going into a family vault after an epidemic, and having a lively time with a party of corpses in fresh grave clothing. In fact, you feel decidedly like asking the mistress of the house why she doesn't complete the picture by putting up the clothes-lines in the parlors and hanging up the week's wash.

Soberly, this show-shop arrangement, which makes home a nuisance, and drives father and son out of doors for the comfort which their own house is far too fine to afford them, is a growing nuisance, and lies at the bottom of half the social evils. When a man comes home after the fatigues of business, he doesn't want a show wife nor a show shop house. He doesn't want an invisible place; but a visible home. He wants something made to wear and use, and allowed to be used after its kind. He wants chairs that he can lean back in; and carpets made to be walked on; and a house alive all over; and a wife and children whose daily thought is how it can all be made happiest, cheeriest, most thoroughly comfortable for him.

HOW TO GET AND KEEP HEALTH.

I. Get peace of mind.—This is to be had (as the experience of men in every age and of every station in life testifies) by having always, and by ever cultivating, "a conscience void of offence toward God and toward men," Acts xxiv. 16. Peace with ourselves begets the disposition to be at peace with others; and this alone will contribute much to health and happiness.

II. Rise in time—to prepare and fortify the mind by prayer and forethought for the duties and events of the day. This will prevent surprise, hurry, and confusion, and that consequent vexation which frets and wears out the animal spirits.

III. Rule the appetites, or you will be in danger of being ruled by them.—As an important means to this strict self-controls, be "temperate in all things," and particularly in diet. Eat enough to support, not injure health. Drink water when in health; and abstain from all fermented drinks, except when medicinally prescribed. As a rule, three moderate meals a-day are sufficient; and to enjoy refreshing sleep and be fitted to rise betimes, little or no food should be taken three or four hours before bedtime by adults. Habit will soon make this practice easy and prove its value. All vicious indulgence strike directly at the health; and these may generally be traced to the use of fermented drinks.

IV. Regularity, cleanliness, air, exercise, sufficient clothing, occasional entire abstinence, habitual occupation with seasonable and suitable recreation, thankfulness, cheerfulness, hope, courage, are amongst the many means of promoting and maintaining health. PROV. X. 22.—Church of England Temperance Magazine.

PROVERBS OF THE KANURI OF BORNU. Hope is the pilar of the world. Hold a true friend with both thy hands. No one can kill the appetite of fowls, save Allah. Ajabug; the Bornuese, like the pagan of Unyamwezi, consider the smell aromatic, and they suppose the aroma of Paradise and that of bugs to be of the same nature. A certain man had a most beautiful daughter, who was beset by many suitors; but as soon as they were told that the sole condition on which they could obtain her was to bale out a brook with a ground nut-shell (which is about half the size of a walnut-shell) they always walked away very much disappointed. However, at last one to k heart of grace, and began the task. He obtained the beauty; for her father said, 'Kam ago tauru baditsin tsido.'—he who undertakes what he says, he will do it.—N. B.—The Hindoos have a somewhat similar fable concerning a sand-piper, who, in revenge for the loss of his young, began to dry up Samudra, or the ocean. Both teach men not to admit the word "impossible" into their vocabularies, and to consider nothing too high for human will to attain. So it is popularly said amongst ourselves that, if a man is really determined to win it, he might wear the crown of England.—African Proverbs.

It is a wonder the women don't take a cold from standing so continually under waterfalls.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1865

Coming Election of Councillors.

On Monday next the ratepayers will be called upon to choose Municipal Representatives for the coming year, and as we hear of proposed changes being attempted, we think the people should enter into those things with their eyes open. Every aspirant who solicits the suffrages of the electors is not to be accepted without due consideration, and unless he possesses the necessary qualification. Now, it is needless to say that mere possession of a certain amount of property, very often indeed only the name of possessing it, does not qualify a man for the responsible position of being a member of the Town Council. It is some easier to obtain property than to obtain common sense; and without the latter recommendation we trust that the people will not send a man to represent them at the next Council Board. Every ambitious upstart who, uncalled, forces himself into the presence of the people, by the aid of one or two hangers-on should not be tolerated. Property does not qualify any one to be a Councillor, nor does the want of property wholly disqualify a man. But as the law requires a certain property qualification it is right that that sum should be exacted. At the same time, the electors should see that no ignoramus or nonentical babble should influence them to support a man who does not possess the necessary qualification—viz.—a little property and a good share of common sense. Men who have been elected any kind in town or elsewhere and abused them, should not receive the vote of a single man, for he who once abuses confidence may be expected to do so again, if temptation fall in the way. A great cry has been got up about the railroad extension and we find in the general confusion parties arrange themselves either in favor of Cobourg or Mr. Fowler and have almost forgotten that what concerns us most is Peterborough, not Cobourg, not Mr. Fowler. The question has never arisen, will the extension to Dixon's dam injure Peterborough, or will it not? Mr. Fowler works for his own advantage, and who blames him? The people of Cobourg are seeking their own interests, and who would find fault? But will the people of Peterborough so far espouse the side of either as to forget the interest of Peterboro'? surely not! Now, the extension to Dixon's dam cannot injure the Town, and may benefit a number of individuals, and inasmuch as Mr. Fowler bore the bill, we have nought to complain of; but the extension of the road farther is an after consideration. With the extension of the road to Lakefield the Town Council has nothing to do. Before this can be done an Act of parliament must be obtained, therefore, it is in parliament the great battle will be fought; and as Cobourg got the best of Belleville, we are ready to conclude Cobourg will be strongest in this contest also. With this however we have nothing to do yet. The late Bylaw is now settled as far as the Council is concerned, and as it refers only to crossing, &c., as far as the Town limits, voters should not allow such side issues to draw them them away from the real point—the best men.

OLD COUNCIL.

Rumors are afloat of rejecting some members of the present Council, and sending new men in their places. The East Ward has no fewer than three new men in the field, by report. With the fitness or unfitness of these men we will not trouble ourselves now, although on this matter something might be said. What we wish to draw the attention of the ratepayers of this Ward to, is the folly of sending new men to the new Council for the mere love of change.

Mr. Ormond, who represents this Ward now, is and has been all along a most efficient member. No man in the Council has done so much for the interest of the Town during the year. No less than fourteen Finance Committee Reports were drawn up by him, and presented. And Mr. Ormond aided by a few other members of the Committee are leaving the Town in a position such as has not been done for years. When the present Council assumed office there were

There arrears the present Council has paid off, together with expenses for 1865, of 12859.32, leaving nothing unpaid unless a few trifling items amounting to perhaps not more than $100, and about $1200 of the accumulated deficits of past years.

Last year the Collector was largely in arrears, and no settlement could be obtained, this year the Collector has paid over already, nearly, if not altogether the amount of the roll. Only $200 remains unpaid.

Last year there were immense discounts against the Town—now there are very few, if any. In fact last year the Sheriff was kept from proceeding against us only through the influence of Col. Hanhain. This year we fear neither Sheriff nor any other man. And we hesitate not to say that Mr. Ormond is one who contributed much to bring about this state of things. The only thing we have now to fear is sending men who know no more about Council matters than they do about uprightness, and sometimes that is precious little.

If the people of the East Ward will consult their own interest and that of the Town, Mr. Ormond will stand as the head of the poll—no matter who opposes him. Mr. McNaughton is also a very good Councillor, we trust the people will return him also. As Mr. Chambers runs for Mayor, there must be one chosen to fill his place, and as we hear the name of M. Millar, Esq. we consider him the right man and in no way can the people better consult their own interests than by placing these three ahead of all.

In the North Ward, Messrs. Toole, Whyte and Dumble are spoken of, all of whom are suitable persons. There may yet be opposition, however.

For the Centre Ward we hear of Messrs. Stevenson, Helm, R. D. Ewing, and R. Hamilton.

For the South Ward, Messrs. Burnham and Chamberlen. The other we have not heard of.

In all these Wards we are satisfied that the old Councillors are as suitable as any who may be returned. Mr. A. Williams will not seek re-election. Let his Ward see to it that they send a good man in his place. But above all we beseech the people to drop the bug-bear cry of Cobourg and Fowler and Railroadmen of this stamp or that, and choose none but men of sterling honesty and uprightness.

THE MAYORALTY.

We had almost made up our minds to allow the present contest for the honors of the Mayor's chair to pass unheeded. We do not admire the idea of meddling with individuals if we could possibly avoid it. Although we felt no small interest in the issue, still we would have preferred enjoying our ease, rather than meddling with the fitness or unfitness of Mr. Scott or Mr. Chambers. Each one considers him self well qualified no doubt and so do the friends of each, and therefore we do not wonder if our correspondent "Ubim" beholds in his man every necessary qualification, although he does not say so. Indeed if his man has no more successful advocate than "Ubim" we fear he will be elected to stay at home. Another reason for past silence was, that we imagined we saw Mr Fowler and Mrs. Cobourg too plainly in the present hue and cry about rail roads. We confess that at present our interests are in Peterborough, and we shall feel pleased to witness our own progress whether brought about by Mr. Fowler or by Cobourg. While our correspondent enumerates certain necessary qualification, he does not say that Mr. Chambers possesses one of them, unless a little property. To this we might answer that P. Ryan, Esq., who proposed his man possesses the very same, and we should like to witness the lily and the shamrock perching on one branch.

Mr. Chambers may be qualified to preside at the Council Board, but certainly not as Police Magistrate: for, while property and honesty are very desirable requisites in a chief magistrate, something more is needed. If the Mayor be chosen merely to preside at Council, Mr. Chambers might do; but is he to receive the salary, and the Clerk do the business? This surely would not be fair. At least $400 would be a small sum for the duties of the Police Court; and we think that if the people shall choose a person unfit to act as Magistrate, the Clerk should at once refuse to burden himself with the business, unless he shall get the emoluments. Mr. Edwards makes a very acceptable magistrate, and we have no objection to his acting; but we cannot think that the people will so impose upon him as to compel him to perform the labors of both offices unless they give him the emoluments of both. As to taxing us, the Finance Committee generally do that; hence, no fears need arise on that score. In reference to abusing confidence, we need not tell our correspondent "Ubim," that many live among us a life time, and accumulate property, perhaps pay their debts, because they can't avoid it, in whom the people have no confidence whatever; while many a poor man is highly respected. We do not choose to abuse Mr. Chambers because we differ from him in this, his desire to occupy the position of Mayor of this "Intelligent Town" but we do not hesitate to say that Mr. Scott is better fitted for the position: and we are mistaken if the majority of the electors will not think so too.

Mr. James McCarroll.

This now celebrated gentleman—the famous Terry Finnegan—is amongst us again and will repeat his Musical and Serio-comic Lecture, "The House that Jack Built," in Victoria Hall on to-morrow evening, Friday, the 29th inst. Of his merits as a Flute-player and Lecturer, we and the press from one end of the province to the other, have spoken, already in the highest terms. Our cotemporary the Dunville Independent speaks in the following manner in relation to Mr. McCarroll's recent appearance on the banks of the Grand River;—

This extraordinary man delivered his celebrated lecture "The House that Jack Built," in the Boswell Hall on Saturday night. The lecture was a master-piece of wit, logic and eloquence. Apart from the mirth-provoking sallies of wit and humour, there was a strong vein of deep philosophy and sound sense pervading the lecture. It would be a treat to hear it a second time. Mr. McCarroll's Flute-playing surprised all. Even Mr. Warren, a first-class musician, who has been (from his childhood) in a military band, in the British service, first in the 17th Regiment, and now in the Royal Canadian Rifles Band, asserted the like of it has never been heard before.

We understand that Mr. McCarroll—as he is now in this part of the country—intends to visit Port Hope, Millbrook, Omemee, Warsaw, and perhaps one or two other places. We trust that Peterboro and these places will all give him a crowded house.

Union School Report Continued.

FIFTH DIVISION—BOYS.

The number in this Division is not very large—but the girls of the Fifth are some times under his care, especially in English Grammar—and the higher Mathematics of the Grammar School Department are also taught by the teacher of this Department. The subjects heard were Arithmetic, as far as Fractions, the Elementary Rules of Algebra, and the first two books of Euclid. This is the Division too in which the trouble arose some time ago. The practical part of the Arithmetic and Algebra was gone through rather dilatorily; lack of rein appeared too plainly. Of the English, it is perhaps unfair to say anything as there has not been sufficient time given to see what can be done by those in this Department. It would be well to give this Division to understand that something is required and that if the boys desire a good name they must win it. Diligence and perseverance will remove the many difficulties that are in the way.

FIFTH DIVISION—GIRLS.

Miss Kyle Teacher. Present—Rev. Mr. Cantlon, the Principal, the Local Supt., and several visitors. The classes in this room are far in advance of the other Divisions, which of course is to be expected. The reading was very good indeed. Several of the pupils reading with ease, elegance, and distinctness, such as is rarely equaled, and seldom surpassed. It might be invidious to mention the names of the most successful; we will content ourselves by offering a word of congratulation that this class has been brought to such a degree of proficiency.—The answering in Geography and History was prompt, correct, and intelligent, and the solutions of the Arithmetical exercises were performed in a manner denoting an intimate knowledge of the modus operandi, and this from Interest both simple and compound, Partnership, Commission, Insurance, &c., as far as through the cube root. French is also taught by this teacher, and the Rev'd Mr. Gilmour who examined the classes gave the most satisfactory assurance of the progress of the pupils in this part of their studies.

THE GRAMMAR SCHOOL DEPARTMENT

Was heard on Friday—the Rev'd Messrs. Burnham and Roger, being present. The entries of those gentlemen report that the classes, as far as examined, were satisfactory.

As the pupils in the Grammar School are examined by Grammar School Inspectors every six months, the present examination is more to fulfil the law, than for the examination of the classes by parties who have not had time to keep pace with the growth of literature, other callings forbidding even application enough to retain what once they had acquired.

On Friday, also, prizes were awarded to the most deserving of the different Divisions.

And now a word as to the state of this Institution. Many are of the opinion that it has cost the Town more than it is worth; but we feel satisfied that if these persons would go and witness the examinations, and thus see and hear for themselves, there would be less croaking about cost. What can be obtained without some expense? And it is certainly a privilege to possess an Institution in which all the branches of a reasonably liberal education are taught, and may be acquired. The money spent in support of the Grammar and Union School is the best spent of all our municipal outlays. With regard to the state of the School, it is in a healthy state; a little effort will very soon supply all defects—only give a little time.

THE FUTURE.

The surest way to ensure failure is to allow the idea to prevail that little is required, and it does appear as if so little has been required heretofore, that some of the pupils think that it is not worth while giving themselves any trouble about the matter. The idea prevails in some minds that practice is enough—theory is useless; or when this opinion does not completely prevail, parties think that perfection almost, in practice, must exist before the principles of Rules are unfolded. This is simply the most absurd idea that ever entered the mind of any one. Practice will never be perfect and reliable until the principles underlying the whole are thoroughly understood. The recitation of every Rule in Arithmetic is nothing, if the principles of those Rules are not understood; for a parrot may be taught to pronounce a word but does this make it an intelligent philologist, and never will an independent man be turned out of any Institution, unless the boys in it are taught the whys and wherefores, and also never to rest satisfied until they, each one, understand the whole matter. No matter if some one does say that the little ones cannot understand reasons. Few are aware how soon the young mind begins to search after causes, and one of the surest ways of destroying the reasoning powers is to deny them proper action—proper enquiry. Why is it, too, that there is so much bigotry, superstition, and idolatry! Is it not because the dupes of certain dogmas are never allowed to enquire why. The only answer ever given to the natural outbursts of the faculties after knowledge, being "The fathers or the system says so." We say then that never will the Fifth class succeed until they are taught the reason for every step of the processes in every exercise. The superficial white-washing of pupils in the elements will be the destruction of the boy in higher branches. There can be no surer way to ensure failure in practice than by skimming over proportion; no surer source of failure in the second book of Euclid than possessing only a flimsy, uncertain knowledge of the first book. Most searching examinations must be instituted. The whole science of every branch of study must be thoroughly explained and fully mastered. The word failure must not be found in the whole vocabulary of a School Dictionary, especially where each Division is wholly under the care of one individual. The examinations must cease to be conducted by the teacher if progress is to be ensured, and the most thorough oversight instituted; then soon, very soon, a change will be perceptible. This worn out defunct notion of resting satisfied with as little as possible as long as you can get along at all must be driven from the minds of the pupils if we would have men and not dwarfs.

The Railway celebrities of Port Hope and some from Peterboro' are on an extension tour from Lindsay to Beaverton, They passed through Millbrook, on the way thither, on Tuesday morning in a special train.

PROSPEROUS TIMES.—There were only five cases heard in the last division court in Millbrook. Can Lawyers there do nothing to arouse the people?

Ashburnham School Examination.

The examination of this School took place on Friday last, some of the trustees and a few parents being present. The Junior Classes, taught by Miss S. Dowling, were heard in the forenoon. The Senior Classes, taught by Mr. McCamus, were examined in the afternoon.

The Junior Classes acquitted themselves very creditably, and were a credit to Miss Dowling, their teacher. The answering of a little class in geography equalled, in correct and ready answering, many classes of almost a year's application, yet, many of them did not exceed 7 years of age. The writing of these classes, and the needle-work were very creditable indeed.

The other classes taught by Mr. McCamus, were heard in the afternoon; 3 members of the Board and a few parents being present. These classes were examined in elementary arithmetic, geography, grammar and reading, in each of which they left favorable impressions of careful training. After the examination, the members of the Board present, awarded prizes to the most deserving; after which all left for their homes, anticipating joyful times during the holidays.

School Examination.

The December Examination of the School in Section No. 1, North Monaghan, took place on Friday, the 22nd instant. The children were examined in Reading, Spelling, Geography, Arithmetic, &c., &c. Generally speaking all acquitted themselves well—demonstrating that the Teacher (Mr. Chas. S. Dunbar) had spaired no pains in teaching them. The following particularly excelled in the branches of education under notice:

Geography, Senior Class, James Braley.
Members of 2nd Class absent.
Arithmetic, Senior Class—James Braley.
Arithmetic, Junior Class—James Dunlop, Agnes Wright and Eliza Long.
Fifth Book—James Braley.
Fourth Book—Members all absent.
Third Book—Jas. Dunlop, Agnes Wright, and Eliza Long.
Second Book—Susan Braley and L. Long.
Sequil—John Lillico, Isabella Burney and William Braley.—Com.

Literary Club.

The usual entertainment of this Club was given on Thursday evening last, at the Firemen's Hall, before a numerous and select audience. The first part consisted of a reading by Mr. Knapp, entitled "A Nocturnal Sketch." This is a difficult piece to render, but in the hands of the reader, ample justice was done to the whimsicalities of the author. Mr. O'Donnell then read with exquisite taste and feeling "The Execution," by Mr. Barham, (Ingoldsby). Though the task was a difficult one, from the varied style of poetry in this piece; yet Mr. O'Donnell has established a reputation as an able and accomplished reader. Mr. D. Baggart then read the farce of "The Irish Broom maker."—We need scarcely say more than, that this reading was given in the gentlemans usually happy manner and justified the applause which greeted him throughout. We may however add that we question if a better delineater of character can be found in the Province. The debate then followed, the question being "Is it expedient in the interests of civilization that slavery should be abolished," and which was decided in the affirmative.

Conversazione.

The Literary Club proposes having a Conversazione on Thursday evening, the 4th of January, in the Victoria Hall. The object being to raise money to pay off a small debt on the Library. We trust that a full house will be the reward for the efforts of the Club to afford pleasure and profit. We have not seen the programme, but we feel satisfied that no effort will be wanting to make the evening a pleasant one.

Soiree.

In connection with the North Monaghan Intellectual Improvement Society, there will be a Soiree in the Monaghan Town Hall, on New Year's Day. This has been a source of pleasant amusement for several years; and it is to be hoped that a large number will avail themselves of the opportunity to spend the evening of the New Year pleasantly and also profitably at this entertainment.

Springville.

The Springville Soiree on Christmas Day was a decided success—nearly $120 being the result thereof.

The Ministerial Crisis.

It will be observed, from a despatch of our Montreal correspondant, that Sir John Michel has, for the present, refused to receive Mr. Brown's resignation, and has summoned Messrs. Cartier and Macdonald to Montreal. Thus the matter stands at present.

We beg leave to warn our Conservative contemporaries, who are decrying Mr. Brown, that they are laying up rods in pickle, which we may soon use on their backs. The best service they can render to their masters and the public, is to hold their tongues until they know the facts of the Ministerial dispute. When they are made known, we can assure them that they act we, will refrain from discussion. In the meantime, both sides are agreed that the circumstances should be concealed, in view of the interests of the public, and the Conservative journals should have discretion enough to keep silence in the meantime.—Globe.

The resignation by Mr. Brown of his seat as President of the Executive Council has been accepted by His Excellency the Administrator of the Government.—Globe.

RAILWAY MATTERS.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

SIR,—Anent this Railroad matter is there any more to be said? Mr. Fowler—we have had "his I set" he got so disgusted with the plain unvarnished truths of "Alpha" that he could stand "fire" no longer, as learned John fired his last gun, and then disappeared to the smoke. True, he has left instructions with his factotum to advocate his cause through the columns of the Review, and in reality, were we to judge advocacy of "a Ratepayer" by the length of their articles written on the subject, we would have to come to the conclusion that he has succeeded in convincing the ratepayers of Peterboro of their errors. "A Ratepayer" has found his task of such an uphill nature, that he has had to go over the same ground again and again, and still the obdurate ratepayers of this town cannot see matters in the same light that he pretends to see them. Truly, Mr. Editor, it is singular that we in this enlightened age cannot perceive that it would be to our interest to give Fowler & Co. the monopoly of our carrying trade at his own exorbitant tariff rates—instead of encouraging competition. Must not our lumber-merchants be "behind the age" seeing that they have already encouraged a rival Railway, so as to get their lumber transported to the front at the rate of $1.07 per M. instead of having to pay $1.80 per M. and thereby only saving to themselves in one season in the aggregate the sum of $20,000; this ought to have gone into Fowler & Co's pockets—at least "a Ratepayer" would give us to understand so, and of course we take it that his disinterested views are correct. Then again, our grocers, dry goods and hardware merchants have been pamprious to such an extent as to get their goods delivered at their doors for 10 cents per 100 lbs. from the front and a moiety of civility in collecting their bills; while our own Railway—Ah! what a grand thing it is for us to have a Railway of our own—yes, our own Railway would only have charged 15 cents per 100 lbs. with "stand and deliver" this amount of freight therein before you got a chance of seeing the goods: but what of that, we ought to patronize by all means our "own railway."

It is to be hoped, Mr. Editor, that under such circumstances the ratepayers of our town will see the necessity of returning to our Council Board a Mayor and Councillors who will be careful not to thwart the views of such wholesale benifactors of our town's interests as Messrs. Fowler & Co. have proved themselves to be, otherwise we may fail to hail with delight that inestimable boon of having the two principal thorough fares of our town graced with railway crossings, not taking miner streets into consideration. Only think of such a calamity befalling us! On Monday, therefore, let every ratepayer bear this in mind and vote accordingly. Never mind the old adages that "opposition is the life"—that it is better to have "two strings to our bow"—that a Railway Co "never yet got power without abusing it." Go the Fowler ticket "blind" and all will be serene with a certain clique in our town who otherwise might be deprived of their railway passes, &c., to their no small annoyance.

With the compliments of the season.
I remain your obe't serv't,
QUIZ.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—As a ratepayer of the Town of Peterborough, I expected to see some expression of opinion, by either yourself or the Review, in your last issues, upon the contest for the Mayor's chair, now going on. We usually look to our press for an early expression of opinion upon the merits of the candidates for public offices, and expect to be guided in a measure by the opinions therein advanced. I am therefore at a loss—no opinion having been put forth by the press—how to choose between the rival candidates; and would be glad to have your opinion on the following matters, that in my opinion are necessary requisites for any man who aspires to the Mayor's chair of a growing and intelligent Town like Peterborough:

Should not the Mayor be a man of some influence in the community—a man in whom some portion of the ratepayers have confidence? Should he not be possessed of some tangible stake in Town? Is it advisable to place a man having no interest in the Town in a position that he may, having the casting vote, peril the interests of the Town for ever—at the same time knowing that no evil result can accrue to him? Is it advisable to place a man in a position to tax us, who has nothing upon which he can be taxed? What are the views of the respective candidates in regard to the extension of the railway? Mr. Scott, in a note dated the 20th instant, says that he did not promise to exert himself in favor of the railway. What did he promise, to induce Mr. Perry to retire? Will Mr. Scott or you tell the ratepayers how he (Mr. Scott) could prevent the legal proceedings, in regard to the By-law, taking their course? Is it not a fact that Mr. Scott, having no business of his own to attend to, would be glad to attend to the business of the Town, for a salary of $300 a year or thereabouts? Is it not a fact that Mr. Chambers has both means and business—besides a large stake in real estate—in the Town of Peterborough? Is it no recommendation that a man should live in a Town all his lifetime, acquire property in it, bring up his family respectably, and pay his debts? Have we not had enough recently of gentle man of good address, who stay long enough to get into the confidence of a few, whom they victimize, and then they move? As the Mayor, now being the thirteenth member of the Council, must naturally have to exercise the right of deciding questions by his casting vote, I think a great deal of care ought to be exercised in choosing a man of known reliability. And I would be glad, as I know many ratepayers will, if you would answer such of the above queries, in your next issue, as to you seems best.

I am, yours truly,
UBIM.

Peterboro', Dec. 23, 1865.

A Fenian Scare at Windsor.

A huge scare occurred at Windsor on Sunday evening last, which had the effect of testing the alacrity of the Hamilton and London volunteers, although the demonstration was a most ludicrous affair. It appears that some facetious person, while in a bacchanalian mood, discharged his revolver several times at the Hirons' Hotel, and this unusual recreation for the Sabbath naturally created some excitement, and the cry was raised, "the Fenians have come!" Great was the commotion that ensued. People were rushing to and fro panic stricken, expecting to witness every moment the onset of the bloody horde. The alarm speedily reached the barracks, and the whole volunteer force was quickly formed for action. The troops were marched up to the theatre of hostilities, or at least to the locality where the alarm first originated, and surrounded the hotel, prepared to shoot down the first Fenian cut-throat that attempted an egress. After besieging that place for a reasonable time, the scouts were finally advanced, but faded to see anything green, or to detect any appearance that would warrant the demonstration. The truth was apparent that an enormous sell had been perpetrated, and the corps of observation was withdrawn and returned quietly to barracks. The ungodly fellow responsible for the uproar, was flanked by a small detachment from the civil service, and conveyed to suitable quarters for exhaling the superabundant quantity of whiskey taken into his system. The next grist of letters from our gallant volunteers at the front, we may presume, will savor of warlike enthusiasm immensely.

A Great Source of Cholera.

The Rochester Union calls attention to the well known fact that the wheat crop of last season in that section of the west which finds its market at Chicago, was mostly spoiled by a wet harvest and says:—"This damp grain has been pouring into the Chicago storehouses all the fall and winter and now lies there by the millions of bushels awaiting shipment as soon as navigation shall open in the spring. The process of decomposition will be partially arrested by the weather of winter, but will be resumed in the spring and go on at a rapid rate wherever this grain may be, but the process will be hastened on shipboard. Now if this grain remains at Chicago that city will be decimated by cholera, and wherever that rotten grain goes the scourge will follow and fatten, sweeping away people who live within its foul influence. This wheat will be sent to all the ports of the lower lakes, turned into canal boats at Buffalo and Oswego, be brought to Rochester, carried eastward to Albany and New York, spreading death and devastation in its path. Of this there can be no doubt. Millers who have bought the Chicago wheat this fall are quite unanimous in saying that it shows a gone of decay, and some parcels are now actually so far gone in decomposition as to be unfit for use. They are likewise unanimous, we believe, in the opinion that none of this grain will be fit to manufacture into flour in the spring. This wheat was purchased and is now held at Chicago by speculators there and at the eastward, and is falling under the hoof.—They will rush the foul grain towards the eastern market as early as possible next season, to save what they can before it is wholly lost. But should the health and business of a hundred cities and towns—of the whole country, we may say, be sacrificed to the cupidity of these unprincipled and selfish men? The answer will be no, everywhere that this subject is understood."

THE FENIANS.

The New York Herald of Saturday comes to aid of the O'Mahony faction of the Fenian Brotherhood. It was a long article giving what it calls an "inside history" of the difficulty. It asserts that O'Mahony and Stephens are bo-om friends; that they "studied revolution together in Paris for five years"; that the I. R. B. is against the malcontents; that many of the "senators" are either demagogues or defaulters; that the Fenian possess two millions of money, and that the Senate Treasurer O'Rourke has a large portion of this money and refuses to give it up, having loaned a great deal of it to the Tribune association. It asserts further that President Johnson released John Mitchell because he desired to reorganize the Brotherhood; that the U. S. government will reorganize them the moment they begin fighting; that secretary Stanton is a "nob e Fenian" and wants to see them made "belligerents" at once; and it predicts that O'Mahony will be sustained and the "malcontent senators" made to surrender. The article is prepared in the usual Herald style and altogether is very amusing.—Not so in another item of Fenian news we have from the same city. On Saturday a man named Charles W. Newman, living in Jersey city, on the opposite side of the river, charged the members of a Fenian circle in that place with having committed a scandalous outrage upon him. He alleges that he was seized in the street on Friday night and dragged into a Fenian Lodge room, charged with being a British spy, put upon trial and subjected to various indignities. During a struggle which ensued he succeeded in making his escape.

About How it Stands.

The news as to the peaceful disposition and loyalty of the South, judging from the various accounts, is easily summed up. The poor whites, by the firing of their passions and appeals to their prejudices, were driven into the fight, and fought well. They have got enough of war; their dull eyes are opened, and with the exception of the outbreaks of their class hatred of the negro, are disposed to keep quiet. The military leaders of the rebellion, generally, accept their situation, confess themselves whipt, and want no more of conflict.

The skulkers and the women, as General Grant is said to have reported, and the barroom, office seeking and blustering politicians of the past, as every body knows, are mad and unsubdued and unreconciled still. To these bad tempered malcontents must be added not a few of the clergy, who are perfect fanatics in preaching wrath, playing the part of vituperating scolds, and cherishing the narrowest ideas and the most unchristian of passions. In their bigotry and spite, they still disgrace themselves by upholding a Gospel of rebellion in spirit.

The late slaves are, with numerous exceptions, just where we should expect them to be from their oppressed and defrauded condition heretofore. They are ignorant, wanting in habits of voluntary industry and deceived by expectations that freedom means support from their liberators; in a word they need to be taught, encouraged cared for, and treated justly, to make citizens and free laborers of them. This is the state of the case; and these are the elements, together with the business men, well disposed and anxious for quiet times which are to be reconciled and adjusted in any plan of restoration. Whatever plan that may be, the most efficient against is executing will be time and patience.—Boston Transcript.

QUEEN VICTORIA AND LOUIS NAPOLEON.—When Napoleon was living on the Elysee, it was not so very long back that Queen Victoria had said one evening at the opera to a Prince of her acquaintance, "Do you want to see the two biggest scoundrels in the world? Just look in that box." In the box to which the Queen called her cousin's attention was the expelled Duke of Brunswick and Louis Napoleon, who in those days were intimate friends. Napoleon III. certainly has no idea of the flattering title which Victoria once gave him. He does not know, either, that the Queen fell into a hysterical fit after he dared to kiss her cheek upon her reception at Cherbourg! The Queen could not get over this kiss from so detested a man for a long time. No one except, perhaps of the Duke of Modena, hates Napoleon so deeply as the Queen.—Exchange.

CURE FOR CHOLERA.—A correspondent of the Christian Guardian informs its readers that an effectual remedy for cholera, in its early stages, is "A wine glass full of sharp vinegar, with as much table salt as it will retain in solution, and an equal quantity of warm water, to be swallowed at once." He vouches for the prompt efficacy of this remedy. Our readers may as well cut out or copy this receipt, as ere many months elapse opportunity for testing its merits may be afforded.

Photography is applied to topography in France with wonderful success. A plan of a city over twelve miles square was made in sixty days by the aid of photography, while it would have taken two years to execute it by triangulation.

What chapel is that which has a church in it? Whitechapel.

The Illinois Central Railway Company, south of Chicago, are building eleven miles of Corn Cribs, the capacity of which will be three millions of Bushels; they are erecting these cribs to receive corn in payment for lands purchased of the Company, and the full Chicago price is to be paid the farmers. Corn is the great agricultural staple of that country, and the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is the best remedy in any country where a disordered condition of the stomach, liver and bowels, is combined with great debility, nervous weakness and intense melancholy, its effects are most beneficial and wonderful, price 25 cts per bottle. There are not, at the present time, twelve different kinds of medicines that can be claimed as original discoveries, or that indicate a special curative power over disease, in the world. Of all the popular remedies in the United States, not six can claim originality. Radway's Ready Relief was the first remedy that was ever known to the world under the assurance that it would stop the most violent pains in a few moments, and that its controlling influence over pain was superior to Chloroform, Morphine, Opium, Hyoscianus, Colchicum, and other officinal preparations; that it accomplished its cures without deadening the perceptive faculties, or lulling the patient to insensibility; that the patient suffering pain was instantly relieved of pain, without disturbing the general health or faculties. This discovery was original. The history of medicine furnishes no such remedy—yet, after its success was proven, imitators set to work, and the country was flooded with a legion of imitations: some were called pain killers, instant relief, speedy relief, &c., all of which are mere imitations of Radway's Ready Relief. If the public desire a positive remedy that will stop pain immediately after it is used, purchase Radway's Ready Relief. Price 25 cents per bottle. Sold by Druggists.

CARELESSNESS

Many persons neglect their horses' health and condition until it is too late, when at a trifling expense and no trouble the horse might have been saved if attended to in time. To all who may have occasion to use an article of the kind we would confidently recommend "Darley's Arabian Heave, Remedy and Condition Medicine, it is without doubt the best preparation in use, as thousands who have used it testify.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY
IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.
Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

New Map

OF

Peterborough and Ashburnham,

THE undersigned begs to announce that their New Map of the Town of Peterboro' and of the Village of Ashburnham, is now complete and ready for publication.

This Map has been compiled with great care from the original registered plans and surveys and its entire accuracy secured not only by those means, but by actual survey and careful admeasurement in the two corporations named, not only is every Lot given and its subdivisions where divided, but the names of the owners, as contained in the last Assessment Roll, are neatly printed on each lot. All public buildings, manufactories, stores, and private residences, together with the existing and proposed railways, streets, mill-races, water-courses dams, bridges, &c, are laid down from actual measurement. The built-up portion of the town is so colored as to distinguish at a glance the materials used, whether of wood, stone or brick, while the whole is finished in a superior manner, so as to be both useful and ornamental, in securing which neither pains nor expense have been spared.

During the ensuing week, the undersigned will be prepared to receive the names of intending subscribers, at their office, Scott's Buildings. Early application is desired, as but a limited number of copies will be published.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

21st Vol. of the Montreal Witness

FOR 1866.

TWENTY EVENTFUL YEARS have run their course since the Montreal Witness first saw the light, and though they have been full of changes there has been no change in the reason for commencing it, namely, the great importance to society of a wholesome family newspaper.

Is a Mother's Magazine desirable in a family? The Witness has had as much matter every year of the kind inserted in Mother's Magazines as any monthly publication under that name.

Is a Children's Magazine of Sunday School Paper desirable? The Witness has had more of the class of reading suitable for these publications than any of them.

Is an Agricultural Paper of great benefit to the country? The Witness has had as much on that subject monthly as would fill a good-sized agricultural journal.

Is a Temperance Paper of great importance in families and the country? The Witness has had more on that subject than any ordinary monthly temperance paper.

Is a Commercial Paper wanted by men of business and farmers? The Witness has fully as much commercial matter as any exclusively commercial paper.

Is a Literary Paper wanted? The Witness has had a good proportion of Poetry, Tales, Reviews, and other literary matter.

Should a witness for truth, and against error, injustice and vice be sustained? The Witness has done its best in all these respects.

Is a newspaper essential to an intelligent family? The Witness has given more news than most papers in Canada.

A brief calculation will show the economy of procuring all these papers together instead of separately. The cost, if taken in the latter way, would, instead of the price of the Witness, be almost as follows:—

Mother's Magazine,	$1 00
Children's Paper	25
Agricultural Paper	1 00
Temperance Paper	50
Commercial Paper	1 00
Literary Paper	2 00
Weekly Newspaper	1 00
	6 75

This shows a very great difference in first cost to the saving in postage.

We would not be understood, however, to mean that any one should be satisfied with the Witness only. On the contrary, we think it is a wise economy to subscribe for various useful periodicals. There is, probably, no way by which a small sum of money yields so large a return of pleasure and profit. Our only object is to show how economical it is to subscribe for this paper.

There is another view of this matter which is not a small reward for our twenty years' labour. During that time a very large number of families have been brought up with the Witness as their family paper. Parents and children have perused it regularly, and in it found the best selections we could make from the best writers of the world. All know the power of a family paper to modify the views, opinions, and conduct of those to whom it obtains access, and if this one has aided in the bringing up of some thousands of families on principles of religion, temperance, integrity, and intelligent enterprise, what finite arithmetic can reckon up the gain!

The Witness reaches now in all its editions some seven thousand subscribers all over the country, besides an average circulation of some four thousand in the city of Montreal; and for this extensive circulation we are exceedingly thankful, but it is a matter of deep regret that the proportion of the people reached is yet so small.

There are probably about six thousand Protestant families in Montreal of which we reach about two-thirds; but there are about 300,000 Protestant families in the rest of Canada, of which we only reach 7,000, or less than a fortieth part. There is surely room here for a very large extension of all our editions.

The Daily Witness is by far the best of our editions for business men, having more reading matter and a great many more advertisements than any other edition. It has also full market reports daily. The subscription is $3.00 per annum.

The Montreal Witness (semi-weekly) contains nearly all the reading matter of the Daily, together with semi-weekly market reports and prices current. Subscription $2.00 per annum.

The Weekly Witness contains all the matter of permanent interest of the Semi-weekly, with weekly summary of news and market reports. Subscription $1.00 per annum.

The Canadian Messenger, published twice a month, contains the Temperance, Agricultural, Scientific, and Educational matter of the Witness, but without news, markets, or advertisements, as it goes post free. Subscription 25 cents per annum.

All these rates are payable invariably in advance, and the paper stops when the term subscribed for expires.

It should not be very difficult to get some one of these editions into almost every family if a friend of that family would only suggest the matter to them.

The price is so low that we cannot afford commissions, and indeed we have always received the greatest aid, in the way of obtaining subscribers, from parties who had no object in view but disinterested patriotism and benevolence. To all such, and may their number greatly increase, we hereby render hearty thanks for past favors, and ask them to continue their good offices.

The Witness is now dressed in a new suit of types, and no effort will be spared to keep it in the very front rank of Canadian journalism.

Advertisements not at variance with the character of the Witness will be inserted for one cent per word for one insertion and a half cent per word for each subsequent insertion, no advertisement being reckoned as less than 25 words.

Poetry.

THE DYING YEAR.

The wintry winds are sighing
With a mournful voice and low,
That the Old Year, lowly lying,
On his downy bed of snow,
Is calmly, slowly dying,
And soon, oh! soon must go!

The melancholy breezes,
With their wailing notes of woe,
With the melody that pleases,
By the mouth's gentle flow,
Are sad—th ir sadness raises
On the soul's still depths below.

We mourn that he is leaving,
The friend we've loved so long;
And now, while sadly weaving
This quaint and dirge-like song,
Our hearts feel most like grieving,
That we have done him wrong.

The blessing he hath brought us
Our affections firmly bind,
And the lessons he hath taught us
Now quickly throng the mind;
Oh! that we had bethought us
To keep them there so brimed!

The precious moments wasted,
And passed unheeded by,
Oh! that we e'er had hasted
To improve them ere they fly!
For their treasured good, untasted,
We must ever vainly sigh.

Farewell! for thou art going,
Thou fond departing year;
With grief our hearts o'erflowing,
We drop a silent tear;
On Memory's tablet glowing,
Thy kindnesses appear.

Trouble, like capital, is usually two-thirds borrowed.

People behind the times should be fed on ketch-up.

A school-master struck "ile" the other day, but it was only "juven-ile."

If thou hast a loitering servant, send him on an errand just before his dinner.

"There's a brandy smash," said a wag, on seeing a drunken man fall through a window.

AN IRISH NOTE.—Whereas, Patrick O'Cannay lately left his lodging; this is to give notice that if he does not return immediately and pay for the same, he will be advertised.

A chap out west recently got the mitten. He must have felt very bad. Hear him: 'Far well, dear child! farewell! I ne'er shall love another; in peace and comfort you may dwell, and I'll go home to mother.'

'I really can't sing, believe me, sir,' was the reply of a young lady to the repeated request of an empty fop. 'I am rather inclined to believe, madam,' he said with a smirk, 'that you are fishing for compliments.' 'No, sir,' exclaimed the lady, 'I never fish in so shallow a stream."

A gentleman recently travelling in the oil region, saw a child in the road stumbling and falling. He kindly picked her up and said, 'Poor dear! are you hurt?' When the child cried out, 'I ain't; for our dad struck a 'ile' well yesterday.'

A Superintendent of Police once made an entry in his register, from which the following is an extract: "The prisoners set upon me, called me an ass, a precious doll, a scare-crow, a ragamuffin, and an idiot—all of which I certify to be true.

Johnson says that he was one of a fishing party, near Newport; and every time that a shark was pulled in, a lawyer who was in the boat was thrown into convulsions. Whether this was from sympathy or not Johnson can't say.

Mr. Sergeant Gardener, being lame of one leg, pleading before the late Judge Fortescue, who had little or no nose, the Judge told him he was afraid he had but a lame cause of it. 'Oh, my Lord,' said the Sergeant, 'have but a little patience, and I'll prove everything as plain to you as the nose on your face.'

HOW TO JUDGE OF PEOPLE.—Judge a man by his actions; a poet by his eye; a knave by his leer; a player by his strut; an Irishman by his swagger; and Englishman by his rotundity; a Scothman by his shrug; a Justice by his frown; a great man by his modesty; a tailor by his agility; and a woman by her neatness.

During a visit of the French Empress to the Paris hospitals, one of the sick, whose sight was, perhaps, dimmed by his condition, replied to a question of the Empress,—'Yes, my sister.' 'My friend,' said the sister, 'it is not I who spoke to you; it is the Empress.' 'Do not take back the word,' said the Empress quickly, 'it is the finest name that could be given me."

A SQUARE MEAL.—One of the Wisconsin boys, at the reception of the fifth regiment of the State, said, 'This is the first square meal I've had since I left home.' Being asked what a square meal was, he replied, 'four cups of coffee, all the ham I can eat with bread, butter, pies, pickles, cakes, and cheese in proportion, with ladies smiling to inspire the appetite.'

HAD HIM THERE.—A clerk in a mercantile establishment relates a colloquy from which a sprightly youth in the same store came out second best. A poor boy came along with his machine. 'Any knives or scissors to grind?' 'Don't think we have,' replied the young gentleman facticiously; 'but can't you sharpen wits?' 'Yes, if you have any,' was the prompt response, leaving the interrogator rather at a loss to know how to produce the article.

NOT FALLING IN LOVE.—If you want a son not to fall in love with any splendiferous gal, praise her up to the skies, call her an angel, say she is a whole team and a horse to spare, and all that. The moment the critter sees her he is a grain din appointed, and says, 'Well, she's handsome, that's a fact; but she is not so very, very everlastin', after all.' Nothing damages a gal, a preacher, or a lake, like over-praise.

A BIG THROW.—A story is just now circulating through the German newspapers which illustrates the continental idea of an English Peer. Lord S— is, we are told, an amateur boxer, who prides himself upon his strength and dexterity in pugilism. One day while dining with the great banker B—, Lord S— heard some stories of the prowess of a farm laborer on the estate, and at once made a note of the name and address. Next morning his lordship mounted his horse and rode off to look for the celebrated athlete. He found him digging in his garden. 'My good fellow,' said the Peer, dismounting and pulling off his gloves, 'I have heard a good deal of your strength and skill; let us have a fight.' The laborer looked at his visitor for a moment without speaking, and then suddenly grappling with him, he flung him over the hedge. 'I say, my good man,' cried Lord S—, as soon as he had recovered his senses 'will you do me a favor?' 'What! haven't you had enough yet?' 'Oh, yes, as far as I am personally concerned, but please throw my horse over, too.'

1866. PROSPECTUS 1866.
OF
The Globe Newspaper.

THE publisher of The Globe has to announce that very great improvements in the publication of this journal will be made in the coming year. A new font of beautiful type, cast specially for The Globe, has been imported from the celebrated Scottish Foundry of Millar and Richard, Edinburgh. The quality of the paper used in printing the journal will be much superior to that heretofore employed. Arrangements are now being made for increased Telegraphic facilities; and the corps of Writers, Reporters and correspondents, will be strengthened—increased effort will be put forth in every department to render The Globe more worthy than ever before of the immense circulation it has for so many years enjoyed throughout British America.

The year 1866 is likely to be a most eventful period in the history of Canada—a year in which the current events of the day will be of the deepest interest to every inhabitant of the country.

The new Parliamentary Buildings will, early in the coming spring, be opened for the first time at Ottawa.

The Government is pledged to present to Parliament, at the opening of the session, either a Bill for completing the Confederation of all British America, or a Bill establishing a new Federal constitution for Canada alone, based on the principle of Representation by Population in the popular branch.

On the 17th of March, 1866, the American Treaty of Reciprocity will come to an end; and the negotiations for its renewal, or preparations to meet the change, will be watched with much interest.

Arrangements for acquiring possession of, and opening the North-West territory for settlement, will be speedily made, and to these The Globe will devote special attention, as it has has hitherto done to everything connected with the subject.

With the settlement of the constitutional question that has so long distracted the Province, numerous questions affecting the material progress of this country will be thrown open for consideration. Among these will be—

The subject of Banking and Currency.
Enlarging the Canals, and otherwise improving the Internal Navigation of the country.
Reduction of the Customs' Tariff.
Interest on Money.
Opening up new Territory to settlement.
Free land grants to actual settlers.
A Homestead Law.

And many other vitally important subjects

In the discussion and settlement of all these matters, The Globe will, as heretofore, take an active part; and from the sources of information at the command of its conductors, it is not doubted that in its columns the earliest intelligence and the most reliable information will continue to be found.

THE DAILY GLOBE

will continue to be mailed from the office at $6 per annum, payable invariably in advance; but can be procured regularly from the news-dealers in all the cities and towns throughout the Province.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE

will also be much improved in the year 1866. The paper will be of superior quality, and the new Scottish type will give it a greatly improved appearance. An editor has been engaged, whose special duty it will be to condense and arrange the matter for this edition, and to select intelligence specially adapted for country readers. A portion of each week's paper will be devoted to the publication of some interesting tale; and the markets and prices current will continue to be given with promptness and accuracy.

The Weekly Globe will continue to be published at TWO DOLLARS per annum, payable strictly in advance. Some exceptions to the rule of advance payment have been heretofore made—but from the 1st of January, 1866, no paper will be sent from the office without prepayment.

CLUB RATES.

During 1866 we will send:—

Six copies one year for	$10 00
Ten " "	15 00
Fifteen " "	22 50

and an extra copy of the Weekly to the person who gets up the club of fifteen.

Twenty-five copies one year for	35 00

and a copy of the Weekly Globe to the person who gets up the club of twenty-five.

Fifty copies one year for	65 00

and a copy of the Daily Globe one year to the person who gets up the club of fifty.

Eighty copies one year for	100 00

and a copy of the Daily.

Payment must be always in advance.

Each paper is addressed separately.

All the papers included in any club must be mailed to one Post-office.

When additional names are added to any club during the year, they must be sent to the Globe Office by the person who made up the Club; and the money sent with such additional names must be such a proportion of the year's subscription at the Club rate as will pay up to the expiration of the Club.

No exception will be made to these rules on any ground whatever.

AMERICAN
Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering
SEWING MACHINE!
COMPANY,
627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produce a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c., &c., it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c., &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where Instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON-HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the stringsare attached to a strong Iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old barp form of stringing, by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over String Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Barili,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry,	Charles Fradel

Mr. SIGISMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly-invented Piano-Fortes They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal verisimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr. S. B. DRIGGS, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in points of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

SEWING MACHINES!

FINKLE & LYON'S
NEW PATENT ROTARY FEED
Sewing Machines.

The following facts demonstrate that these Machines comprise the highest improvements in the Sewing Machine Art, viz:

1. Each Machine is guaranteed to give better satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in Market, or money refunded.
2. They have taken many of the highest premiums at the most important Exhibitions and fairs ever held in the United States
3. They make the lock stitch alike on both sides—thus saving more than half the thread and silk used in the raveling-ridge-seams of the loop stitch and single-thread Sewing Machines.
4. They are adapted to the widest range of heavy and light sewing.
5. They have no rattling wires, or delicate attachments to keep in repair.
6. They require no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "Lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate Machine.

Please call and examine, and demonstrate for yourself, or send for Circular, with samples of sewing.

New Map
OF
Peterborough and Ashburnham.
THE nonor-signed beg to announce that their New Map of the Town of Peterborough and of the Village of Ashburnham, is now complete and ready for publication.
This Map has been compiled with great care from the original registered plans and surveys, and its entire accuracy secured not only by those means, but by actual survey and careful admeasurement in the two corporations named, not only in every lot giving and its antecedent sphere divided, but the names of the owners, as contained in the last Assessment Roll, are neatly printed on each lot. All public buildings, manufactories stores, and private residence, together with the existing and proposed railways, streets, millraces, water-courses dams, bridges, &c, are laid down from actual measurement. The built-up portion of the town is so colored as to distinguish at a glance the materials used, whether of wood, stone or brick; while the whole is finished in a superior manner, so as to be both useful and ornamental, in securing which neither pains nor expense have been spared
During the ensuing week, the undersigned will be prepared to receive the names of intending subscribers, at their office, Scott's Buildings Early application is desired, as but a limited number of copies will be published.

LITERATURE, FINE ARTS, & FASHIONS
The most magnificent Steel engravings—Double Fashion Plates—Wood engravings on every subject that can interest ladies. Crochet Knitting, Netting, Embroidery, &c &c. Rules for the Toilet, for the Nursery, for the Boudoir, and the Kitchen. Everything, in fact, to make a complete Lady's Book.
THE LADIES' FAVORIT FOR 36 YEARS.
No Magazine has been able to compete with it. None attempt it.
GODEY'S RECEIPTS
for every department of a household. There are alone worth the price of the book.
MODEL COTTAGES, (no other Magazine gives them), with diagrams.
DRAWING LESSONS for the Young.—An other specialty with Godey.
ORIGINAL MUSIC, worth $3 a year. Other Magazines publishes old worn-out music; but the subscribers to Godey get it before the music stores.
GARDENING FOR LADIES.—Another peculiarity with Godey.
Fashions from Messrs. A. T. Stewart & Co., of New York, the millionaire merchants, appear in Godey, the only Magazine that has been Ladies' business. We give more of them in a year than any other Magazine. In fact, the Lady's Book embodies every body to be her own bonnet maker.
MARION HARLAND,
Buisonness of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemissa," and "Miriam,"
is in her new series for Godey each month, and for no other magazine. A new novel by her will be published in 1866. We have also retained all our old and favorite contributors.

Be Kind to Each Other.

Be kind to each other,
The night's coming on,
When friends and when brother
Perchance may be gone;
Then midst our dejection,
How sweet to have earned
The blest recollection
Of kindness returned.

When days hath departed,
And memory keeps
Her watch broken-hearted,
Where all the loved sleep,
Let Falsehood assail not,
Nor envy disprove,
Let trifles prevail not
Against those you love.

Now change with to-morrow;
Should fortune take wing—
The deeper the sorrow,
The closer they cling.
Be kind to each other,
The night's coming on,
When friends and when brother
Perchance may be gone.

Literature.

The Fit of Ailsie's Shoe.

On a certain mellow August afternoon an old woman was travelling along the wegirt road between Portrush and Dunlace. She wore a long grey cloak and scarlet neckerchief thrown over her white cap. Her face was unusually sallow and w inkled with small, shrewd, furtive eyes. She carried a stick, and halted now and then from fatigue.

She plodded up a green hedged lonan, and emerged from it on a causeway of round stones bedded in clay. Here stood Jamie's a white cottage smothered in fuschia trees

'God save all here!' said the visitor pushing in her head at the door. 'An' is this Jamie MacQuillan's?'

'As sure as my name is Jamie,' said the weakly man, taking off his spectacles.—'Take a seat, ma'am, you'd be a thraveller maybe, comin' home from the fair.

The old woman had dropped into a chair, panting with fatigue.

'It's no shame for ye,' she gasped, 't-at ayesh'n' know me, seein' that ye never set eyes on me before; but I'm one of the M'Cumbridges, from beyont Lough Neagh, an I've walked every foot o' the road to see you an' yours.'

'Why, you don't mane to say that?' cried Jamie, his pale face lighting up. 'You don't mane to say you're Sam M'Cambridge's sister Penny, own cousin to my father's second wife, that was to have stood for our Ailse at her chri tenin' only she took a pain in her heel and couldn't stir from home? Faix an' I might have knowed you by the fine hook o' your nose, always the sign o' the rare cold blood.—Th'oth that same blood's thicker nor wa ther. Mary Machree, it's Penny M'Cambridge, from Lough Neagh side!'

A great hand-shaking followed this speech and then the visitor began to inquire for Ailsie, her god daughter that was to have been, only for the unfortunate pain in the heel.

Wait a bit, wait a bit,' said the father, she'll be in from the fair by an' by, an then if ye don't get her the degree for han'some est girl and the best manager that ever stepped about a house, I'll give ye lave to go back to Lough Neagh an' spend the rest o' your days sarchin for her equals.'

'Wisht Jamie,' and the mother 'self praise is no praise, no more is praise o' her an flesh an' blood. All the same, I wish Ailsie was in to make cousin Penny the cup o' tay after her thravels. She was to bring a grane of the best green from Mather M'Shane's in Portrush, as well as all the news from Castle Craigie an' of the doings o' old Lady Betty MacQuillan, more power to her!'

'Is that the ould lady that's come home from Ingia?' asked she who was called Penny M'Cambridge.

'Ay, ay,' said the wife of Jamie, eagerly. 'I've passed through Portrush, an' ye'll maybe have the forenay of Ailsie with the news. What are they saying in he town?'

'Well, ye see,' said Penny, 'bein' a stranger and spokin' to few, I heard but little But they do say that her husband was the last of the MacQuillans of Castle Craigie, an' that as she has never a child of her own, all the MacQuillans by the family are claimin' kin with her, an' fightin' among themselves about which'll be her iron.'

'An' is that all ye know, Penny dear?' said Mary. 'Why, I have more nor that myself, sure she's written round an' round to every MacQuillan o' them all, bidden them to a grand house warmin' on Wednesday come eight days, when she'll settle it all, an' name who's to come after her. An' though she's in London now, she'll be at Castle Craigie afore then to receive them. An' such a reasin's as that'll be! Such fixin' and furnishin' as there is at the ould castle. They say there never was the aiken o' it since the day Sir Archie MacQuillan brought home his fairy bride, an' then it wasn't painters an' brickayers, but the good people themselves that laid hand on the rooms.'

'She must be a queer sort of a body,' said Penny. 'But I hope, Jamie, that you as honest a man, an' as good a MacQuillan as ever a man among them, I hope you haven't been shy of sendin' in your claim.

'There's richer nor us and there's poorer, but we're not so mane yet as to go crawin' for what we're not likely to get It's not to MacQuillans' like us that Lady Betty has sent her invite.'

All the three pair of eyes were now turned to the doorway, whose sunny space was obscured for a moment by as pretty a figure as any lover of fresh and pleasant sights could wish to see. This was a rapelaced, dark haired country girl, with her coa se straw bonnet tipped over her forehead to save her eyes from the sun, and her neat print gown tucked tidily up over her white petticoat.

'Come in, Ailsie!' cried Jamie, 'come in an' see your cousin, Penny M'Cambridge, from Lough Neagh side, that was to have been your godmother, an' has come every fut o' the road from that to thin to see what sort o' lass you're turned out.'

'An' now you'll tell us the news, Ailsie,' said Mary, the mother. 'What's doin' an' sayin' in Portrush about Lady Betty?'

'Oh, troth, mother!' said Ailsie, tossing her head, 'troth I'm sick, sore and tired, hearin' o' the quare old house she's pulled down on her back, poor body! Sich gregin' an' comparing, you never heard since the day you were born. The friens o' wan MacQuillan and the frien's o' wan her at it hard and fast for who'll have the best chance of goin' in for the old lady's favor. An' sich preparations! Mrs. Quinn, the housekeeper, took me all through the castle to see the new grandeur; and sich curtains and pictures, and marble images, an' sich looking glasses! feth when I went to the dhrawin room door, I thought I'd gone crazy for half a dozen other Ailsies started up in the corners an' all over the walls, an' come to meet me with their baskets on their arms. 'It's an ill welcome for all this said I, 'an if they hadn't put her and peath red her to it, she would never be for doin' the quare thing she's goin' to do on Wednesday week night.' An' what do you think she is goin' to do, father?' said Ailsie, turning to Jamie, 'but she's to have a big cake made, an' a ring in it, and every MacQuillan at the feast gets a piece of the cake, an' whoever finds the ring, as sure as he's there, he's the wan to share Lady Betty's fortune an' come after her in Castle Craigie!

Here Mary the mother began to groan and rock herself, and complain of the obstinacy of people who would not stretch out their hands for a piece of that lucky cake, even if it might be luners for the asking. Jamie was getting very red in the face, and crumpling his paper very fiercely, when Penny, who had been laughing, wiped her eyes, and taking her stick from the corner, shook hands with her kingsfolk, and trotted away down the lonan as she had come.

It was only a few evenings after that the Ailsie was sitting on the end of the kitchen table, reading the news-paper to her father.

'Na, na,' said Ailsie, stumbling at a word, 'ri—si ga—ga—Och my blessin' to the word, I can't make head or tail o't. Ye'll read it better yers I', father; and its time I was going feedin my hens any how!'

'Ailsie,' said Jamie, rubbing his spectacles, 'I'm feared your turnin' out a bad clark after all the throuble Mister Dervish as taken on you. Ye'r getting a big woman, Ailsie, an' there's not a thing yer bad at but the clarkin'. Go off to school now this very evenin' an' give my respects to Hughie Dervish, and tell him to tache you how to spell navigation before you come back.'

Ailsie colored and her thin black locks rested on her russet cheeks while she tucked up her gown and kneadle the wet meal for the hens with her gipsy hands. But as she left the house she looked back with a wicked little toss of her head.

'Then you an' Hughie Dervish may out it out o' yer heads that ye'll ever make a clark o' Ailsie,' she said; 'for if ye were to make a stew of all he larnt books that ever cracked a schoolmaster's skull, and fed her on nothin' but that for the next ten years, ye wouldn't have her wan bit the farther in the under end!'

So saying she stepped out into the sun, and was busy feeding her hens under the shelter of the golden hayrick, when she saw a servant in a showy livery coming up the lonan.

Can you tell me where Miss MacQuillan lives about here, my good girl?' he asked with a supercilious glance at Ailsie's wooden dish.

'No,' said Ailsie, looking at him with her head thrown back.' That's Jamie MacQuillan's house,' pointing to the gable. 'an' I'm his daughter Ailsie. but there's no Miss Macquillan here; ones nearer by the road nor Bally Seuffing'

'I beg your pardon, Miss,' said the man with an altered manner, 'but I believe this belongs to you.' And then he rode off, leaving her standing, staring at a dainty pink note, which she held by one corner between two nearly fingers. 'Miss Ailsie MacQuillan,' said the ink on the back of the narrow gown and envelope.

'That's me!' said Ailsie, with a gasp. 'The rest o' them's all Lizabeths, an' Isabellas, an' Aramintys. An', as true as I'm a livin' girl, its the Castle Craigie liveries you fine fellow was dressed up so grand in, and here is the Castle Craigie crest on this pinty little seal.'

It was a note of invitation to Lady Betty's ball, and, in spite of her 'clarkin',' Ailsie was able to read it, spelling it out, word after word, turning it back and forward and upside down, and feeling sure all the time that somebody had played a trick on her by writing to Lady Betty in her name. She sat on a stone and made her reflections, with the sun all the while blowing her cheeks and in long them more and more unfit to appear in a ball-room.

'Ah! she thinks I'm some fine young lady in a low neck an' satin shoes, waitin' all ready to step into her ball-room an' make her courtsay. Good luck to her! What'd she say if she heard Ailsie's brogues tamin'em on you fine shiny floor o' hers?' And Ailsie, as she spoke, extended one little rough-shod foot, and took d at it crabbedly. 'Then thank you, Lady Betty, but I'm not goin to make myself a laughing stock for the country yet!'

'Who came ridin' up the lonan a bit ago Ailsie?' said the mother, when she went in with the note safely hidden in her pocket.

'Ridin' up the lonan is it?' said Ailsie.

'Ay, ay,' said Mary, 'I thought I heard a horse's fut on the road, but it mat, be have been yer father comin'.'

'Me sooch!' cried Jamie, starting and rubbing his eyes. 'Ye'r dhramin' yerself mary. Ailsie, ye witch, are ye not gone to school yet?'

'Well, I'll go now father,' said Ailsie. 'May be,' she thought, 'Hughie'll tell me what to do with that letter afore I come back.'

'What's your word, Ailsie MacQuillan?' asked the schoolmaster taking her book with a severe and business-like air, as she entered the school-room.

'Invitation, sir—navigation, I mane,' said Ailsie, demurely, studying her folded hands.

The master looked at her sharply, and afterwards frowned severely, when on going the rounds of the desks he found 'Lady Betty MacQuillan,' 'Castle Craigie,' and other foolish and meaningless words scrawled profanely over the page which was to have been sacred to navigation alone. Ailsie was kept in, for bad conduct, and locked up alone in the school after the other pupils had gon home. And there, when the schoolmaster came to release her, she was found plucking the roses that hung in at the window, and sticking them in the holes for the ink bottles along the desks. A crumbled note lay open before her.

We should hardly have said the schoolmaster came in, for, though it was Hughie Dervish, he appeared in a new character. This punished girl was his wildest and least creditable pupil, and yet, when he walked up to her in her disgrace, he was trembling and blushing like his own youngest sister coming up for a whipping. He eye caught the crum-led note, and he picked it up and read it.

'I guessed how 'twas' he said,' but you are surely not thinking of going.'

Now Ailsie had intended to ask his advice, but the mischief that was in her would come out.

'Why should I not go as well as another?' she asked pettishly.

'Arroon, you know I would not like it,' he said.

'An' that's a reason, feth?' said Ailsie, tossing her head, and beginning to pick a rose to pieces.

'Ailsie,' said the young man, vehemently, 'It was only the other day you told me here that you could like me better than all the world, better that Ned Mark eben, for all his fine land and his presents o' butter and cream; better than Melduffy, the miller, that gave you that fine speckled hen; better than MacQuillan o' the Reek —'

'Bad manners to him!' struck in Ailsie angrily flinging a shower of rose leaves from her hand over the desks.

'You promised to be my wife, Ailsie.'

'It all come of keeping me in for bad conduct,' said Ailsie, swinging one foot with provoking unconcern.

'No matter what it came of,' said Hughie, 'you promised me. And you promised me as well that you wouldn't go thrustin' yourself among these people that would only laugh at you for your pains.'

'I dont know why should you think I'd be laughed at,' said Ailsie, 'barrin' you're ashamed o' me!'

The schoolmaster's face blazed up and with all his heart in his eyes he gazed at her where she sat with her rose face turned from the sun coming through the lattice, and her dark head framed in the roses.

'Ashamed of you, mavourneen!' he said, tenderly. 'No; but there is not be some there that I wouldn't like you to come across, an' you alone an' unprotected. MacQuillan o' the Reek —'

'I slapped his face wasn't!' cried Ailsie, flying up again, an' it is not likely he'll come near me to do't again.'

'And there'll be others there,' he went on, 'that'll fall in love with you, may be, and snatch you up from Hughie before he has enough earned to marry out o' hand.

'An' want if they did?' said Ailsie, with wicked coolness.

'What if they did?' repeated Dervish, slowly looking at her with a pained, appealing look, as if expecting her to retract the cruel words. 'I tell you what it is, Ailsie,' he broke out passionately, drawing his left hand from its concealment. 'I believed it's this that' workin at the bottom o' all your coldness. You're tired already of a deformed lover. Go to Lady Betty's ball, then, an' find a husband for yourself that you'll not be ashamed of. Go!'

Just as Ailsie was getting pale and the tears coming into her eyes a little door opened, and the Widow Dervish came in to the school room and called Hughie to supper.

On the scentful night Ailsie was dressed out in a yellow silk skirt and cherry colored bodice, with a fine pair of stockings of Mary's own knitting, with magnificent clocks on the sides. Ned Muckleisern, of the Windy Gap, was to take her to Castle Craigie in his new spring cart.

At her command he set her down at a little distance from the entrance gates, out and in of which the carriages were rolling at such a rate as made poor Ailsie's heart thump against her sides till it was like to burst through Pat the weaver's tabinet.

She arrived at the hall door just in time to see a flock of young ladies in white robes float gracefully over the threshold, and the absurdity of her own costume came before her in its terrible reality covered with confusion she looked about to see if she could escape among the trees, and hide there till morning, but one of the grand servants had espied her, and under his eyes, Ailsie seemed to beat a retreat.

'What is your business here, young woman?' asked this awful person, as she stepped into the glare of the hall lights.

'I am one of Lady Betty's guests,' said Ailsie, lifting her head. But a horrible tittering greeted this announcement from a crowd of other servants, who were all eyeing her curiously from head to foot.

A servant at length conducted Ailsie to the ball-room. He opened the door wide, and Ailsie felt herself swallowed up in a blaze of light and color. With a hum in her ears of a thousand bees all buzzing round her head at once. When she recovered from her first stun-ned sen-sation, and regained consciousness of her own identity, she found herself seated side by side with the five Miss MacQuillans from Bally Seuffing all dressed in their grass colored satin, all with their noses redder than ever, all eyeing her askance from her comb to her brogues, and tittering just as the servants had done in the hall.

A band was playing and a crowd of people were dancing, but it seemed to Ailsie whenever she looked up, that nobody had got anything to do but to gare at her.—When she saw the elegant figures of the dancers she was afraid to stir lest the 'hem morin', of her foot should be heard all over the room; and when MacQuillan of the Reek came up to her, and, making a low bow, begged the honor of dancing with her, Ailsie's ears began to sing with confusion, and her teeth to chatter with fright. But as she did not know how to refuse, she got up and accompanied him to where there was an empty space on the floor. The band was playing a lively tune as a quadrille, and Ailsie thinking anything better than standing still, fell to dancing her familiar jig with energy. She had once stopped this gentleman's face for his impertinence, and she believed that he had now led her out to avenge himself by her confusion.—So Ailsie danced her jig, and finding that the clatter of her brogues was drowned by the music, she gained courage and danced it with great round and round her astonished partner, till the lookers on cried 'Bravo' and the laugh was turned against MacQuillan of the Reek, who was after all, very glad when she made him her courtesy, and allowed him to take her back again to the Bally Seuffing maidens, who had not been dancing at all, and who held up their five fans before their five faces in disgust at Ailsie's performance.

PRESERVING PORK.

The season is at hand when many persons will be called on to salt their pork, and some of them will be at a loss as to how to do it. An article is going through the papers, suggesting that the right way is to 'put 25 lbs of salt to the barrel; then make a brine and put on cold. After it has become pickled through, scald, skim the brine and turn it on hot, as it has settled, and scald as often as it is bloody.'

There it is, verbatim et literatim just as clear as mud, and enough to distract any one who has a barrel of pork at stake.

Nothing is more simple than to salt a barrel of pork so that it will keep forever.

In the first place, have a good tog, dress him in a cool time, and let him hang until the whole carcass is cooled throughout. Cut out the fat pork neatly, taking away every piece that is bloody, or wash out the blood clean with cold water. The strips should be three or four inches wide. Lay them in a cool place, each piece by itself, for 24 hours then sprinkle the bottom of a perfectly sweet barrel, half an inch thick, with what is called "coarse fine" salt, and on that lay the strips of pork, with the skin next the barrel, and so continue until the barrel is nearly full; cover the top with salt, and then lay a clean at ip of board over it, and on that a stone sufficiently heavy to keep the whole from rising. Let it stand twelve hours, and then fill the barrel with cl an, cold water.

We have practised this method for twenty years and have not yet lost a pound of pork. It is "as sweet as a nut," and gives an excellent relish to many kinds of food in cooking that nothing else will.

If lean pieces are desired they should be rinsed carefully washed before being salted.

In taking the pork from the barrel no piece must ever be allowed to float above the brine, as it will be likely to ruin the whole.

If the weather is a little warm when the pork is salted, it will be well to take it out in April, wash the barrel, scald the brine, and when cool, return it and add new salt as the pork is laid in — Genesee Farmer.

Preparing Poultry for Market.

It is often done thus:—The birds are caught, their necks are wrung by holding them by the head and swinging them around once or twice; they are then thrown on the ground to "flop" and bruise themselves until dead; then are plunged into hot water, and the feathers stripped off, the skin being often torn, the fat scalded and looking oily, and the whole bird presenting an uninviting appearance. They are sometimes drawn and mangled in the operation; and there are parties who give them a good feeding of corn just before killing, so as to sell a little corn at 15 to 20 cents per pound.—They are not bled; they are often parked warm; they come to market in poor condition, and sell at the lowest prices. The fowls should be plump and fat, with corn ty crops. Catch them quietly; hold a bird by both wings and tie them; then tie the legs together and hang them one after another on a pole. As soon as hung up in this way take a sharp knife and cut the head off, cutting close to the head, and let them hang until all the blood is out of them. While still warm pluck them dry, removing all the feathers, a few at a time, pulling with a slight jerk the way the feathers lie. Thus the skin will not be torn. The birds should now be hung till cold, and then be nipped off with a damp cloth and packed in tight boxes, with clean bright straw next the box all round. If the lot is extra fine, pull the skin back, cut off an inch of the neck, tie the skin over it, trim of the edges and wash off the blood. If the poultry is not to be packed, and shipped to market by rail or otherwise, they may be dipped in scalding water for not over five seconds.—This shrinks the skin a little, and so ties them look plumper; it melts the fat on the surface and gives the birds a clean, yellow look, which is attractive. Fowls thus plucked, will not keep nor bear packing so well as those plucked dry.

BRAGGING.—A foreigner who had heard of the Yankee propensity for bragging, thought he would beat the natives at their own game. Seeing some large watermelons on a market-woman's stand he exclaimed, 'What! don't you raise larger pumpkins than these in America!' The quick-witted woman immediately replied, "Apples! any body might know you were a foreigner: them's gooseberries!"

The English nobility, as a rule, live to 80, 90, and 100 years. An Englishman of the rank of "gentleman" lives on an average of 70; the artisan does not stand an even chance to live to 50.

TOWN ELECTIONS.

The elections this year have been warmly but quietly contested. The race for Mayor was not so close as was anticipated. At the close of the first day, it was evident that Mr. Scott would be the successful candidate; consequently a number of electors voted for neither one nor the other on the second day. At the close of the poll, the vote stood:

	Scott.	Chambers
North Ward,	81	27
East Ward,	74	41
Centre Ward,	67	18
South Ward,	60	43
	286	129

Majority for Mr. Scott, 157.

The election of Councillors was warmly contested, during the two days.

NORTH WARD.

In this Ward, Messrs. Toole, Whyte, Wilson, Wrighton, Dimble, and Alexander, were nominated; but Mr. Dumble withdrew from the contest at an early stage. Messrs. Toole, (an old Councillor) Wrighton and Wilson, (new men) are the successful candidates. This is the strongest Ward in the Town; and the fact that Councillor Toole stands again at the head of the poll, testifies that his conduct during the past year fully receives the approbation of the ratepayers—a sufficient answer to the defamations that were concocted against Mr. Toole. The following is the vote:

Toole,	99
Wrighton	76
Wilson,	74
Whyte	49
Alexander,	38

EAST WARD.

This Ward was the most hotly contested. The candidates were Messrs. Cox, Ormond, Kennedy, Millar and McNaughton. Messrs. Cox & Kennedy have been quietly at work for some time, when we last went to press we heard a rumour of their coming out. Of Mr. Kennedy we were not certain; he, however, ran well for a young man. Messrs. Millar and Cox also ran well. The vote here stood:

Cox,	102
Millar,	85
Ormond,	74
Kennedy,	66
McNaughton,	48

It is a matter of real advantage to the Town that Mr. Ormond is returned again. He has been one of the best Councillors, and will no doubt again do as he has always done—do justly to all, and for the interest of the Town. We regret that Mr. McNaughton is not be a member of the new Council: he certainly deserved to be returned—indefatigable in his labours, and energetic in everything he undertakes. There are rumours of a certain amount of deception having been practiced on Mr. McNaughton; and perhaps there are grounds for the rumor.

CENTRE WARD.

Stevenson	67
Dogherty	66
Ewing	51
Hehir	35
Webber	31

Mr. Stevenson is the only old Councillor returned for this Ward. Messrs. Ewing and Dogherty will soon learn, however. Mr. Stevenson is a trad man; one of the Finance Committee, who have done so much to lessen our liabilities, and adverse balances; he will be found all right.

SOUTH WARD.

Messrs. Chamberlain, Burnham and Peter Hamilton are the members elect—all good ones. The choice could hardly be better. Mr. Hamilton (the new man) will be found both good and true. The vote in this Ward stood thus:

Chamberlain	82
Burnham	77
Hamilton	74
Leonard	70

The old Councillors are Ormond, Toole, Stevenson, Burnham and Chamberlain.

The new ones are Cox, Millar, Wilson, Wrighton, Ewing, Dogherty and Hamilton. Let us hope they will do as well as the old.

Ashburnham Election.

In this municipality the people appeared desirous of a change, and elected new men—all but one. The election went off very quietly. The Councillors elect stood at close of poll as follows:—

Mr. Ludgate, (old)	66
Mr. Sutherland, (new)	62
Mr. M. Mowry, "	61
Mr. P. H. Clark, "	54
Mr. C. Dunlop, "	52

The stronger desire for a change appeared evident, through the whole election—which has been completely effected. The new men and entire office with very favorable prospects. They are all free from the charge of past maladministration, and as good a choice as could be made, seeing there was a determination to have a change.

TOWNSHIP ELECTIONS.

ASPHODEL.

Council elect:—P. M. Grover, E. Patterson, B. Coughlin, Job Humphries, and John Walsh.

BELMONT.

All the old ones but one; Mr. Switzer taking the place of Mr. Preston.

MONAGHAN.

J. W. Gilmour, H. Collins, —— Robson, J. Dunshee, R. Laing, jr.

There was no opposition except in Ward No. 2, where Henry Collins and Robt. Tully were proposed. We regret to learn that the proceedings were characterized by angry feelings, and personalities such as should have been avoided; but which we hope will end with the election. The quietness in all the other parts of the Township stands in marked contrast to what it was some few years ago.

Conversazione—Under the Auspices of the Literary Club.

There will be a Conversazione in the Victoria Hall, this evening. The programme is out and promises a rich entertainment. Mr. McCarroll, the celebrated Terry Finnegan, is expected to take part in the proceedings, by giving a solo on the flute. Thus from the list of the programme, and the volunteers who will take a part in the proceedings o the evening, we may safely predict a pleasant hour or two. The Club al ode strives a little and, and we know that this only requires to be intimated to the citizens to ensure a full house. The proceeds will go towards defraying the expenses of the Library.

Protestant Home.

The thanks of the Protestant Home Committee are given for the following donations, for December:—Mr. Erskine, large parcel of useful articles; Mrs. R. D. Rogers, parcel of clothing; Mrs. Kirkpatrick, vegetables; Mrs. A. Dorsner, a box stove; Rev. V. Clementi, a large hall stove; Mrs. C. A. Weller, a small stove; Dr. Burnham, barrel of flour; Mr. A. Stutt, 3 bushels potatoes, 3 bushels carrots, 1½ turnips; Mr. Peter, stationery and book; Miss Borrowman, 1 dollar.

A Christmas dinner was provided by the following ladies to whom thanks are also due:—

Mrs. R. Nicholls, a large parcel of groceries; Mrs. Hamilton, a fruit cake; Mrs. Patton, 5 lbs. sausages; Mrs. Burns, 6 lbs. corned beef; Mrs. Ormond, a roast of beef; Miss Roger, currant loaf and buns; Mrs. Hall, a turkey and a roast of beef; Mrs. Scott, a goose; Mrs. A. W. Kemp, an apple pie and cakes; Mrs. Romaine, an apple pie and cakes; Mrs. McBurney, fresh pork and apples; Mrs. Haultain, a plum pudding.

Two dollars were also given for the use of the boy Alfred Wheeler, who had been severely burnt, and taken into the Home, during the preceeding week.

We invite the attention of those who may constitute our County Council this current year to the letter of the Hon. Billa Flint in this issue. But inasmuch as it is not yet known who will be Reeves, all the Councillors may consider it a little. It is worthy of consideration.

There will be an adjourned meeting of the Gymnasium Club in the room over the old Bank of Toronto, on Friday evening next, at 7 o'clock, at which it is desirable that there should be a full attendance, as business of importance will be transacted.

The "Evening Times" is the title of a daily paper now published in Ottawa. It is neatly printed, is a very good size for an evening paper, and appears to be under good management. It is in favour of the present Coalition, and an advocate of Confederation. It has our best wishes for its success.

ARREST OF CAPTAIN SEMMES.—Captain Semmes, late commander of the Alabama, was arrested at Montgomery, Alabama, on Saturday last, and is en route for the North, under a strong guard. He was arrested in accordance with orders received from Washington.

We invite the attention of J. P.'s to the adjourned Court of Quarter Sessions, on next Saturday. See advertisement.

The Soiree in the Town Hall, Monaghan, New Year's night, was a complete success.

Parliament is to Assemble on the 15th instant, at Ottawa by proclamation.

SCHOOL EXAMINATION.

The examination of school Section No. 5, in the Township of Dummer, taught by Miss H. H. Greenlow, was held in the School House on December 22nd, 1865; Pupils in attendance, about 30. They were particularly examined in the several branches in which they had been taught, viz: Reading, Spelling, Writing, Arithmetic, Algebra, English Grammar, Geography, English and Canadian History; in most of which departments they acquitted themselves as scholars who had been under a good teacher, giving unmistakable evidence that she had made it her study to teach them. The Prizes coming to the section, as its share of the Hon. Billa Flint's donation, and the addition of the Township Council, were distributed according to merit, and at the discretion of the teacher, which was done with the greatest impartiality; after which, short but appropriate addresses were made, especially by Mr. F. Lyndon, showing the disadvantages arising from the want of a competent education, and the culpability of parents who neglect to educate their children at the present day, and showing the advantages of education, enumerating many cases in which men of obscure origin and poor parentage, have risen to rank, wealth, titles and honour. A vote of thanks was then called for to the teacher, which was most heartily responded to, every one instantly standing up in his place. Miss Greenlow, in reply, said it was with no ordinary degree of feeling that she could witness the interest manifested in her by both the children and parents in the section, and that she felt very sorrowful in leaving the children, who had been the objects of her anxious regard for the past three years; her emotion then became too deep for utterance, an emotion which was reciprocated by the children, who then took a parting fare well of their respected teacher.

JOHN ROSE, Chairman.

The semi-annual examination of School Section No. 14, Otonabee, G. A. Mitchell, Teacher, was held on Christmas Day. A goodly number of visitors were present, and seemed to take a lively interest in the proceedings. The pupils acquitted themselves very creditably, evincing a pretty thorough knowledge of the several studies in which they were examined. Mr. Mitchell seems to be quite at home among his pupils, and they evidently respect and love him. At the close of the examination, a Tea was provided, of which the children attending the School partook free of charge; and afterwards a goodly number of visitors took tea. All went off most agreeably. The meeting was then called to order—Mr. Thos. Johnston in the chair—when addresses were delivered by the Revds. D. Cantlon, of Peterborough, and Andrews, of Keene, Local Superintendent. Several pieces were also recited by some of the scholars. The meeting was enlivened by sweet music, Miss Mary Jane Edmunds presiding at the melodian. The Trustees of this new section deserve much credit for the very nice and commodious School House which they have erected—especially the internal arrangements and furnishing—an abundant supply of maps, object lessons, &c. decorating the walls, which must greatly assist the teacher in imparting instruction to the young. The prize-deserving pupils are the following:

Peterboro' Ladies' Bible Association.

Your Committee in presenting this Report feel that it will not contain a very great amount of interest, inasmuch as it is the first year of our existence, and we have no former report to compare with the present, nevertheless we must express our thanks to God for the degree of prosperity that has so far attended the efforts of this branch since its organization in December last. Your Committee desire to acknowledge their indebtedness to the Collectors who have acted as pioneers of the way, and have faithfully discharged the duties devolving on them; thus contributing to the prosperity of the undertaking. To objects of this Society are too well known to need any but a passing allusion here. We desire to give the Word of God to perishing man. We believe that the great Truths therein contained are of themselves sufficient through the Holy Spirit's teaching (or influence) to reclaim this lost and erring world. We know that there are many around us who know not the message of a free and full salvation has never been brought, and over whom the gross darkness of error and superstition hangs with soul destroying denseness. We know it to be a fact that where the Bible is unknown, woman is defrauded of her rights, and her life unchecered by sympathy and kindness—It is to these our dying, deluded and degraded fellowbeings we desire to present Christ as He is revealed in the Scriptures, as the Way, the Truth and the Life, and we conceive that by means of this Bible Association, we as women can attain this end, and do our part towards fulfilling that last command of our ascending Saviour, "Go ye unto all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature." We look for success, altogether apart from ourselves, for is it not the seed of God's Word we are endeavoring to sow, and has he not said, "My word shall not return to me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper whereto I send it."

For the furtherance of this work, the Town has been divided into districts, and two Collectors appointed to each, when they visit weekly from house to house and receive the free contributions to the Society, or subscriptions for Bibles and Testaments, the amount being handed in to the Treasurer at each monthly meeting. Very interesting accounts have been given by some of the Collectors of their interviews with the poorer friends in these weekly visits, which they seem greatly to appreciate, and desire should be continued, thus proving that other good besides the specific object of the Society can be effected, in the interchange of those kindly feelings which unite the hearts of all Christ's followers.

The Collections for the year 1864-5 amount to $205.97. Paid out for 93 Bibles 28 Testaments sold during the year and other expenses of the Society $91.44, leaving the balance in Commercial Bank, of $114.53. We cannot close this report without a brief allusion to Mrs. T. F. Kirkpatrick to whose influence and energy we ascribe the originating and forming of this Society, and who was appointed our President in December last. We would here testify, though inadequately our appreciation of her persevering yet unobtrusive determination to carry out by means of this Society the first wish of her own loving heart, that perishing men, women and children should read for themselves the message of salvation contained in God's word. As a Society, as a community, and as individuals we each and all regret her departure from among us, heartily wish her God-speed, and unanimously accord her the thanks and praise which are her due, for the wise and efficient manner in which she has discharged her duties as President of this Society; for her kindness and faithfulness as a sympathizing, loving friend and for her benevolence and usefulness to the community. But though we feel her removal from the Presidentship of this Society to be a check, we must not be discouraged, for the cause is GOD'S, therefore,

"To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin."

It must be our determination to "Go forward, in His strength," and to be followers of her, even as she was of Christ."

One other allusion it may not be deemed improper to make here. It is to the loss Sunday-school sustained in the early removal by death of our first Secretary, (Mrs. T. M. Fairbairn) whose well regulated mind, energetic character, and ready pen, made her appointment to that office peculiarly appropriate.

Your Committee in resigning their trust pray that the blessing of God may rest upon their successors in office, that in their hands the good work of the Lord may prosper, and that this Society may "have cause to thank God without ceasing, because where the word of God was received of them, it was received not as the word of men, but as it is in truth the Word of God, which shall work effectually in them that believe."

By order of Society,
HELEN HAULTAIN,
Secretary.

December 13th, 1865.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—As the time will shortly arrive when the County Council for Peterborough will be called upon to appoint Local Superintendents of Common Schools I desire to offer the suggestion for consideration of the Council, whether it would not be better to appoint one or two persons well qualified for the important work, and make their salary commensurate with the work they would have to attend to.

I am aware that each township has its Local Superintendent, and I would not desire to be offering either objection or complaint against any of the gentlemen, for in my correspondence with them during the year I have found them always ready to answer my letters, and I believe in reference to the object I have in view in raising means to procure prize-books for the children of the Common Schools, that they have all done as well as they could to carry out the object I had in view, but I am aware from what I discover in Hastings, that if Peterborough was divided into two school districts, as Hastings is, that the object I have in view in appropriating a portion of my Legislative salary for prize-books, will be made far more beneficial from a combined action under one or two Superintendents than it possibly can be under so many as now exists.

My object is to make the distribution of prizes, one of growing interest, and to make it tell upon the future educational welfare of the children of the Trent Division, and I see from the experience of the past, that this can best be accomplished under one or two Superintendents than so many as your County now are.

Another benefit, I think will arise from the change of system, by combining all the salaries now paid, with a slight addition by the Council it will give a fair salary to two persons, who can more fully devote their time to the work, and bring about uniformity in each township, and two gentlemen can better confer together, than so many as at present.

We have found in Hastings since we gave up Township, and appointed County Superintendents, that a greater benefit has been derived by the Schools, than before the system was changed, and we would not be willing to go back to the old system for any consideration.

My object is to make the Front Division second to none in in Canada in its educational improvement. I desire they shall excel all others, and the only thing with me is how what I desire can be accomplished.

Yours, &c.,
BILLA FLINT.

STARTLING AFFAIR AT THE HAMILTON CENTRAL SCHOOL.—A week or two ago two boys attending the Central School, named Hamilton and Massey respectively, had an altercation on the playground, and Hamilton stabbed Massey with a knife. The wound, as far as I have heard, was not dangerous. It is not a little remarkable, however, that no action with regard to the affair has yet been taken before any court, or any complaint made to the authorities. Yesterday, at a meeting of the Board of School Trustees, the following resolution was passed:—"Moved by Mr. Cann, seconded by Mr. White,—That in reference to the Central School a few days ago, the Principal having laid before the Board a detailed statement of the facts and circumstances, the Board, desirous of making its strong disapprobation of the use of any weapon, do hereby resolve, that Hamilton be suspended during the term of three months, and that Massey be readmitted at once, subject to the usual chastisement for violating the rules of the school."

A GOVERNOR TURNED POLICEMAN.—When Governor Gordon, of New Brunswick, and the Provincial Secretary went to St. Stephen the other day, they overtook on the road near the village of Dumbarton, two men named Mulhenin and Donahoe, who had committed daring robberies in Fredericton. They recognized the thieves from a previous description, and His Excellency decided on an arrest. The Provincial Secretary undertook the Magistrate's party. Captain Hallowes, the Governor's aide-de-camp, became Sheriff's officer pro tem., and two special constables were sworn in by His Excellency on the spot, in whose custody the thieves—who had part of the plunder in their possession—remained until the owners of the stolen goods arrived from Fredericton and identified them. They were taken to Fredericton for trial. Governor Gordon evidently understands the duty of a ruler in not wearing the sword of justice in vain, but becoming the terror of evil-doers.

The Sanford's kidnapping case has received its quietus for a time. By a special telegram from Quebec, it will be seen that the court of Queen's Bench assembled there have granted the writ of habeas corpus, admitting Blossom to bail. It be can succeed in finding sufficient security, we suppose that he will be set at liberty until the next term of Court in Montreal, in March next. The general impression is that the kidnapper will fail to put in appearance when called upon, and that his bail will be forfeited.

THE PROVINCIAL TELEGRAPH LINE.—We are pleased to state that this new line is now open from Kingston westward to London, and is ready for the transaction of business. In two weeks from date, the line will be extended to Windsor, and connected with Detroit. Eastward, the line is laid as far as Ottawa, and workmen are now engaged carrying it on as far as Quebec. At Kingston it connects with Cape Vincent by submarine cable.—London Prototype.

In answer to a correspondent, the New York Tribune states that it is true, as reported, that a Boston Druggist, who has a specialty before the public, is paying that establishment $10,000 a year for advertising. It says he paid $1,500 for the insertion of one mammoth advertisement, and adds on the general subject:—"Bonner once paid us 3,000 for one insertion of an advertisement of the Ledger. He knew that by judicious advertising he could ensure a fortune. The prejudice among druggists and physicians against advertising is dying out, and they as well as others see that the cheapest mode wherby they can make themselves and their medicines known to the public, is by a wise and liberal system of advertising."

MURDER OF AL X. MILNE

(From the Ottawa Times)

On Saturday evening last an event occurred in the peaceable and respectable County of Carleton of a character to cast a temporary shadow on its reputation. It appears that a farm laborer named John Rider, who lived in the Township of March, and who was in the employ of Col. Edwards, was at work for him on Saturday last. In accordance with the custom of this festive season Rider's employer gave him some liquor, and thereafter a difficulty seems to have occurred between them in reference to the payment of wages. Rider having imbibed too freely, became quite riotous and unmanageable and Col. Edwards, finding it impossible to arrive at an amicable understanding put him out of the house; some say with the assistance of his son, Mr. Edwards, jr. Rider upon return'd, and being both violent and uncivil, determined to re-enter the house, in spite of the old gentleman, who had just re-seen in fear for his personal safety. After considerable wrangling, Col. Edwards went to the door, and called one Milne, who was some acres distant, for assistance. The latter soon drove to Edwards's house, and as is said to prevent Rider from re-entering, and to pacify him at the same time. Having succeeded to some extent, Milne offered to drive Rider to his home, about four miles distant, and some say the offer was accepted while others state it was refused. However Milne got to work to turn the sleigh and cut his horse's gear in order for the drive, and while thus employed, and standing with his back turned to Rider, the latter instantly picked up a bludgeon and grasping it with his two hands, struck the deceased a blow on the back of the head, which brought him senseless to the ground. The by-standers at once seized Rider for safe-keeping, but as Milne shortly after showed signs of recovery they let him depart for his own house. The unfortunate Milne was promptly conveyed into Col. Edwards's house, where every medical assistance was rendered, but in vain, as he expired after an agony of several hours' duration. Rider was then arrested and detained in custody.—Corner Street in at specially summoned a jury, who, after a brief examination of the case, found a verdict of "Wilful Murder" against John Rider. He was brought to the city, on Monday, and lodged in jail for trial. The prisoner as he was drunk during the short time preceding the fatal act and has no distinct recollection of his conduct. He had a dispute with the deceased some time ago, but is said to have been on good terms with him subsequently. Rider has a wife and three children; and the deceased had a wife and family also.

A Melancholy Accident.

An accident of a melancholy nature occurred in the gunstore of Mr. W. H. Marston, Yonge street, on Saturday afternoon. About two o'clock, a young man from Port Credit, named Coughlin, in company with his sister, called at the store and inquired for pistol-ear ridges, at the same time taking out of his pocket a four-barrelled Elliott's pistol with one cartridge in it. The sister, who seemed to be the most familiar with the manipulation of the pistol, took it from him for the purpose of extracting the cartridge as a sample for the attendant in the store, and in so doing it accidently went off in her hands, the bullet striking two things on one of her fingers and driving them into the bone, then hitting her brother on the side of the head, passing through the skull and lodging directly in the brain. Drs. J. Awrey & Ogden were soon in attendance, and rendered all the aid in their power, but entertained little hope of the young man's recovery. He was quietly removed to the hospital, where he remains in a very precarious state. It seems the young woman resides in the States, and was over here only to spend the holidays amongst her friends; and that she and her brother had been firing this pistol for amusement previous to leaving home. There was one of the cartridges that would not explode, though repeated attempts were made to explode it, and it was left in the pistol as inert, yet strange to say, it went off and produced the melancholy effect described. The young woman fainted almost immediately after the pistol was fired. The unhappy young woman is almost demented at the unfortunate occurrence. A probe was inserted in the wound in the temple and passed along the brain toward the crown of the head the direction in which the bullet had gone, but it could not be found. It is a remarkable fact that, up to a late hour last evening, the young man remained perfectly sensible and was able to converse freely with his medical attendant. The wound in the temple was the only place at which he spoke of being painful, and he showed no signs of becoming feverish. The pulse, on the contrary, was falling slowly, having reached 65 about five o'clock yesterday afternoon.—Leader.

ENGLISH NEWS.

The mails by the steamship Cuba have been received. The only matter of interest which we notice is in reference to the conference of Irish members of Parliament in Dublin on the 5th and 5th ultimo. It was attended by twenty-two members, the result of whose deliberations was the passage of fourteen resolutions relating to the present and the means necessary to improve the future condition of Ireland. The first of them appoints a committee on the land question, who are require to undertake to frame a Bill providing adequate compensation for all tenants' improvements, and to encourage and induce the granting of leases by such means as in the judgment of the committee may be thought general and practicable. The bill when approved of, to be introduced into Parliament, and the support of it by government claimed as essential to their acquiring the confidence of the Irish people. The other resolutions relate to the church establishment, the educational system, the grand jury laws, the necessity of Parliamentary assistance to improve and develope the resources of the country the franchise, and the importance of combination to effect a settlement of these questions. One of the resolutions pledged the members of the conference to co-operate with the advanced section of the English liberal party.—Globe.

How the English got Their Fingers into the Haytien Pie.

Mr. Dutton, the English Consul at the Cape, had taken to his house a few Haytien refugees, and Mr. Salmave, the rebel chief, desired Mr. Dutton to give up these people, which was refused, whereupon his house was entered by force, and the poor fellows under his protection taken out and shot by Salmave on the sea shore. The rebels then commenced to wreak vengeance on the Consul's house, smashing his furniture, and taking everything they could lay their hands on. To finish the fun they wound up by pulling down the English flag, spat and stamped on it. Mr. Dutton went on board the Bulldog, and related to the captain what had been done, who wrote to Salmave asking what he meant. Salmave replied that what he had already done was well done and aux—blancs. The captain demanded satisfaction, giving Salmave twenty-four hours to think over the matter, and then left the Cape. Next morning the Bulldog returned, and on passing Fort Circlet, into the harbour was fired into by Salmave. The rest is familiar to our readers. After dismantling Fort Circlet with one broadside, the Bulldog smashed up another small fort and blew up the arsenal. The Valaregne, which fired on the Bulldog, was sunk by one shot; she went down sixty fathoms. The Bulldog was struck on a reef, where she remained. After fighting her ten hours, and till the last pound of powder was expended, the captain set her on fire. She was a small gunboat, with only six guns.

THE DANCE OF DEATH.—The Detroit Tribune of the 28 h ult. states that a never-to-be-forgotten scene occurred at Merrill Hall during the progress of a ball, which was given at that place. About that time a young man, named Charles Windeck, died very suddenly, and while the music was being played for the hundreds who were engaged in the enjoyment of dancing. The deceased, with a young lady partner, was dancing a scotch reel, and had passed once around a second circle, when he fell upon the floor. He was picked up and carried to a settee, where he expired in a few minutes thereafter, surrounded by a throng of gay couples, struck dumb by the unexpected turn in affairs. The consternation, of course, was great; and what was a short time previously a happy group of ladies and gentlemen, was turned into a group of mourners. The deceased was a native of Prussia, unmarried, and was about 28 years of age. He came here about five months ago from Titusville, Pa., intended to pass the winter in Detroit. He boarded at Mansion's Hotel, from which place his remains will be interred. Coroner Daly held an inquest, and the jury returned a verdict that death ensued from disease of the heart.

Love, Jealousy and Revenge!

ATTEMPTED MURDER AND SUICIDE IN BROOKLYN—A TRAGIC AFFAIR.

A very romantic and at the same time tragical affair took place in Brooklyn, N. Y. on Saturday evening last. It appears that a Mr. W. H. Ross, a celebrated chess-player and a young man of considerable promise, was enamoured with a pretty lady named Dutton, who resided in Brooklyn. Miss Day on was left an orphan at a very early age, and Mr Ross, who was acquainted with the family, adopted her. He paid for her instruction as a school and other necessaries. When she became a woman he seems to have conceived the idea of marrying her, and they were engaged to each other. He lately obtained employment for her at the office of the Mexican Loan Agency, where he himself was engaged. A quarrel lately took place between the lovers, which was made up; but on Saturday last Ross conceived the idea that she had been cheating him, and appears to have made up his mind to be revenged. About half-past five o'clock on Saturday evening he met Miss Dayton on Clinton street, and presented a revolver fired four shots in rapid succession. Three shots took effect in her head and she fell, apparently lifeless, upon the pavement and Ross rushed wildly down the street until he reached to dock from which he immediately jumped into the water with the intention of drowning himself. It being low tide he was unable to accomplish his purpose. Extracting himself from the mud, he returned to the shore and coolly reloaded his revolver he shot himself twice, being determined, as it appeared, to put an end to his existence by some means or other. Soon afterwards he was taken into custody, when he made the following.

STATEMENT:

"I loved the young woman, Miss Payton; she pretended, once, to love me but she only made belief, and at length deceived me; I was made the victim of her enchantment—was her dupe; I spent money for her comfort and welfare, she promising to become my wife, and settle down here, where we might be happy; I finally found out that she had been cheating me, and we were separated; but I was not happy without her; the quarrel was made up, and we became friends again; it was only recently that I learned that she was still filled with only ingratitude; there is nothing against the character of Frances Payton; it was all from her ingratitude; she would at one time consent to a union, and as quickly negative that assent; we had been talking together of this when I did the act, which I intended should end both of our lives at one and the same moment."

THE PRISONER

Is about 5 feet 3 inches in height, sharp-featured narrow-chested, and very thin and spare. His weight can hardly be above 100 pounds. His appearance would indicate that he has not been in healthy condition, and he has been a great sufferer from dyspepsia. As we said before, he is one of the best chess-players in America—He is also one of the best-read men of his age in New York. At the time of his arrest an unworked chess-problem was found in his pocket. He was born at Saratoga, N. Y., and is 31 years of age.

His wounds were examined on Sunday morning, by a medical man, and two bullets were found to have lodged in the base of the skull, without, however, injuring the brain. The bullets were extracted, the prisoner bearing the painful operation with great fortitude.

THE VICTIM.

Miss Dayton, was about 22 years of age, very handsome, well educated and of unblemished character. She lies in a most critical condition; three bullets have lodged in her skull and she back of her neck; one of them is embedded in the spine. No opinion can be given as to whether she will recover or not. She is a native of New York city.

The prisoner is likely to recover.

On Whom Rest the Responsibility of the False Notions Instilled into the Negroes.

From Gen. Grant's Report of the Condition of the South.

I did not give the operations of the Freedmen's Bureau that attention I would have done if more time had been at my disposal. Conversation, however, on the subject with officers connected with the Bureau, led me to think that in some of the States its affairs have not been conducted with good judgment or economy; and that the belief which prevailed among the freedmen of the South that the lands of their former masters will at least, in part, be divided among them, become from the agents of their Bureau. This belief is seriously interfering with the willingness of the freedmen to make contracts for the current year. In some farm the Freedmen's Bureau is an absolute necessity until civil law is established and enforced, securing to the freedmen their rights and full protection. At present, however, it is independent of the military establishment of the country, and seems to be operated by the different agents of the Bureau according to their individual notions. Everywhere General Howard, the able head of the Bureau, made friends by the just and fair instructions and advice he gave. But the complaint in South Carolina was, that when he left things went on as before. Many perhaps the majority of the agents of the Freedmen's Bureau advise the freedmen that by their own industry they must expect to live. To this end they endeavor to secure employment for them, and to see that both contracting parties comply with the arrangements. In some cases, I am sorry to say, the freedman's mind does not seem to be disabused of the idea that the freedman has the right to live without care or provision for the future. The effect of the belief in the division of land is idleness and accumulation in camps, towns, and cities. In such cases I think it will be found that vice and disease will tend to the extermination or great destruction of the colored race.

A BOLD THIEF.—A paymaster of the United States army went into a bank in Washington on Friday last, with $15,000, which he laid on the counter, and turned about for the purpose of writing a check. His clerk entered at the time, and likewise placed on the counter a package of $10,000, and then engaged in conversation with a friend. While the paymaster and his clerk was thus engaged, some party in the crowd stole the $15,000 package, with which he made his escape unnoticed.

CHILLS AND FEVER.
CHILLS AND FEVER.

One tea spoonful of Radway's Ready Relief in a wineglass of water, taken on rising in the morning and repeated every three hours, will break up this formidable complaint. This remedy is a better safeguard against Fever and Ague, Bilious Fever, and all other Fevers, Chills, Dissentery, Diarrhœa, than all other medicines in use. One dose has frequently expelled the Ague and Fever poison from the system, and in case of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Diptheria, Influenza, Hoarseness, Colds, Sprains, Cramps, Spasms, Swollen Joints, Lameness, Spinal Complaints, there is nothing in the world that will relieve the patient so quick or cure so rapidly as Radway's Ready Relief. Price 25 cents per bottle. Sold by Druggists everywhere.

THE RAT HOLE FLEET.—The Yankees have sunk some 20 vessels loaded with stone at the mouth of Charleston Harbour, which will doubtless prevent any vessels drawing over a few feet of water, entering that port for all time to come, this must prove a serious loss to the property owners there, but it will not at all interfere with the supplies of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," for the cure of rheumatism, Tiedoloureux, neuralgia, toothache, and all complaints of that nature. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere, price 25 cts per bottle.

A BALLOON FEAT.—A strong balloon would carry ten persons and baggage, across the plains (out West) 360 miles in ten hours; thus what a saving of time and toil. And so with Ryan's Pulmonic Wafers—one stops a cough, a dozen heals a sore throat, and a box will cure the most obstinate cold. 25 cts a box at all Druggists.

IT HAS BECOME NECESSARY

TO SUPPLY ANOTHER SET OF TELEGRAPHIC INSTRUMENTS and open another Office, to meet the wants of the constant by increasing number of Students studying this Art at the

LONDON COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.

In future those Students learning to operate by paper will be entirely separate from those learning by sound. Regular instruction will be given in each class every day.

Instruction will also be given each day in Phonography, by Mr S. Hutchinson, late reporter for Fowler & Wells, N. Y. We guarantee that an ordinary student can become thoroughly grounded in this Science whilst taking the Commercial Course, without materially interfering with his progress in that course.

The additional charge for full instruction in Telegraphing is only $5.

The additional charge for full instruction in Phonography is only $2.

Owing to the increase in the number of our Commercial Students, we have also found it necessary to add to our already large number of desks, and the cry is, "Still they Come." All right, Gentlemen! We will furnish a desk and seat for each of you, and good practical instruction, too. Remember, you can take a good thorough course in this College elsewhere than in any other. Please send for circular, containing full information. For specimens of Penmanship, &c., enclose stamp and address,

J. W. JONES,
Principal of London Commercial College,
1 London, C. W.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

21st Vol. of the Montreal Witness

FOR 1866.

TWENTY EVENTFUL YEARS have run their course since the Montreal Witness first saw the light, and though they have been full of changes there has been no change in the reason for commencing it, namely, the great importance to society of a wholesome family newspaper.

Is a Mother's Magazine desirable in a family? The Witness has had as much matter every year of the kind inserted in Mother's Magazines as any monthly publication under that name.

Is a Children's Magazine or Sunday School Paper desirable? The Witness has had more of the class of reading suitable for these publications than any of them.

Is an Agricultural Paper of great importance to families and the country? The Witness has had more on that subject than any ordinary monthly temperance paper.

Is a Commercial Paper wanted by men of business and forms? The Witness fully as much commercial matter as any exclusively commercial paper.

Is a Literary Paper wanted? The Witness has had a goodly proportion of Poetry, Tales, Reviews, and other literary matter.

Should a witness for truth, and against error, injustice and vice be sustained? The Witness has done its best in all these respects.

Is a newspaper essential to an intelligent family? The Witness has given more news than most papers in Canada.

A brief calculation will show the economy of procuring all these papers together instead of separately. The cost, if taken in the latter way, would, instead of the price of the Witness, be about as follows:—

Mother's Magazine,	$1 00
Children's Paper	25
Agricultural Paper	1 00
Temperance Paper	50
Commercial Paper	1 00
Literary Paper	1 00
Weekly Newspaper	1 00
	6 75

This shows a very great difference in first cost besides the saving in postage.

We would not be understood, however, to mean that any one should be satisfied with the Witness only. On the contrary, we think it is a wise economy to subscribe for various useful periodicals. There is, probably, no way in which a small sum of money yields so large a return of pleasure and profit. Our only object is to show how economical it is to subscribe for this paper.

There is another view of this matter, which is not a small reward for our twenty years' labour. During that time a very large number of families have been brought up with the Witness as their family paper. Parents and children have perused it regularly, and it is found the best selection we could make from the best writers of the world. All know the power of a family paper to modify the views, opinions, and conduct of those to whom it obtains access, and it has one law aided in the bringing up of some thousands of families in principles of religion, temperance integrity, and intelligent enterprise, what finite arithmetic can reckon up the gain!

The Weekly Witness reaches now in all its editions some seven thousand subscribers all over the country, besides an average circulation of some four thousand in the city of Montreal; and for this extensive circulation we are exceedingly thankful, but it is a matter of deep regret that the proportion of the people reached is yet so small.

There are probably about six thousand Protestant families in Montreal of which it has reach about two-thirds; but there are about 300,000 Protestant families in the rest of Canada, of which we only reach 7,000, or less than a fortieth part. There is surely room here for a very large extension of all our circulations.

The Daily Witness is by far the best of our editions for business men, having more reading matter and a great many more advertisements than any other edition. It has also full market reports daily. The subscription is $3,00 per annum.

The Montreal Witness (semi-weekly) contains nearly all the reading matter of the Daily, together with semi-weekly market reports and prices current. Subscription $2,00 per annum.

The Weekly Witness contains all the matter of permanent interest of the Semi-weekly, with weekly summary of news and market reports. Subscription $1,00 per annum.

The Canadian Messenger, published twice a month, contains the Temperance, Agricultural, Scientific, and Educational matter of the Witness, but without news, markets, or advertisements, as it goes post free. Subscription 25 cents per annum.

All these rates are payable invariably in advance, and the paper stops when the term subscribed for expires.

It should not be very difficult to get some one of these editions into almost every family if a friend of that family would only suggest the matter to them.

The price is so low that we cannot afford commissions, and indeed we have always received the greatest aid, in the way of obtaining subscribers, from parties who had no object in view but disinterested patriotism and benevolence. To all such, and may their number greatly increase, we hereby render hearty thanks for past favors, and ask them to continue their good offices.

The Witness is now dressed in a new suit of types, and no effort will be spared to keep it in the very front rank of Canadian journalism.

Advertisements not in variance with the character of the Witness will be inserted for one cent per word for one insertion and a half cent per word for each subsequent insertion, no advertisement being reckoned as less than 25 words.

Poetry.

Mother on the Brain.

Have you heard the latest songs?
Of course you have, I know;
Of war, love, and battle-fields,
Of joy, and tears, and woe;
There's 'Mother, I've come home to die,'
'She kissed me in my dreams;'
But 'Mother! mother! mother!' mother!'
Is a word for any other;
You'll really think each singing laddy
Never had a loving daddy.

Have you heard the last refrain?
They've got poor mother on the brain;
'Let us kiss him for his mother,'
'Mother, now this war is over;'
The ring to mammy night and day,
But daddy go to clover.
Mother! mother! mother! mother!
Not a word for any other;
You'll really think each loving laddy
Never had a loving daddy.

What Young People Should Know.

The best inheritance which parents can give to their children is the ability to help and take care of themselves. It is better than a hundred thousand dollars apiece. To any trouble or difficulty they have two accounts in the shape of two hands. Those who can do nothing and have to be waited on are helpless and easily disheartened at the misfortunes of life. Those who are active and hardy meet troubles with a cheerful face, and can easily surmount them. Let young people, therefore, learn as many things as possible. Every boy should know how, sooner or later—

1. To dress himself, black his own boots, cut his brother's hair, wind up a watch, sew on a button, make up a bed, and keep his clothes in order.

2. To harness a horse, grease a wagon, and harness a team.

3. To carve and wait on a table.

4. To milk the cows, shear the sheep, and dress a leg of veal or mutton.

5. To reckon money and keep accounts correctly, and according to good housekeeping rules.

6. To write a neat and appropriate business letter, in a good hand, fold and subscribe it correctly, and write contracts.

7. To plow, sow grain and grass, drive a mowing machine, build a neat stack and pitch hay.

8. To put up a package, build a fire, and mend broken tools, whitewash a wall and regulate a clock.

Every girl should know how—

1. To sew and knit.
2. To mend clothes neatly.
3. To make beds.
4. To dress her own hair,
5. To wash the dishes and sweep the carpets.
6. To make good bread and perform all plain cooking.
7. To keep her rooms, drawers and closets in order.
8. To work a sewing machine.
9. To make good butter and cheese.
10. To make a dress and children's clothing.
11. To keep accounts and calculate interest.
12. To write, fold and subscribe letters properly.
13. To nurse the sick efficiently, and not faint at a drop of blood.
14. To be ready to lender efficient comfort and aid to those in trouble, and in an unostentatious way.
15. To receive and entertain visitors, in the absence or sickness of her mother.

A young lady who can do all these things well, and who is always ready to render aid to the afflicted, and mitigate the perplexities around her, will bring more comfort to others and happiness to herself, and be more esteemed than if she knew how to dance, sing or play on the piano.

A Surprised Father.—A fine looking man, of noble physique, and clad in overcoat, gloves, and stout boots, was walking out the other day with his little three year-old daughter—a pale-faced child, with bare neck and arms, and morocco slippers. A neighbor, meeting them, began to ask with great apparent concern after the father's health, adding:

'But I'm glad your little one does not inherit your feeble constitution.'

'Feeble constitution!' exclaimed the astonished parent; 'why, I was never sick a day in my life, while, as to my daughter, we fear she has her mother's consumptive tendencies.'

'Indeed,' replied his friend, with a sly twinkle of the eye; 'you took such extra care to protect yourself from the cold, while she goes bare-necked and in pasteboard shoes. I inferred that it was you that inherited the mother's consumptive tendencies, and not her.'

A curious law case has been tried in France to discover who was the rightful owner of a well. In the midst of much false swearing and great complication, the judge, astonished, exclaimed, "And is this all about a little water? What can it matter so very much, that you should both put yourselves to such trouble and expense about it?" "Monsieur," replied one of the advocates drily, "the pleaders are both of them wine merchants."

A Bad Objection.—On the parson rising one day, some years ago, to publish from the pulpit the banns of matrimony, an old man rose and said, "I forbid the banns." On being asked to state his objections, he replied, "I had reserved Sarah Curtis for myself." The objection was not deemed good.

Speaking English.—Two Dutchmen once got into a dispute about the English language, each one contending that he could command the best. They made a bet at length, and appointed a judge to decide between them, and accordingly they began:—"Vell, Chon," said the first, "did it rain to-morrow?"—"I shall tink it vash," said John. Was't that judge in a quandary?

Wisein his Folly.—In the North the "daft Jamie" of a parish got into the pulpit of the church on Sunday before the minister, who happened to be rather behind the time. "Come down, Jamie," said the minister, "that is my place." "Come ye up, sir," replied Jamie; "they are a stiff-necked and rebellious generation, the people o' this place, and it will tak' us baith to manage them."

Not so Tall.—Lord Chesterfield's physicians having informed him that he was "dying by inches," he thanked heaven that he was not so tall by a foot as Sir Thomas Robinson.

Who says that a starving man may look in vain for a meal? When a man has not money enough to pay for his dinner, there are plenty of people ready to give him a cold shoulder.

Dundreary says the only parting that ever troubled him was the parting of his back hair.

What relation is the door mat to the carpet? a step-father.

SHERIFF'S SALE OF LANDS.

By virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Her Majesty's County Court for the County of Peterborough, and to me directed, against the lands and tenements which were of Peter Burns, deceased, at the time of his death, in the hands of John Burns, Admini-tratrix, of all and sing dar the goods and chattels which were of the said Peter Burns, to be administered, at the suit of Michael Halliban, I have seized and taken in execution, all the right title and interest of the said Peter Burns, in the hands of the said John Burns to be administered, in and to the following lands and tenements, viz:

The west half of lot No. 24, in the 9th concession of the Township of Douro; and also part of lot No. 6, west of George street and south of Simcoe street, in the Town of Peterborough, and described as follows:—Commencing on Simcoe street at a distance of twenty-eight feet six inches west from the north-east corner of the said last mentioned lot, thence west twenty-eight feet six inches, thence south to within the distance of ten feet of the southern boundary of the said last mentioned lot, thence east twenty-eight feet six inches, thence north to the place of beginning: together with a right of way from Aylmer street ten feet wide.

All of which property I shall offer for sale, at the Court House, in the Town of Peterborough, on TUESDAY, the 20th day of FEBRUARY, 1866, at 12 o'clock, noon

The Globe Newspaper.

THE publisher of The Globe has to announce that very great improvements in the publication of this journal will be made in the coming year. A new font of beautiful type, cast specially for The Globe, has been imported from the celebrated Scottish Foundry of Millar and Richard, Edinburgh. The quality of the paper used in printing the journal will be much superior to that heretofore employed. Arrangements are now being made or increased Telegraphic facilities; and the corps of Writers, Reporters and correspondents, will be strengthened—Increased effort will be put forth in every department to render The Globe more worthy than ever before of the immense circulation it has for so many years enjoyed throughout British America.

The year 1866 is likely to be a most eventful period in the history of Canada—a year in which the current events of the day will be of the deepest interest to every inhabitant of the country.

The new Parliamentary Buildings will, early in the coming spring, be opened for the first time at Ottawa.

The Government is pledged to present to Parliament, at the opening of the session, either a Bill for completing the Confederation of all British America, or a Bill establishing a new Federal constitution for Canada alone, based on the principle of Representation by Population in the popular branch.

On the 17th of March, 1866, the American Treaty of reciprocity will come to an end; during the negotiations for its renewal, or preparations to meet the change, will be watched with much interest.

Arrangements for acquiring possession of, and opening the North-West territory for settlement, will be speedily made, and to these The Globe will devote special attention, as it has hitherto done to everything connected with the subject.

With the settlement of the constitution question that has so long distracted the Provinces one question after the material progress of this country will be thrown open for consideration. Among these will be—

The subject of Banking and Currency.
Enlarging the Canals, and otherwise improving the Internal Navigation of the country.
Reduction of the Customs' Tariff.
Interest on Money.
Opening up new Territory to settlement.
Free land grants to actual settlers.
A Homestead Law.

And many other vitally important subjects. In the discussion and settlement of all these matters, The Globe will, as heretofore, take an active part; and from the sources of information at the command of its conductors, it is not doubted that its columns the earliest intelligence and the most reliable information will continue to be found.

THE DAILY GLOBE

will continue to be issued from the office at $6 per annum, payable invariably in advance; but can be procured regularly from the news-dealers in all the cities and towns throughout the Province.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE

will also be much improved in the year 1866. The paper will be of superior quality, and the new Scottish type will give it a greatly improved appearance. An editor has been engaged, whose special duty it will be to condense and arrange the matter for this edition, and to select intelligence especially adapted for country readers. A portion of each week's paper will be devoted to the publication of some interesting tale; and the markets and prices current will count me to be given with promptness and accuracy.

The Weekly Globe will continue to be published at TWO DOLLARS per annum, payable strictly in advance. Some exceptions to the rule of advance payment have been heretofore made—but from the 1st of January, 1866, no paper will be sent from the office without prepayment.

CLUB RATES.

During 1866 we will send:—

Six copies one year for	$10 00
Ten " "	15 00
Fifteen " "	22 50

and an extra copy of the Weekly to the person who gets up the club; fifteen.

Twenty-five copies one year for	35 00

and a copy of the Weekly Globe to the person who gets up the club of twenty-five

Fifty copies one year for	65 00

and a copy of the Daily Globe one year to the person who gets up the club of fifty.

Eighty copies one year for	100 00

and a copy of the Daily.

Payment must be always in advance.

Each paper is addressed separately.

All the papers in a club must be mailed to one Post-office.

When additional names are added to any club during the year, they must be sent to the Globe office by the person who made up the Club, and the money sent with such additional names must be such a proportion of the year's subscription at the Club rate as will pay up to the expiration of the Club.

No exception will be made to these rules on any ground whatever.

AMERICAN
Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering
SEWING MACHINE!
COMPANY,
627 Broadway, New-York.

THE BUTTON HOLE Stitch made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses, thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produce a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Pocket-binders, Saddlers, &c., &c., it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it extends, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c. &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Hooker where instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs Devaugh & Co, No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five for $2, eleven for $5, thirty for $10, sixty for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES
DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMETS constructed on a truly scientific principle That have greater strength, and will remain longer in TUNE than any other Piano The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old-fashioned system of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Dunning is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
M. x Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Barili.
Frances H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Henry Fry,	Charles Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal verisimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5:—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It is a sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument, an ordinary player obtains with ease action, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they most speedily supercede the old styles.

Gentlemen:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Dunning, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in he instruments under examination in points of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

NEW AND IMPROVED ROTARY FEED
Sewing Machines.

The following facts demonstrate that these Machines comprise the highest improvements in the Sewing Machine Art, viz:

1. Each Machine is guaranteed to give better satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in Market, or money refunded.
2. They have taken many of the highest premiums at the most important Exhibitions and fairs ever held in the United States
3. They make the lock stitch alike on both sides—thus saving more than half the thread and silk used in the raveling-ridge seams of the loop stitch and single-thread Sewin Machines.
4. They are adapted to the widest range of heavy and light sewing.
5. They have no winding wires, or delicate attachments to keep in repair.
6. They require no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "Lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate Machine.

Please call and examine, and demonstrate for yourself, or send for Circular, with samples of sewing.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN
SEWING MACHINES.
EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms, { 536 Broadway, New York, / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nansook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it also at impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply the natives with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

But in a more especial manner do we elicit the patronage of

Merchant Tailors,	Corset Makers,
Coach Makers,	Gaiter Fitters,
Hoop Skirt Manufacturers,	Shoe Binders,
Shirt and Bosom Makers.	Vest and Pantaloon Makers.
	Dress Makers.

Religious and Charitable Institutions will be liberally dealt with.

One half-hour's instruction is sufficient to enable any person to work the Machine to their entire satisfaction.

Agents wanted for all Towns in the United States, where agents are not already established. Also for Cuba, Mexico, Central and South America, to whom a liberal discount will be given.

New Map
OF
Peterborough and Ashburnham.
THE undersigned beg to announce that their New Map of the Town of Peterboro' and of the Village of Ashburnham, is now complete and ready for publication.
This Map has been compiled with great care from the original registered plans and surveys, and its entire accuracy secured not only by those means, but by actual survey and careful admeasurement in the two corporations named, not only is every Lot given and its subdivisions where divided, but the names of the owners, as contained in the last Assessment Roll, are neatly printed on each lot. All public buildings, manufactories stores, and private residences, together with the existing and proposed railways, streets, mill-races, water-courses dams, bridges, &c, are laid down from actual measurement. The built-up portion of the town is so colored as to distinguish at a glance the materials used, whether of wood, stone or brick, while the whole is finished in a superior manner, so as to be both useful and ornamental, in securing which neither pains nor expense have been spared.
During the ensuing week, the undersigned will be prepared to receive the names of intending subscribers, at their office, Scott's Buildings. Early application is desired, as but a limited number of copies will be published.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK
FOR 1866.
The Fashion Magazine of the World
LITERATURE, FINE ARTS & FASHIONS
The most magnificent Steel engravings.—Double Fashion Plates. Wood engravings on every subject that can interest ladies. Crochet knitting, Netting, Embroidery, Articles for the Toilet, for the Parlor, the Boudoir, and the Kitchen. Everything, in fact, to make a complete Lady's Book.
THE LADIES FAVORITE FOR 36 YEARS
No Magazine has been able to compete with it. None attempt it.
GODEY'S RECEIPTS
for every department of a household. These are alone worth the price of the book.
MODEL COTTAGES, (no other Magazine gives them), with diagrams.
DRAWING LESSONS for the Young.—Another specialty with Godey.
ORIGINAL MUSIC, worth $3 a year. Other Magazines publishes old worn-out music; but the subscribers to Godey get it before the music stores.
GARDENING FOR LADIES.—Another peculiarity with Godey.
Fashions from Messrs. A. T. Stewart & Co., of New York, the millionaire merchants, appear in Godey, the only Magazine that has them.
Ladies bonnets. We give more of them in a year than any other Magazine. In fact, the lady's fashion enables every lady to be her own bonnet maker.
MARION HARLAND,
Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemesis," and "Miriam,"
writes for Godey each month, and for no other magazine. A new novel by her will be published in 1866. We have also retained all our old and favorite contributors.

OF BEACONS.

'Mid the darkness of night, with the breakers before it,
The ship struggles on through the surge and the swell;
The landmark is lost, and the fog gathers o'er it
All black as the frown on the forehead of Hell.

Ah! woe to the hopes of the fear stricken seamen,
When the thunder rides down on the surges of air,
And the mad tempest howls like a devil or demon,
Arrayed in the darkness of death and despair.

But what is that light which comes glowing and gleaming,
Dispelling the gloom with its radiance warm?
"Tis the lighthouse! the lighthouse!" its beacon-light beaming,
All fearless and fully, like a star in the storm.

Oh! those glimmering rays fill the soul with new daring
Like the glances of God, through the scowl of the sky;
They come to the heart that is almost despairing,
Bringing joy to the bosom and light to the eye.

And thus, as I sail o'er Life's tremulous ocean,
'Mid the howl of the storm and the wild waters roll,
I see the fixed star of the deathless devotion,
Beaming warm through the windows that lighten my soul.

And it guided me on, o'er the breast of the billow,
To a land that has felt not the sorrows of this
Where the spirit, at last finds a peace-hallowed pillow,
And the weary a rest on the bosom of bliss.

The Fit of Ailsie's Shoe.

(Concluded.)

A magic word, supper, acted like a charm on all there. The crowd thinned and disappeared, and no one noticed Ailsie. Every gentleman had his own partner to attend to, and no one came near the little peasant girl. Ailsie was very glad, for she would rather endure hunger than be laughed at, and she was just beginning to nod asleep, when in came MacQuillan of the Reek saying that Lady Betty had sent him to conduct her to the supper room.

Lady Betty was sitting at the head of the most distant table, with a knife in her hand, and a huge cake before her. The more substantial eatables seemed to have been already discussed, for every guest had a slice of this cake on a plate before him or her. They were nibbling it and mincing it up with knives. All were silent, and all looked anxious and the dissatisfied. Ailsie thought the silence and the dissatisfaction was all on account of her audacious entrance.

"This way!" said Lady Betty MacQuillan, in a voice that made Ailsie start, and the august hostess cleared a place at her side for our blushing heroine. The wax lights blazed on Lady Betty's golden turban, and Ailsie did not dare to look at her face. She sat down, and Lady Betty with her own hand helped her to a small cut of the wonderful cake. Ailsie was very hungry, and the cake was very good. She devoured a few morsels eagerly; then she ceased eating.

"Why don't you eat child?" said Lady Betty, in a voice that again made Ailsie start: and this time she ventured to look up.

She looked up and stared as if the clouds had opened above her head. There was a little withered yellow face, with twinkling black eyes, looking down on her—a face she had seen before. It was Penny M'Cambridge, from Lough Neagh side, who was to have been her godmother only for the unfortunate pain in her heel, who was sitting there, dressed up in purple velvet and a cloth of gold turban. Oh mather!—What would be the end of this? Penny M'Cambridge befooling all the gentry folks of the country round pretending to be the lady of Castle Craigie! Or, stay! Whether was Penny M'Cambridge acting Lady Betty MacQuillan, or had Lady Betty MacQuillan been acting Penny M'Cambridge?

'Why don't you eat child?' repeated Lady Betty, as Ailsie sat turning her piece of cake about on her plate.

'I'm hungry enough,' said Ailsie, 'but I cannot ate this, my lady, barrin you want me to choke myself!'

And Ailsie held up a bit of cake in which was wedged the ring that declared her the heiress of Castle Craigie.

Well, I need no tell how after supper some of the guests who were spiteful ordered their carriages and whirled away in disgust; how others who were not spiteful, staid and danced the morning in; how some, who were good natured, congratulated Ailsie on her good luck; how others, who were quite the reverse yet frowned on the bewildered hero ine of the evening.—How Ailsie was kept close by the wonderful Lady Betty all the rest of the time; how, in the end, she was conducted to a splendid bedchamber, where she was frightened out of her senses at the grandeur of the furniture, and could not get a wink of sleep for the softness of the stately bed.

The news was not long in travelling over the country, and next day, when a carriage dashed up to the foot of the lonan, Jamie and his wife thought they were prepared to receive their fortunate daughter with dignity. But when Ailsie walked in to them in a white pelisse and sandal slippers, her bonnie dark eyes looking at them from under the shade of a pink satin hat and feathers, this delusion of theirs was dispelled.—Mary's exultation knew no bounds, and Jamie said, 'Can this fine lady be my daughter?' nervously, and with tears in his eyes. And Ailsie sat on a chair in the middle of the floor, she had swept so often, and cried, pulled off her fine hat, and threw it to the farthest corner of the kitchen vowing she would never leave her father and mother to go and live with Lady Betty. And Lady Betty who was present, was not a bit angry, although the beautiful hat was spoiled; but began telling how she would educate Ailsie, and take her to see the distant world, and how she would dress her like a princess, and marry her to some great gentleman who would either bear the name of MacQuillan, or adopt it.

Then Ailsie's heart seemed to break with one loud sob, and she rushed out of the cottage and down the lonan, bareheaded and weeping. Midway she stopped on the road, and pulling off one of her pretty shoes, she flung it with all her might till it struck the trunk of a small tree growing up the hill that led to the Hughie's.

'That's the slipper for you, for good luck, Hughie Devenish!' she said; an' if ever I forget you to marry a fine gentleman may the Lord turn my grau' gowns into rags again, an' the bit that I ate into sand in my mouth!'

To Ailsie said good bye to home. The next day Lady Betty and Miss MacQuillan departed from Castle Craigie for the Continent, where Lady Betty intended to give Ailsie a lady's education and accomplishments.

Four years passed away, and Jamie and Mary had grown accustomed to their improved circumstances, Lady Betty having proved as good as her word in bestowing on them all these benefits which she had enumerated when coaxing Ailsie away with her. Whether they were quite satisfied with the freak that fortune had played with them, they themselves knew best. When a neighbor went in to see them Mary had always something grand about 'my daughter Miss MacQuillan;' but the widow Devenish often shook her head, saying they were dull enough when nobody was by, and feared Ailsie had forgotten them.

Ailsie's education being finished, Lady Betty set her heart on an ambitious marriage for her favorite. She introduced her to society in Paris, and saw her making conquests right and left at some of the most fashionable watering places on the Continent. Ailsie's sparkling eyes were enchantingly foiled by her diamonds, and proposals in plenty were laid at her feet. But Ailsie, though enjoying right merrily the homage so freely paid her, only laughed at the offers of marriage as though it were quite impossible to regard them as anything but so many capital jokes. Lady Betty did not join in this view of the matter, but she had patience with her heiress for a considerable time, as Ailsie always modified her displeasure by saying, on her refusal of each 'good match,' 'I will marry a better man still, Lady Betty.'

After four years, Lady Betty who was a willful old lady, and whose patience was exhausted, quarrelled with her about it, and before she recovered her temper she took ill and died, and Ailsie found herself one day sad and solitary in Paris, without the protection of her kind indulgent friend.

Tears would not mend the matter now nor would they after the will which Lady Betty had left behind her, the conditions of which were fair enough, said Ailsie's suitors, when the contents of the important document became known. One year had the impatient old Lady given her heiress in the space of which time to become a wife. And if at the end of that year she was still found to be a spinster, not a penny had she, but might go back to the cottage at the top of the lonan and take with her her father and mother to work for them as before, to milk her cows, and feed her hens, and persuade herself, if she liked, that her wit, and her diamonds and her beauty, and her lovers, had all had their existence in a tantalizing dream, which had visited her between roosting time in the evening and cock crow of a churning morning. But, should she marry before the year was out, bestowing on her husband the name of MacQuillan, then would the spade of Lady Betty be appeased and the Indian thousands and the Irish rental, together with the old ancestral halls of Castle Craigie, would all belong to Ailsie and the fortunate possessor of her wealthy little hand.

Very fair conditions, said the suitors, and proposals poured in on Ailsie. But lo and behold the flinty hearted damsel proved as obstinate as ever; and in the midst of wonderment and disappointment, having attained the age of twenty-one and being altogether her own mistress, she wrote to her retainers at Castle Craigie to announce her arrival there upon a certain summer day. Great was the glory of Mary MacQuillan when she received a letter from her daughter declaring that her father and mother should at once take up their abode at the castle, being there to receive her at her arrival.—Great, in end, was her triumph when Miss O'Trimmins sat making her a gown of brown velvet, and a lace cap with lappets, in which to meet her child, and when Jamie's blue coat with the bright gold buttons came home.

Ailsie brought a whole horde of foreigners with her, brilliant ladies of rank, who called her pet and darling in broken English—and nerdy marquises—and counts with slender means, who were nevertheless very magnificent persons, and still hoped to win the Irish charmer. Balls, plays and sports of all kinds went on at the castle, and those of the gentry folks who from curiosity or a better feeling, came to visit Ailsie, and found her in the midst of a roomful of gattering company, dressed in a blue satin sack and pearl ear-rings, with her hair coming into her eyes in very bewitching little tendril curls, and seated between Mary in the brown velvet and lappets, and Jamie with the new coat and the buttons. They went away saying she was wonderful indeed, considering, delightfully odd and pretty, and they wondered which of those flaunting foreigners she was going to marry in the end. Meantime the year was flying away, and old neighbors of her mother's began to shake their heads over the fire, of nights, and to say that if Ailsie did not take care she might be a penniless lass yet.

This was in this position when, one fine morning, Miss MacQuillan, driving out with some of her grand friends, thought proper to stop at the door of Hughie Devenish's school house. The schoolmaster turned red and then pale as he saw Ailsie's feathers coming nodding to him through the doorway, followed by a brilliant party of grandees, and two footmen dragging a huge parcel of presents for his girls and boys. Ailsie coolly set her ladies and gentlemen unpacking the parcel and distributing its contents, while she questioned the shoemaker upon many subjects with the air of a little duchess, whose humor it was to make inquiries, and who never, certainly, had seen that place, much less conversed with that person before.

Hughie endured her whim with proud patience, till just before she left him, on opening his desk to restore a book to its place, she demanded to see a certain little dark thing which was peeping out from under some papers. Then, with evident annoyance he produced a little black kid shoe. So the story runs.

'Why it's only a slipper!' said Ailsie, turning it about and looking at it just as the Widow Dervish had detected Hughie in doing. 'What an odd thing to keep a shoe in a desk! But it looked like the cover of a book. Good morning!'

As the party drove off it is said that one of the gentlemen remarked that the schoolmaster was a fine looking intelligent fellow, fit for a better station than that which he filled. And it is further said that next day Ailsie made a present to this gentleman of a snuff box worth a hundred guineas.

When Ailsie went to her room on her return home on this August afternoon, she walked over to a handsome gold casket which stood upon her table, unlocked it, and took out a little kid slipper which looked as if she must have stolen it out of Hughie's desk. In the sole of it was pinned a slip of paper, on which were scrawled, in a crude hand, the words:

'If ever I forget you, Hughie Devnish, to marry a fine gentleman, may the Lord turn my grain' gowns into rags agen, and the bit that I ate into sand in my mouth.'

'And, the Lord's goin' to do it very fast,' said Ailsie, falling back into her old way of talking as she looked at this specimen of her old way of writing, 'If I do not look to it't very soon, an' he keepin' my word! An' God knows Hugie Devnish,' she added, as she locked her box again with a sharp snap, 'you're more of a gentleman any day the sun rises on you than ever poor Ailsie'll be of a lady!'

One day the lady of the castle sent a message to her guests to say she was indisposed (Ailsie had picked up a few pretty words), from the heat, and must beg them to excuse her absence from among them for the rest of the day.

It was on this very evening that Hughie Devnish was walking up and down his school room flour, musing, I am told, on the impossibility of his enduring in the future to have Ailsie coming into the school at any hour she pleased, to play the mischief with his heart, and the lady patroness among the boys and girls. He had just come to this point of resolving to give up his labors here and go off to seek his fortune in America, when click! went the latch of the door, and (of course, thinks he, it must be a dream) in walking Ailsie. Not the Lady Bountiful of the morning, in satin gown and nodding feathers, but the veritable old Ailsie of four years ago, in the same old garb—cotton dress, brogues, straw bonnet tipped over her nose, and all (where on earth did she get them?) in which she had tripped into him on that over August evening, of which this was the anniversary, when she had thrown him her invitation to Lady Betty's ball.

Now the gloaming was just bursting out the glare of the sunset behind the latticed windows, and when Hughie had pinched himself and found he was not dreaming at all the next because very sure that he had gone out of his senses with trouble, and that he was looking at an object conjured up before his eyes by his own diseased imagination. However, the apparition looked very substantial as it approached, and sitting on the end of one of the forms it displayed a paper which it unfolded in its hands—hands that were white instead of brown, making the only difference between this and the old Ailsie.

'I've got a letther here Mather Devnish,' said Ailsie's old brogue, and in the sly mischievous tone that Hughie remembered well; an', if ye plase, I want ye to answer it for me. I'm a bad clerk myself, ye know.

Not knowing what to say to her he took the letter out of her hand and glanced over it. It was a proposal of marriage from Ailsie's old tormentor, MacQuillan of the Rerk.

The schoolmaster was trembling, you may believe, with many confused ideas and sensations when he folded the letter and returned it; but he inked his pen manfully and produced a sheet of paper, then sat waiting with much patience for his visitor's dictation. But Ailsie sat quiet with her eyes upon the floor, and so there was a cruel pause.

'Well,' says Hughie at last, with a bewitched feeling, as if he were addressing only his pupil of old days, 'what am I to say in the answer.'

'Feth I don't know,' says Ailsie.

'But what reply do you mean to give?' asked Hughie, striving, we are assured, to command himself. 'Am I to say yes or no in the letter?'

'I tell ye I don't know, Hughie Devnish,' said Ailsie, crossly. 'I gave a promise to another an' he has never freed me from it yet. I believe ye'll know best what to put in the letter yerself.'

'Ailsie!' cried Hughie, rising to his feet, 'did you come here for nothing but to dhrive me mad? Or, evourteen, is it possible you would marry me yet?'

'Feth it is, Hughie,' said Ailsie.

And after the letter was written they went in and had tea with Widow Devnish.

The next morning Miss MacQuillan appeared among her guests as if nothing had happened, but before night a whisper flew from ear to ear that the heiress was engaged while the lady herself did not contradict the report. Every man looked darkly at his neighbor, and 'Who is he?' was the question on every lip. At last, 'It is not I,' said one double drone, and flew off to seek honey elsewhere; and 'It is not I,' said the others, one by one, and followed his example: and by and by Ailsie was left peaceably in possession of her castle; whereupon there was a quiet wedding, at which Mary, Jamie, and the Widow Dervish were the only guests.

A nine days' wonder expires on the tenth and after a few years Hughie Devnish MacQuillan, Esq. was looked upon as no despicable person by many who thought it their duty to sneer on his wedding day.

THE EARNEST USE OF LIFE.

Let us think how little we use life thoroughly, how little we really live our life, how seldom we are in the humor to carry out life's great and solemn purposes, how we let its opportunities fly by us like thistledown on the wind. Why are we not always denying ourselves, taking up the cross and following Christ? Why are we not always on the watch for every occasion in which a word may be said or a deed done, or a thought thought, that shall be a protest for Christ in this vain and sinful world? Why is God's love but a rare wintry gleam, and never a steady summer in our soul? Think, for instance, of such a thing as prayer—what a wonderful thing it is! To kneel, an atom in creation, to the Almighty; to be able to bare our hearts to him, and to feel sure that the least throb, as well as the great spasm, is perfectly appreciated, felt, understood, sympathized with by that awful yet loving being!

And yet how wintry our hearts are in our prayers! how seldom they burst into cheerful praises! how constantly the sky above us seems pale and heavy, and dull and impenetrable, and our hearts beneath abide in their sleep! Or if a snowdrop here and there wanders out, and now and thee a pincher primrose, there are not flowers enough to fashion into even the poorest garland.

Mutton the Meat for Farmers.

The cheapest meat for farmers is mutton, it may safely be said it costs nothing. The wool that is annually sheared from the body of every sheep, richly pays for the keeping. In this climate it costs less to keep sheep than at the North, on account of the shortness of our winters. Then there is the increase—an item of great importance.—The increase is so much clear profit. From this increase the farmers can all his meat for the year, if he likes. Or, he may save the lambs and take some of the older sheep in their places. The pelt of the sheep, if killed for mutton, is also saved and sold, which is worth nearly as much as the sheep would sell for. It is also the most convenient meat to have on hand. In the warmest weather a farmer can take care of the sheep after being killed, without losing it spoil. With beef this is not so easy. One hand can kill and dress a sheep in an hour. It takes but little time or trouble to kill a sheep, not near as much as to kill and dress a hog or a beef. On account of convenience and economy, we say keep sheep and live upon mutton. We have said nothing about its being the healthiest food. This is admitted. It needs no arguments or facts to prove it. It is true that pork is the chief meat of farmers. It is the unhealthiest of all, whether fresh or saturated with salt to preserve it sound. Let every farmer keep sheep. They are the most profitable stock on a farm. The hog's back only yields bristles while the sheep's yields downy wool. All that you feed to the hog is gone, unless you kill it, while the sheep will pay for its keep with its fleece yearly. The hog is a filthy, voracious animal—the sheep gentle as a dove and neat and cleanly.

A LARGE BARN.

A correspondent of the Utica Herald gives the following description of a barn on the farm of a Mr. Lyon in Lewis county at N. Y. The farm consists of 800 acres of cleared land. Mr. Lyon keeps a dairy of 90 cows:—

"The barn is 221 feet long by 48 feet broad. It sets upon a wall 20 feet high, which contains a thousand yards of masonry. The drive way is 30 feet above the bottom and twenty-one wagons can be unloaded at once from the barn floor. The mows on either side of the drive floor have capacity for holding 650 tons of hay before you get above the level of the barn floor, and it is proposed to have machinery driven by water power for catching up the whole load and dumping it into the bays at once. The stables in the basement will hold two hundred head of cattle, and near by is an immense muck bed where any amount of this material may be readily had for mingling with the manures or using in the stables to absorb the liquid manures. There are thirteen ventilators running from the stables to the top of the building, the height of which to the peak is eighty feet. In the basement it is proposed to have a manure cellar and machinery for doing all the work of threshing, cutting roots and feed, carried by water power which is conveniently near. This barn cost in the neighborhood of $42,000, and when completed, go to the machinery, &c., will probably be the most interesting barn structure in the State."

A California gold digger having become rich, desired a friend to purchase him a library of books. The friend obeyed, and received a letter of thanks thus worded: —"I am obliged to you for the pains of your selection; I particularly admire a grand religious poem about Paradise, by a Mr. Milton, and a set of plays (quite delightful) by a Mr. Shakespeare. If these gentlemen should write and publish any more, be sure and send them to me."

THE LOVE OF THE BRUTES.—A male chimpanzee has just been received at the London Zoological gardens, and had a hearty welcome from the female chimpanzee there. They kissed each other, then the male patted the female's face, danced around her, took her round the waist, as if he was going to waltz, when they expressed their joy by dancing and bowling in ludicrous concert.

The Approaching Parliament.

In a few days the representatives of the people will assemble at the new capitol, Ottawa, and in the new buildings erected at such cost and with such skill, so that they are considered second to none on this this continent. But there is more than architectural design or magnificence to be attended to and also. I. At no period in Canadian history did more depend on the wisdom, prudence, careful legislation, and action of those into whose hands are committed the management of our affairs. The subject so kept secret—viz., cause of Hon. George Brown's resignation—will very soon be revealed, and the wisdom of the course either approved or condemned. We have no fear, however, that Mr. Brown is in any fault in the matter. The subject of Reciprocity, too, will engage the attention of the Assemblies. The fact that Messrs. Galt and Howland have gone to Washington for the purpose of placing themselves in communication with the authorities on the subject, seems to indicate that there are hopes of securing either the continuance of the Treaty or a respite for its further consideration. Therefore, let us hope that the terms of any new regulations may be such as will be proportionately just to both.

The effect of forcing the Canadians into an annexation by rescinding the treaty will prove another failure if tried, and this the American people must plainly understand, as all the means of the most extensive commerce are at command by means of our noble St. Lawrence, and Railroads; and it is not to be supposed that with the Eastern Provinces, the West Indies, and South America for a market, that Canadians would remain inactive awaiting the moment to be received into the union. If Americans think they can shut us out of a market for our produce they will find themselves disappointed.

Confederation will again be under consideration. From the appearance of affairs in the Eastern provinces, the subject has not been making very rapid strides, still it has gained ground. From the fact that the Home Government are so anxious for the completion of it, we feel, good reason to assure ourselves that it will yet be accomplished.

We desire confederation—nay, we require it—for our mutual protection and benefit; but even Confederation may be purchased at too dear a rate.

To Upper Canadians, their present municipal institutions are satisfactory as would be the continuance of our elective institutions. Let us therefore hope that whatever scheme of union the wisdom of the governments may adopt that they will be careful not to put a rude hand on those institutions that are so dear to Upper Canadians, and have been found to work so well while in operation viz:—our educational and our election institutions.

THE CONVERSAZIONE.

The Conversazione in connection with the Literary Club was a decided success, as far attendance is concerned. The Victoria Hall was very well filled, although the evening was most inopportune, being unusually cold. Sheriff Hall, in the absence of the President, presided, and addressed the audience extempore—in which he promised those present, what was really given, a very pleasant entertainment. It would be a little out of place, perhaps, to enter into a critical report of the performance of those who had volunteered their services for the occasion; and therefore we will content ourselves this time by steering between "Scylla" and "Charybdis." Let the two provoke the former to mortal combat, or the latter to use his pugnard in self defence, or in defence of the Club. We hope, however, that a few remarks will not prove offensive to any one. The reading, on the whole, was fair; but there were exceptions. Clearness, distinctness, tone, tone, and emphasis, were, in a few cases, evidently never thought of; yet we think that good reading cannot be where these are not. And certainly there are some of the things aimed at in good reading. The singing was better than the reading. "Music at Nightfall" was well rendered, as was also "Murmuring Sea," by the Misses Kennedy. The reminiscences of the recitation of a "Report from Below," and also the reading of "Viriliana and his Death," kept the whole house in bursts of laughter; and the "Lost Child," by the same gentleman, which was deservedly encored, was truly equal to any of the other performances. We are pleased to find that the receipts of the Club were so tangibly acknowledged by the citizens, as the large audience and the handsome sum of $52 is the result, fully testified.

Let us hope that this will not be the Alpha and the Omega of the Club. We are sure that the members have no reason to feel disappointed, but, on the contrary, gratified that so much call for and has been so amply responded to. If a hint is permissible, we would remark that another entertainment would be very acceptable to the public; and if the result should equal the last, the $50 would be a nice offering to the "mine," to aid those good ladies who labour so incessantly in order to provide food and clothing for those who may be in need.

School Trustees.

The election of School Trustees came off yesterday. There was considerable interest exhibited, but in a quiet way. There was no opposition except in the Center Ward.

In the North Ward, D. W. Dumble, Esq., was elected by acclamation.

In the East Ward, W. Clinton, Esq., was also returned by acclamation.

In the South Ward, W. Helm, Esq., was returned without opposition.

In the Centre Ward, it was understood that Mr. Stevenson was about to run for the Ward; but, at the appointed hour, Mr. P. C. Blanchet, was nominated, and also Mr. Charles Cameron, and a poll instituted. At three o'clock, however, Mr. Blanchet, finding that there was a strong opposition, and that he would not be likely to gain the election, retired; consequently Mr. Cameron was declared duly elected. There would in this have been any opposition to Mr. Blanchet, but for certain rumors of very wrong motives for his endeavoring to get on the Board, viz: to meet one whom he considers an old opponent. This, if true, it must be admitted, would not be for the interest of the School or the harmony of the Board, and could work no good. Every one believes Mr. Blanchet well qualified for the office, but under the circumstances, many thought it would be best for the future weal of the Town that he should withdraw from the contest; and he very wisely did so.

Orange Intelligence.

The following Brethern were duly elected Officers of Hastings L. O. L. No. 549, on Friday evening, Dec. 29th, ult.

Regular night of meeting, last Thursday of every month.

Temple Dedication.

On Tuesday night the large Assembly Rooms in Scott's Block were dedicated for temperance purposes. The Hall is a very commodious one, and was well filled on the occasion. Very appropriate and stirring addresses were delivered by the Rev. Mr. Cantlon, T. M. Fairbairn, Esq., and Mr. R. Rutherford, which were most attentively received. A Choir, under the direction of Mr. Parnell, occupied the intervals with sweet music. The greatest praise is due to Mr. Parnell for his very valuable services at those meetings on every occasion requested; more than mere votes of thanks are due to him, and those who assisted in rendering the meeting so pleasant. The Templars have now a Hall second to none in Town. They have fitted it up very creditably. Let us hope that their efforts will be duly appreciated, and effective in the great object of their mission—the rescue of drunkards from a drunkard's grave, and perhaps worse, a drunkard's condemnation.

A Usury Case.

The Bank of Montreal vs. Scott et. al. This important case came off at Toronto, on Friday last. All the employees of the Bank here were summoned and had to appear at Toronto. The Bank was under the necessity of sending a gentleman from Toronto to attend to the business in the absence of the Agent, &c. The council for the plaintiff were J. H. Cameron, Q. C., and Mr. Dennistoun; for the Defendants, Mr. G. Galt, Q. C., Hon. S. Smith, Q. C., and Mr. B. Harrison. This was an action on a promissory note for $8,500. The defendants admitted making the note, but set up the plea of usury. The jury could not agree, standing 8 to 4 against the bank, we are informed. Being sent back, it was found after three hours and a half that they could not agree, and were therefore dismissed.

Township Elections—Continued.

Stanhope.—Jas. McIville, Joseph Beatty, Henry Fitzsimons, H. Jones, John Brown.

Minden and Dysart.—Andrew Sharp, Alexander McDougall, Abner Baker, John Lucas, John Brown.

Snowdon.—S. S. Peck, R. C. Garratt, J. Otto, John Bryan, Samuel Logan.

Galway.—All the old Councillors were re-elected.

Melancholy Accident at a Wedding.

On Tuesday last, while a wedding party were returning home after the marriage ceremony, the father of the bride, a Mr. O'Flaherty, got thrown out of his waggon while crossing Pigeon Creek, and falling on his head suffered such injuries as caused immediate death. His son also received severe bruises at the same time.

New Trustees Grammar School.

The Town Council at its meeting last night, appointed Col. Haultain, Dr. Burnham and James Stevenson, Esq. Trustees for the Grammar School, in accordance with the new Grammar School Act. The County Council have the appointing of three more.

New Councils.

On Monday next, the 15th instant, the councillors elect for 1866, will meet at their different places of assembling, for the purpose of making and subscribing the necessary declarations, &c., of qualification and of office, and thus organize their Councils for the current year.

Last week while a team belonging to Mr. Hilliard, Lumber Merchant, of this Town, was crossing Balsam Lake, they happening on a piece of ice where two roots in the ice met, went down, and one of the horses was drowned. There were three men on the sleigh at the time, but none of them received any damage.

Ashburnham.

The election of School Trustees, for the village passed off very quietly. Mr A. Ingram was reelected by acclamation, and Mr. John Craigie was chosen in the room of Mr. Johnston whose term of office expired.

We are informed that Dr. Ryerson will visit Peterboro on the 14th proximo for the purpose of consulting the friends of education on subjects connected therewith.

New Publications

We have received the January Number of that popular monthly, "Good Words." The contents of the present number are: A Story of "Modern English life;" "My Dervish life:" "Refuge;" "The Story of John Huss;" "Two Pascals from an Old Picture;" "Health of Body and Mind;" "Jonathan Swift's Distinguished Letter from Abroad;" "A Question of Minutes;" "Children's Carols;" "On the Enforced Pauses of Life;" "Justification by Faith and its first Preacher." This excellent work is edited by Norman MacLeod, D. D.; is published by Strahan & Co., No. 50 St. Peter Street, Montreal; and may be obtained at Graham & Stratton's Peterborough.

The Canada Farmer.—We have received the first number, for 1866, of this valuable publication, and we do not hesitate to recommend it before all other Agricultural journals to the Canadian Farmers. This number seems to be an improvement on the previous year, and the low price places it with in the reach of every Farmer. Published by the Hon. George Brown, Toronto, at $1 per annum. Subscriptions received at Graham & Stratton's, Peterborough.

We give to-day "A Splendid Offer" of the proprietor of the Toronto Leader. While differing from the Leader in politics and other (to us) important questions, still it is due to that journal to say that it is conducted with stability, is the ablest journal in the Conservative interest in Canada, and deserves an extensive patronage. Read the advertisement.

The advertisement of the Toronto Globe—Hon. George Brown, proprietor—has also appeared in our columns during the past two weeks. We consider this the ablest journal in Canada. It is strongly Reform, and contains the ablest articles on Confederation, Reciprocity, and other subjects of general interest, of any Canadian publication, and is second to none on this continent. It has, and deservedly so, a very large circulation. Both the Daily Globe and Leader can be obtained every day at Graham & Stratton's, Peterborough. Subscriptions will also be received for the Weeklies.

The "Evening Post" is the title of a new daily paper now published in Ottawa. It is neatly printed, is a very good size for an evening paper, and appears to be under good management. It is in favor of the present Coalition, and an advocate of Confederation. It has our best wishes for its success.

The great Maitland case has already occupied two days of the courts in Toronto, and is not decided as we go to Press. It is expected to last 2 or 3 days more.

CURLING.

The long expected Bonspiel between the Otonabee Curling Club and the "Waverly" of Cobourg, came off at Gore's Landing, Rice Lake, on Wednesday, the 3rd instant. The weather was favourable; and although the powerful mid-day sun induced a few of the "Keener Curlers of the core," to "cast their duplikees to the wark," it was only for a short spell, as old Boreas soon asserted his supremacy and made the boulders glad to resume their toppery. The ice was smooth and upon the whole very satisfactory; but in one or two places a little bias-ed, and so giving occasion to test the skill of the competitors in out and in-elbowing, and in bar rowing. As soon as the match commenced it became apparent that the game was to be closely contested, and every man on either side put forth his best effort

"To guard, or draw, or wick a bore,
Or up the rink like John roar,
In time o' need."

And every shot was sternly fought for, as evinced by the fact that more than one-half of the heads played, yielded only one shot each. It would be superfluous to say that the excitement was most intense, as each well aimed stone curled its way to accomplish its destined mark; and impossible to tell how "theesons" were waved, hats thrown up, and lusty cheers rent made the welkin ring, as some great shot turned the scale for either side. Playing was commenced at 12 o'clock and continued till four; and although no time was the Waverly ahead on all the rinks; yet she led for a considerable time on one, and was so "plagny" near up on the others, that it was very hard to foretell which side was the likelier to win the day. But when time was called it was found that the laurels had fallen to Otonabee by a majority of 12 shots, as follows, viz:

After the contest, the "brithers of the roaring game" sat down to a substantial dinner, got up in first-rate style by mine host Harris. The distance the friends from Cobourg had to travel homewards, and the unwillingness of the Otonabee folks to be on the Lake after dark, rendered a lengthened symposium unadvisable; so, after spending "an wee short hour" in friendly and social intercourse, and Curler's "crack," the members of the Waverly Club started for home, bidding adieu to their norland competitors amid hearty cheers, and resolved to try their mettle again some other day. The Otonabee lads also turned their faces homewards, feeling proud of their victory, and vastly pleased that, with their diminutive keen run cast iron stanes, they had held their ain and mair against the bountiful and gigantic grantes of their opponents.—Com.

Monaghan Township Council.

Monaghan, Dec. 29th, 1865.

The Council met at 10 o'clock—all the members present.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

In reply to a communication from Mr. Pearce, of the County Treasurer's Office, stating that he had effected the sale of certain lots which could not be sold by Sheriff for arrears of taxes, amounting to $1003.36, the Council granted the sum of $7 for the services thus rendered.

Mr. Robert Laing, Jr., applied for liberty to open up the concession line between concessions 7 and 8, as far eastward as lot 7, in order to get to his land, and to have the timber cut on same for his trouble.—Granted.

The Reeve and Councillor Collins having been appointed a Committee to enquire why certain taxes were collected for the year 1864, report as follows, which was received and adopted:

That upon enquiry they find that the taxes charged upon Park Lot No. 14, in 14th concession, to Mr. Brownscombe, ought not so to be, as said Brownscomb declares he was not in possession of it and the taxes should have been charged to the Proprietor, Thos. Bradburn, whose name was not on the Roll for said lot.

An order of $10 00, was given in favor of Mr. G. Birney, for the making of a culvert at the Town Hall.

An order for $11 25 to Mr. Romaine for printing.

Orders for orders were also given.

The Council adjourned sine die.—Com.

MUNICIPALITY of BURLEIGH, &c.

A meeting of the Council of the Municipality of Burleigh, Anstruther, Chandos, Cardiff, Monmouth, Harcourt and Bruton was held the 27th day of December, 1865.

Present,—James Golborne, Reeve; Giles Stone and Henry Maxwell.

Proposed by Mr. Maxwell, seconded by Mr. Stone,—That the following bills and accounts be paid out of the Treasury of this Municipality:—

C. A. Weller	$21 00
R. Romaine	5 98
T. Menzies	3 65
E. Hall	5 28
E. Hall, Returning Officer	1 50
Three Selectors of Jurors	6 00
Services of Municipal Council	57 00
Total	$94 41

Proposed by Mr. Maxwell, and seconded by Mr. Stone.—That the petition of Richard Sean, John Sean, Jas. Mitchell and others be laid over for further consideration.

Proposed by Mr. Stone, and seconded by Mr. Maxwell,—That the sum of thirty dollars be paid to James Mitchell on acct. for assessing and collecting.

The Council then adjourned.

Election of Councillors for the Municipality of Burleigh, &c.

Pursuant to notice, a meeting of the Electors of the United Townships of Burleigh, Anstruther, Chandos, Cardiff, Monmouth, Harcourt and Bruton, was held for the purpose of electing five free and proper persons to serve as Councillors for this Municipality for the year 1866.

Proposed by Mr. R. Spencer, and seconded by Mr. W Meyers,—That Mr. Giles Stone be elected as a Councillor for the year 1866.

Proposed by Mr. J. Collins, seconded by Mr. P. Horan,—That Mr. Patrick Scott be elected as a Councillor for the year 1866.

Proposed by Mr. P. Phelan, seconded by Mr. W. Wilson, Jr.,—That Mr. David Robin Castiday be elected as a Councillor for the year 1866.

Proposed by Mr. Middleton, seconded by Mr. W. Wilson Sr.,—That Mr. Caleb Souseley be elected as a Councillor for the year 1866.

Proposed by Mr. H. Giles, seconded by Mr. W. Stone,—That Mr. James Golborne be elected as a Councillor for the year 1866.

Proposed by Mr. J. Scott, seconded by Mr. J. Dunlop,—That Mr. John Carroll be elected as a Councillor for the year 1866.

Proposed by Mr. J. Steen, seconded by Mr. C. Burt,—That Mr. John young be elected as a Councillor for the year 1866.

On a show of hands being taken a large majority was in favor of Messrs. Stone, Scott, Castiday, C. Sousley and Carroll.

A Poll was demanded by Mr. Henry Giles in favor of Mr. Golborne.

A Poll was taken and 19 votes were polled Mr. Golborne getting 2 and Mr. Young 5; when Messrs. Golborne and Young resigned.

The following gentlemen were then declared duly elected as Councillors for the year 1866:—Messrs. Giles Stone, P. Scott, D. R. Castiday, C. Sousley and J. Carroll.

EDWARD SMYTHE HALL,
Returning Officer.

Anstruther, Jan. 1st, 1866.

Norwood Board of Public Instruction.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Mr. Editor,—Permit me, through the medium of your columns, to make a few brief remarks regarding the proceedings of the Board of Public Instruction for the Eastern Section of the County of Peterboro'. This Board met on Monday, the 11th of December, at 10 o'clock, a. m., pursuant to notice given, and proceeded at once to the examination of candidates. The Board, in preference to the mode hitherto followed in examining candidates, adopted the system of written examinations, considering it to be a more accurate test of the attainments of candidates. The idea was undoubtedly good. But, sir, the conduct of some of the members while examining the papers of the Teachers was anything but praise worthy. That some of the members wear a black coat, I don't deny; but, from the sneering and ludicrous conduct exhibited by them while perusing the examination papers, I was led to conclude, sir, that there must be "a thread of blue in it." Nor was it an uncommon occurrence, Mr. Editor, to see the papers handed round among the visitors, to be made the subject of derision. Now, sir, do you not consider such conduct as that highly condemnable? Undoubtedly so. And yet it was done by those who would be highly offended, were you to designate them by any other title inferior to that of "gentlemen." But, sir, some of the members of this Board are exceedingly illiterate, and scarcely know the first rudiments of educat on. I think, sir, that it will be admitted by all who know some of them that they are far from being acquainted with the simplest education. I verily believe, Mr. Editor, that one of them could not define the word "Educa ion," were he put to the test; and yet he is a member of the Board. I cannot imagine, sir, how this modern Saul can muster up presumption enough as to present himself among the prophets. But, Mr. Editor, as you are aware, it does not require a penetrating genius to behold, under his borrowed garb, the more befitting cloak of "Daw." You must not think, Mr. Editor, that I find fault with him because he is illiterate. Not at all. But who does he assume a position that he is wholly incompetent to fill? But to come to a close, Mr. Editor, (thanking you at the same time for inserting these few remarks) I believe that the members of such a Board as the one referred to, should be men of education, men of common civility, men not so entirely devoid of the finer feelings, as some we could lay our hand upon.

Yours, &c.,

PLAY FAIR.

QUERY.

Mr. Editor,—In looking over the columns of your last week's issue, I perceived that Henry Collins is returned as Councillor for Ward No. 2. But in scrutinising the votes 4 illegal votes were polled, 3 in favour of Henry Collins and 1 in favour of Robert Tully. At the close of the poll 19 votes were polled for Henry Collins, and 17 for Robert Tully, therefore deducting 3 votes from H. Collins and 1 from R. Tully brings the two Candidates to a tie. Query, which of the two Candidates is elected, as the Returning Officer did not decide by giving his casting vote.

FREEHOLDER.

North Monaghan, Jan. 10th, 1866.

Starvation.—The Quebec Chronicle states the inhabitants of St. Maurer are in want of the very necessaries of life. Many families are, it appears, compelled to burn a portion of their movable effects for lack of fuel of any other kind. Others have parted with the most necessary household articles, in order to raise a little ready money to procure the immediate requirements of life. Others still are suffering from cold and hunger in their most awful form; and it is certain that the proportion of mortality from these causes would have been very great, were it not for the timely charity displayed by a few Christian neighbors, who drew largely upon their own means for the purpose of succouring their needy fellow-citizens. This is terrible to think of; and we hear a large amount of destitution exists in Montreal. Markets high; wages low; the wood dear—poor families, who are too proud to tell it, are in extreme distress, and Heaven only knows how they are to be relieved.

School Conventions.

The Chief Superintendent of Education for Upper Canada, Dr. Ryerson, has issued a circular intimating his intention to hold County School Conventions, in each County in the Province, during the present and following months, to which he invites all Municipal Councillors, Local Superintendents, visitors, teachers, and all others interested in public schools to attend. The Leader states the object of these Conventions to be:—

1. To consider suggestions for the amendment of the school law and improvement of the system. 2. To consider whether there should not be one board of trustees for each township, and whether the township Council should not be such board—thus putting an end to many of the inconveniences and annoyance that exist under the present system, levying and collecting school rates, altering school sections divisions, &c. This plan has been adopted in several of the neighboring States, and found to work well. 3. To consider "whether each municipal council should not be invested with power to bring to account and punish by fine, or requiring to work on the roads, parents who do not send their children between seven and fifteen years of age, to some school, at least four months in the year." Dr Ryerson desires to ascertain the wishes of the French, that they wanted no help from the Church and would try and conquer without the Virgin Mary? From that hour Pat held back: he wasn't going to be killed here and roasted hereafter.

I'd rather, if I was given the choice, fight the English without powder than without the Priest.

"The Church is the only cry you have in Ireland; and if you exclude the Church and its wrongs, where are your grievances? I'm not fool enough to say that grievances are at all necessary—begin the fight, and there will soon be plenty of them; but I mean that, in ignoring the Church, you are throwing out the best trump in your hand. Who is the best recruiting sergeant the world ever saw? Who can go over a bad cause and make the best of a good one? Who has such advantages in the way of secrecy and rapid intelligence? Who appeals to the common man with the same knowledge of his desires and his hopes hereafter? Who knows the vocabulary of the people so well that he can insinuate the very thing he seems to condemn, and dictate the very step he denounces from the altar? The Priest. And this is the man you say you don't want? This is the man you purpose to replace by a gin-pulper from New York, or a master-tailor from Dame Street!

You want enthusiasm, and you turn away from the great fountain of all enthusiasm? You want union, and you reject the great bonds of union! You want that rush fanaticism by which Western people supply the fatalism of Eastern nations, and you ignore what supplies it to this world, out of the illimitable hopes of the next one!

Now, if Ireland were rich in ecclesiastical establishments—had she splendid churches like Spain or Italy, great convents and fine monasteries—I could understand why you secured yourselve from the clergy. The pillage might be more profitable than the priest. But what have you in Ireland? The little wayside chapel, poor and bare as a barn. Where is the plate of gold and silver? Where the pictures by Murillo and Raphael? Where the saints with emeralds for eyes and diamonds for toe-nails? I wouldn't give you fifty pounds for all the robberies of the Catholic chapels west of the Shannon, even if you were to throw me in, as a whip, Bishop McHale's vestment!

I intended to say a word or two about 'the admirable secrecy,' as you call it of your organization, but I forbear. I can only say, if you succeed in excluding spies and Government informers, you are the first rebels in Ireland that ever accomplished that object. It is said that for every man that took the field in '98 there were two informers. Believe me, that the moment one fellow turns traitor, fifty will follow him. These fellows will crowd the Castle, like the crush of people at a French theatre, and they'll have to make a 'queue' not to make a disturbance.

Not that the Irish are worse than their neighbours, but that 'canaille' is 'canaille' everywhere, and if you cannot learn a rising with men of fortune, you must content yourself to deal with the worst materials, of human nature, in the worst moments and with the worst passions in action. I wish you well out of the experiment, but I won't share it. No, sir, I'll give neither Whig or Tory Attorney-General the triumph to arraign, convict and hang Milo McCaskey. The man who braved Ross, scourged Gortschakoff fought hand to hand with Omar Pacha, and shared the bivouac of Lamoricre, shall not grace the dock of Cashel or Tralee.

You are preparing what the Italians call a famous 'Fiasco,' and if it were not that so many of you will be hanged, I would call on you to laugh at it. And after all, sir, I confess the gallows or the bolks is a smart price to pay for a duel in the dark, or the possession of a Federal uniform and a six-shooter. It is but the smallest pastime for the same money I ever heard of.

Poor a thing as Italian brigandage is, it is better than your Irish revolution. The rascals here have both priests and people with them. They have an inaccessable territory, and (they believe at least) the blessings of the Holy Father on their good work. I decline, sir, therefore, to be a command of the army that does not exist, and will only muster to be hanged or transported.

I refuse to associate myself with a project which must fail, and I reject all offers of rank or station from those who have none of their own, and I am with every assurance of the deepest consideration, your humble and devoted servant.

MILO M'CASKEY,
Count, Lieut.-General, and Camerlere Interno to His Holiness the Pope.

Summary of Foreign News.

The intelligence from England, in regard to Jamaica, is very definite and satisfactory. Gov. Eyre has been suspended by the British Government. Sir Henry Stork—whose administrative capacity and integrity are highly spoken of by the English press—is temporarily appointed Governor of Jamaica. The Home Government are dealing with the Jamaica difficulty very prudently. From the intimations given by Earl Russell to a highly respectable deputation which waited upon him, it is the design of the authorities to have the trouble and its causes most searchingly investigated, and strict justice awarded. The island, as might reasonably be expected, is by no means politically tranquil; and the influence arising from the disturbance, and the scenes of retaliation connected with it, is of such a nature as to arouse public attention to the existing social state of things. Spirited discussions are taking place both in public and private with reference to the administration of affairs in the island. As a consequence, the facts connected with the recent disturbance are becoming better understood, and the truth begins to be more clearly manifested. The aspects of the Jamaica trouble have very much changed since the first announcements made to the world. The silly outcry against the Baptists, as the fomenters of treason, has slumbered into death. Gordon, whose life was so outrageously sacrificed, turns out to be, not a Baptist, but an Episcopalian.—And Bogle's professed religious views were marked with peculiarities not recognized by the Baptist body. As the case progresses, the position of the Jamaica officials by no means gathers strength. Ample evidence to justify the suspension of all civil rights is still lacking: and their side of the case is growing weaker and weaker. Present conclusions point to the probability that in the investigation now being instituted, the ruling powers will come out of the political ordeal with very lame legs to support them.

The Papal Loan.—The London Star says that the Papal Government has contracted a loan of nine million crowns, or nearly two millions sterling, with the Houses of Rothschild and Fould, the loan being necessitated by the approaching evacuation of the French troops and the consequent increase of the Pontifical forces.

The Montreal correspondent of the Globe says:—"The Redemorist fathers in St. Patrick's have forbidden the congregation to sell, buy, or read the Witness, and the Bishop has issued the same prohibition to French Catholics, owing to a correspondent stating that the Redemplorists were making money by the sale of scapularies in the next issue."

Count McCaskey to the Fenians Greeting.

We have made allusion to the reply which McCaskey sent to the Fenians when offered the chief command of their armies. It is so eminently characteristic of the eccentric Hibernian immortalized in the pages of Tony Butler, that we give a portion of it. He says:—

You may talk of an Irish Republic! why, sir, since the day when Mr Keogh promised to make Athlone a port for the Atlantic trade, there has been nothing equal to this Irish Republicanism! Are you aware that there is not so feudal a people in Europe? Do you not know that class distinctions and respect for rank that is associated with ancient blood, are amongst the most cherished feelings of all Irishmen? Irish Republicans! why I sat in the monarchist, par excellence, of all Europe. Your Irish Republicanism is but the 'backwater of Irish emigration. It comes home again with the swagger and impudence and brogue of pretensions of the fellow who has left all the importance of the 'Irish ticket' in an election, and wants to play a conspicuous part in the country which he left as a cow-boy. Strange associates these, sir, for a man like myself. Your Irish Republicans remind me of what Barney Caffe called his opponent in a controversy—an 'infernal Orange Papist.'

You are mighty boastful that there is nothing religious in the present project, and that the clergy are adverse to you rather than friendly. Of all your confessions this is the very weakest and poorest. Why, don't you know that the failure of Humbert's expedition was the democratic declaration of the French, that they wanted no help from the Church and would try and conquer without the Virgin Mary? From that hour Pat held back: he wasn't going to be killed here and roasted hereafter.

I'd rather, if I was given the choice, fight the English without powder than without the Priest.

Intense Cold in Minnesota.

Four Men Frozen to Death—One Hundred and Forty Sheep Buried in a Snow Drift.

The Wilton (Minnesota) News of December 7th, says; "Mr. H. G. Green, of Alden township, Freeborn county, gives the following sorrowful news of the probable death of four men in his county, by freezing, on Tuesday of last week, the 12th instant:

"Three brothers, whose names he had not learned, started together from Moyer's grocery at White Walnut Lake, in the edge of Faribault county, for their home in Rice Lake township, Freeborn county, five miles distant, since which time they have not been heard from. They have been searched for in every direction in vain. The supposition is that they got lost and perished with cold, and now lie buried in the snow on the prairie.

"Mr. James Wood, of Rice Lake township between three and four o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, started to go to a neighbor's where his wife was visiting a mile away, but did not reach the place. Mr Wood has been tracked a distance of some twelve miles, but not found. His neighbors tracked him, first in a southwest direction, next in a northeast direction, and finally in a southeast direction, to Zumbro creek, all trace then was lost.

"We shall await with anxiety further news from those missing men. The storm of the 12th was much more severe than was generally supposed by those who were so fortunate as to be at home at the time. We hear of many severe cases of freezing.

"Mr Twist, of Charleston township, in the same county, had 140 sheep caught out in the same storm, and entirely drifted under. In dig

Poetry.

Do not like to Hear Him Pray.

I do not like to hear him pray:
He lends at twenty-five per cent;
For actual think the dear fellow may
Be pressed to pay for food and rent.
And in that book we all should heed,
Wherein says "the lender shall be blest,
A verse as I have eyes to read
It does not say "take interest."

I do not like to hear him pray
For oatmeal three times all an hour,
But prefer to open I might the day
When my neighbor has no flour:
To never see him go to mill
And buy the luscious brother bread,
And see his children at their fill,
While taught himself their humble shed.

I do not like to hear him pray
For blessings on the widow he'll
Watch what seeks his house to say,
"Stay or thinks you come to me."
I hear the prayer, so loud and long,
That is offered for the orphan's weal,
By one who sees him crushed by wrong,
And only with the lips doth feel.

I do not like to hear her pray,
With jewelled ear and silken dress,
While washer woman toils all day,
And then is asked "to work for less."
While manly shavers I observe
With folded hands and face demure,
To Heaven their "angel eyes,"
Then steal the earnings of the poor!

I do not like such soulless prayers;
Or wrong I hope to be forgiven;
May some wing them upward bears—
Not a million miles from Heaven
I like long prayers to hear,
Indeed, from the lips depart;
But never heed a ready ear,
Less words be low—the hears the heart.

Anecdote of President Johnson.

A New York Herald's correspondent, travelling through Tennessee, lately visited the town of Greenville, and put up at a hotel kept by a man who worked upon the same carpenter bench with President Johnson, and who gave him the following story:—

"There was a vast difference between Andy and I when we worked upon the same bench. I could spell backwards, and he could not; he could 'flax' me on a pair of breeches on a bee root, and could get a better price for his work than I. He never made a garment that didn't fit, and never had a job returned. He was the best tailor I ever met. When Andy got married he hadn't ten dollars in the world, and his wife was as poor as Naomi's daughters. Her mother said to her before she was married, (calling her by name,) 'I can give you all the money there is in the house—fifteen dollars—to help you about going to housekeeping; or I will take the money and give you a wedding'—which will you prefer?' 'Mother,' said she, 'I will take the wedding, and Andy and I'll work for more; won't we?' appealing to her lover. He assented, and the consequence was that the young couple had not one cent with which to 'set up' for themselves. After they were married she taught him to read, as far as he could knows she was," said the old man with a sigh of relief, as he puffed away at his old clay pipe. Oh, wonderful plebeian! It is a long and rugged road that leads from the tailor's bench at Greenville to the Presidential chair in Washington; but that wonderful trip through Cumberland Gap has told its tale."

Importance of Punctuation

Wanted—A young man to take charge of a pair of horses of a religious turn of mind.

A school committee man writes:—We have a school large enough to accommodate four hundred pupils four stories high.

A newspaper says:—A child was run over by a wagon three years old and cross-eyed with pantalets on which never spoke a word.

Parasol—A protection against the sun used by ladies made of cotton and whalebone.

Straps—Articles worn under the boots of gentlemen made of calf skin.

An exchange describing a celebration, says:—The procession was very fine and nearly two miles in length as was also the prayer of Dr. Perry the chaplain.

The following error in punctuation is a good illustration of the use of the comma. At a banquet this toast was given: "Woman—without her, man is a brute."

The printer had it printed: "Woman—without her man, is a brute."

A Yankee at nissau, who had on hand a lot of revolvers, no sooner heard of the revolt in Jamaica than he sailed with his entire stock for Kingston, where owing to the panic, he sold them at once at fabulous prices. He immediately left the island, remarking to a friend as he re-embarked for Nassau the only persone who would be in danger from his revolvers would be those who owned them.

An ingkeeper observed a postillion with only one spur, and inquired the reason. "Why, what would be the use of another? said the postillion, if one side of the horse goes, the other can't stand still."

The following is a copy of a legal notice, posted with all due prominence in Belfast:—"The owners of all dogs found at large on the public streets of Dungannon, without being properly logged or muzzled, will be prosecuted!"

Ma, said the pride of the family, who had been some seven summers, do you know why our tom-cat's like a poet? Ma didn't.—why, exclaimed the precocious pet, doesn't he go out moonlight nights and invoke the mews!

A correspondent has invented a machine for extracting the lies from quack advertisements. Some of them are never seen after entering the machine, only the truth comes out.

The following is the new mode of parsing down East. "I Court." Court is a very active, indicative mood, present tense, and agrees with all the girls in the neighborhood.

The man who imagined himself wise because he detected some typographical errors in a newspaper, has gone off to get a perpetual view of the rainbow.

There is a man in New York whose memory is so short it only reaches to his knees. Per consequence, he has not paid for his last pair of boots.

A magistrate asked a prisoner if he were married? No, replied the man. Then rejoined his worship, amid peals of laughter, it is a good thing for your wife.

"But not after blessings; only walk in the commandment of God, and blessings shall run after you, pursue and overtake you.

This common opinion is, that we should take good care of children at all seasons of the year, but it is well enough in the winter to let them slide.

Serenity of mind, a pretty wife, roast beef, and a cold water bath, will make most any man healthy, wealthy and wise.

IT HAS BECOME NECESSARY

TO SUPPLY ANOTHER SET OF TELEGRAPHIC INSTRUMENTS and open another Office, to meet the wants of the constantly increasing number of Students studying this Art at the

LONDON COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.

In future those Students learning to operate by water will be entirely separate from those learning by sound. Regular instruction will be given in each class every day.

Instruction will also be given each day in Phonography, by Mr S Stenhouse, late reporter for Fowler & Wells, N Y. We guarantee that an ordinary student can become thoroughly grounded in this Science whilst taking the Commercial Course without materially interfering with his progress in that course.

The additional charge for full instruction in Telegraphing is only $5

The additional charge for full instruction in Phonography is only $5

Owing to the increase in the number of our Commercial Students, we have also found it necessary to add to our already large number of desks, and the cry is, "Still they Come." All right, Gentlemen! We will furnish a desk and seat for each of you, and good practical instruction, too. Remember, you can take a good thorough course in this College cheaper than in any other. Please send for circular, containing full information. For specimens of Penmanship, &c, enclose stamp and address,

PROSPECTUS
OF THE
21st Vol. of the Montreal Witness
FOR 1866.

TWENTY EVENTFUL YEARS have run their course since the Montreal Witness first saw the light, and though they have been full of changes there has been no change in the reason for commencing it, namely, the great importance to society of a wholesome family newspaper.

Is an Agricultural Paper of great benefit to the country? The Witness has had more on that subject than any ordinary monthly agricultural journal.

Is a Temperance Paper of great importance to families and the country? The Witness has had more on that subject than any ordinary monthly temperance paper.

Is a Commercial Paper wanted by men of business and farmers? The Witness has fully as much commercial matter as any exclusively commercial paper.

Is a Literary Paper wanted? The Witness has had a goodly proportion of Poetry, Tales, Reviews, and other literary matter.

Should a witness for truth, and against error, Injustice and vice be sustained? The Witness has done its best in all these respects.

Is a newspaper essential to an intelligent family? The Witness has given more news than most papers in Canada.

A brief calculation will show the economy of procuring all these papers together instead of separately. The cost, if taken in the latter way, would, instead of the price of the Witness, be about as follows:—

Mother's Magazine	$1 00
Children's Paper	25
Agricultural Paper	1 00
Temperance Paper	50
Commercial Paper	1 00
Literary Paper	2 00
Weekly Newspaper	1 00
	6 75

This shows a very great difference in first cost be ides the saving in postage.

We would not be understood, however, to mean that any one should be satisfied with the Witness only. On the contrary, we think it is a wise economy to subscribe for various useful periodicals. There is, probably, no way in which a small sum of money yields so large a return of pleasure and profit. Our only object is to show how economical it is to subscribe for this paper.

There is another view of this matter, which is not a small reward for our twenty years' labour. During that time a very large number of families have been brought up with the Witness as their family paper. Parents and children have perused it regularly, and in it found the best advertising we could make from the best writers of the world. All know the power of a family paper to mould the views, and sway and combine those to whom it obtains access, and if this one has aided in the training up of some thousands of families in principles favourable to religion, temperance, integrity, and intelligent enterprise, what fitter arithmetic can reckon up the gain?

The Witness now has sale in all its editions some seven thousand subscribers all over the country, besides an average circulation of somewhat over a thousand in the City of Montreal; and for this extensive circulation we are exceedingly thankful, but it is a matter of deep regret that the proportion of the people reached is yet so small.

There are probably about six thousand Protestant families in Montreal of which we reach about two-thirds; but if we are about 300,000 Protestant families in the rest of Canada, of which we only reach 7,000, or less than a fortieth part. There is surely room here for a very large extension of all our editions.

The Daily Witness is by far the best of our editions for business men, having more reading matter and a great many more advertisements than any other edition. It has also full market reports daily. The subscription is $3,00 per annum.

The Weekly Witness (semi-weekly) contains nearly all the reading matter of the Daily together with semi-weekly market reports and prices current. Subscription $2,00 per annum.

The Weekly Witness contains all the matter of permanent interest of the Semi-weekly, with weekly summary of news and market reports. Subscription $1,00 per annum.

The Canada Messenger, published twice a month, contains the Temperance, Agricultural, Sanitary, and Educational matter of the Witness, without news, markets, or advertisements, at 6 cents post free. Subscription 25 cents per annum.

All these papers are payable invariably in advance, and the paper stops when the term subscribed for expires.

It should not be very difficult to get some one of these editions into almost every family if a friend of that family would only suggest the matter to them.

The reasons why that we cannot afford canvassing, and indeed we have always received the greatest aid, in the way of obtaining subscribers, from parties who had no object in view but disinterested patriotism and benevolence. To all such, and may their number greatly increase, we hereby render hearty thanks for past favors, and ask them to continue their good offices.

The Witness is now dressed in a new suit of types, and no effort will be spared to keep it in the very front rank of Canadian Journalism.

Advertisements not in variance with the character of the Witness will be inserted for one cent per word for one insertion and a half cent per word for each subsequent insertion, no advertisement being reckoned as less than 25 words.

The Globe Newspaper.

THE publisher of The Globe has to announce that very great improvements in the publication of this journal will be made in the coming year. A new font of beautiful type, cast specially for The Globe, has been imported from the celebrated Scottish Foundry of Miller and Richard, Edinburgh. The quality of the paper used in printing the journal will be much superior to that heretofore employed. Arrangements are now being made for increased Telegraphic facilities; and the corps of Writers, Reporters and correspondents, will be strengthened—increased effort will be put forth in every department to render The Globe more worthy than ever before of the immense circulation it has for so many years enjoyed throughout British America.

The year 1866 is likely to be a most eventful period in the history of Canada—a year in which the current events of the day will be of the deepest interest to every inhabitant of the country.

The new Parliamentary Buildings will, early in the coming spring, be opened for the first time at Ottawa.

The Government is pledged to present to Parliament, at the opening of the session, either a Bill for completing the Confederation of all British America, or a Bill establishing a new Federal constitution for Canada alone, based on the principle of Representation by Population in the popular branch.

On the 17th of March, 1866, the American Treaty of Reciprocity will come to an end; and the negotiations for its renewal, or preparations to meet the change, will be watched with much interest.

Arrangements for acquiring possession of, and opening the North-West territory for settlement, will be speedily made, and all those The Globe will devote special attention, as it has hitherto done to everything connected with the subject.

With the settlement of the constitutional question that has so long distracted the Province, numerous questions affecting the material progress of this country will be thrown open for consideration. Among these will be—

The subject of Banking and Currency.
Enlarging the Canals, and otherwise improving the Internal Navigation of the country.
Reduction of the Customs' Tariff.
Interest on Money.
Opening up new Territory to settlement.
Free land grants to actual settlers.
A Homestead Law.
And many other vitally important subjects in the discussion and settlement of all these matters The Globe will, as heretofore, take an active part; and from the sources of information at the command of its conductors, it is not doubted that in its columns the earliest intelligence and the most reliable information will continue to be found.

THE DAILY GLOBE

will continue to be mailed from the office at $5 per annum, payable invariably in advance; but can be procured regularly from the newsboys in all the cities and towns throughout the Province.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE

will also be much improved in the year 1866. The paper will be of superior quality, and the new Scottish type will give it a greatly improved appearance. An editor has been engaged, whose special duty it will be to condense and arrange the matter for this edition, and to select intelligence specially adapted for country readers. A portion of each week's paper will be devoted to the publication of some interesting tale; and the markets and prices current will continue to be given with promptness and accuracy.

The Weekly Globe will continue to be published at TWO DOLLARS per annum, payable strictly in advance. Some exceptions to the rule of advance payment have been heretofore made—but from the 1st of January, 1866, no paper will be sent from the office without prepayment.

CLUB RATES.

During 1866 we will send:—

Six copies one year for	$10 00
Ten " "	15 00
Fifteen " "	22 50

and an extra copy of the Weekly to the person who gets up the club of fifteen.

Twenty-five copies one year for 35 00

and a copy of the Weekly Globe to the person who gets up the club of twenty-five.

Fifty copies one year for 65 00

and a copy of the Daily Globe one year to the person who gets up the club of fifty.

Eighty copies one year for 100 00

and a copy of the Daily.

Payment must be always in advance.

Each paper is addressed separately.

All the papers included in any club must be mailed to one Post-office.

When additional names are added to any club during the year, they must be sent at the Globe office by the person who made up the Club; and the money sent with such additional names must be such a proportion of the years subscription at the Club rate as will pay up to the expiration of the Club.

No exception will be made to these rules on any ground whatever.

AMERICAN
Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering
SEWING MACHINE!
COMPANY,
627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE Stitch made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, kindred or chine silks, and produce a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c, &c, it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c. &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker where instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P S.—A novel patented BUTTON HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES
DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in TUNE than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the stringes are attached to a solid iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old harp form of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over String Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all the purity and sweetness of tone.

They have received the highest testimon als from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Mr. Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Barili,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry,	Charles Findel

Mr. EDESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says: I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal versimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos consimcted upon the old plan

The N. Y Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

SEWING MACHINES!
FINKLE & LYON'S
NEW PATENT ROTARY FEED
Sewing Machines.

The following facts demonstrate that these Machines comprise the highest improvements in the Sewing Machine Art, viz:

1. Each Machine is guaranteed to give better satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in Market, or money refunded.
2. They have taken many of the highest premiums at the most important Exhibitions and fairs ever held in the United States.
3. They make the lock stitch alike on both sides—thus saving more than half the thread and silk used in the raveling-ridge-seams of the loop stitch and single-thread Sewing Machines.
4. They are adapted to the widest range of heavy and light sewing.
5. They have no rattling wires, or delicate attachments to keep in repair.
6. They require no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "Lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate Machine.

Please call and examine, and demonstrate for yourself, or send for Circular, with samples of sewing.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN
SEWING MACHINES.
EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!
PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms. { 336 Broadway, New York. / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principals and mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material from leather to the finest Nainsook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COG WHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it almost impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

But in a more especial manner do we elicit the pat ronage of

Merchant Tailors,	Corset Makers,

New Map

OF

Peterborough and Ashburnham,

THE upper-signed beg to announce that their New Map of the Town of Peterboro' and of the Village of Ashburnham, is now complete and ready for publication.

This Map has been compiled with great care from the original registered plans and surveys, and its entire accuracy secured not only by those means, but by actual survey and careful admeasurement in the two corporations named, not only is every lot given and its subdivisions where divided, but the names of the owners, as contained in the last Assessment Roll, are neatly printed on each lot. All public buildings, manufactories, stores, and private residences, together with the existing and proposed railways, streets, mill-races, water-courses dams, bridges, &c, are laid down from actual measurement. The built-up portion of the town is so colored as to distinguish at a glance the materials used, whether of wood, stone or brick; while the whole is finished in a superior manner, so as to be both useful and ornamental, in securing which neither pains nor expense have been spared.

During the ensuing week, the undersigned will be prepared to receive the names of intending subscribers, at their office, Scott's Buildings. Early application is desired, as but a limited number of copies will be published.

THE OLD CATHEDRAL ORGANIST.

'Tis forty years ago since first
I climbed these dusty, winding stairs
To play the Dean in: how I spurned
Beneath my feet all meaner cares,
When first I leant, my cheek on fire,
And looked down blushing at the choir.

Handel, and Haydn, and Mozart—
I thought they watched me as I played;
While Palestrina's stern, sad face
Seemed in the twilight to upbraid:
Pale fingers moved upon the keys—
The ghost-hands of past centuries.

Behind my oaken battlement
Above the floor I used to lean,
And watch, in pothing crimson hood,
Come stately sailing in the Dean;
On this the organ breathing low,
Began to murmur soft and slow.

I used to shut my eyes and hear
The solemn prophecy and psalm
Rise up like incense: and I loved
Before the prayer the lull and calm,
Till, like the stream that bursts its banks,
Broke forth brave Purcell's "O give Thanks."

I knew these thirteen hundred pipes
And thirty stops, as blind men do
The voices of the friends they love,
The bird's song, and the thunder too;
And the fierce diapason's roar,
Like storms upon a rocky shore

And now to-day I yield me up
The dusky seat, my old loved throne,
Unto another; and no more
Shall come here in the dusk alone,
Or in the early misty hour,
To hear my old friend's voice of power.

And yet methinks thrt centuries hence,
Lying beneath the chancel floor,
In that dark nook I shall delight
To hear the anthem's swell once more,
And to myself shall quietly smile
When music floods the vaulted aisle.

Or mocking gravely at some hand
Less skillful than my own was once,
In my song nest I'll lie, and mark
The blunders of the foolish dunce;
But to myself the secret keep,
And turn me round again to sleep.

FAST AND FIRM.

A ROMANCE AT MARSEILLES.

I was at the Marseilles railway station; why I was there, or where I was going, I do not exactly remember, so much having happened since, and I, just at that time, had no special reason to go to one place more than to another. The express train from Paris had just come in.

She was standing a little aside, just out of the crowd and bustle, looking on, scanning every face as it passed and repassed; mine among others, and I fancied with more interest than others. Her face was very pale, and her eyes were anxious, but she looked calm and self possessed; her manner had no bashfulness, no hardihood. Perhaps she was waiting for her fellow-passengers to re-join her. People hurried to and fro, each one intent on his or her business. No one approaches this little lady. Pretty soon I saw her speak to an elderly woman, who, for a few minutes, stood near her, a natural specimen of the genius unprotected. Of her she asked some question. From her she received a hurried and not over courteous answer. A flush rose to her face as she turned away. By this time the platform was almost clear. Such passengers as were going on had departed to refresh themselves; others had gone to their resting places; the railway officials began to regard this solitary figure curiously. Raising my hat, speaking to her with as formal courtesy as possible, I ventured to ask her if she were waiting for anybody; wanting any information; if I could be in any way of service to her. A shade of disappointment or perplexity crossed her face when I thus addressed her. She answered in better French than mine, while her eyes seemed to read mine with something more than curiosity—with interest, as I stood waiting.

'I was to have been met here, but I see nobody who is waiting for anybody. I am disappointed; I must wait here; some body will come yet, perhaps. Thank you very much for your kindness, but I must wait.

Again lifting my hat, I left her. Wait! what had she to wait for? Any one meaning to meet her would have been there on the arrival of the train. Alone there, and strange to the place, what could she do? There she stood, waiting composedly, patiently. As the minutes passed by, I fancied she grew paler and paler; at last as I approached her nearer than in any other turns, she came a few steps toward me.

'Be as kind,' she began in English, then correcting herself, she again spoke French.

I smiled. 'I am English, as you are.'

'Oh, I am so glad!' she said quite childishly. Then she added, 'I can offer no excuse for troubling you, but will you tell me what to do? I am come direct from London, and am going to my brother, who is ill in Rome. Some one was to have met me here, and I know nothing about the road beyond this. My brother is very ill. I must travel quickly, or—' here she paused.

'Did you intend to travel by land?'

'Yes, my brother forbade me to travel by water. Sea travelling half killed him, and he won't let me try it,' she said wearily.

'But,' said I, 'it is an impossible journey for you to undertake alone by this route, or indeed by any route. I don't see what your friends could have been thinking of.'

'I was to have been met here, you must remember, and I quite depended on that.

'But you have no business here at all. If you wanted to go by land, and quickly, you ought to have gone by Chambery, across Mount Cenis, by Susa, Milan, Turin——'

She turned so pale that I paused. She looked about for some resting place; I gave her my arm, led her to the waiting room, got her a glass of water and a cup of coffee begging her to take the latter. She obeyed me, and as soon as she could speak, it was: 'You will tell me what to do now, my brother is very ill, perhaps dying. Do you think it will be best to go back to—— the place you spoke of, or as I am here to push on by this route?' she asked eagerly.

'Is your luggage here? The train starts for Nice in five minutes. I am not sure that you can do better than to push on this way.'

She rose directly. 'I have no luggage but what is in that bag,' pointing to the one I had taken from her a few minutes before.

'What a charming travelling companion she would make. I thought to myself.

'I left London at an hour's notice,' she said. As I hurried her along, she asked, 'Are you going any further by this route?

Upon being answered in the affirmative, she asked me to write down the direction.

The ladies carriage into which I looked was full, so I handed her into another, and got in myself; and as that small hand rested in mine, a curiously strong conviction entered my mind, and rested there. I seated myself opposite to her, and having said that we should have plenty of time to talk it over before we got to Nice, I feigned to be fully occupied with route books and maps in order to leave her quiet time to recover herself. All the while that I seemed thus occupied, I was thinking intently. I was not very young or green. I had heard of bewitched and bewitching widows, and the childish looking little adventuresses lying in wait at such places as railway stations for men's hearts to ensnare, and men's purses to make use of, and I considered myself a man not likely to be imposed upon. A calm, investigating glance of mine rested on my opposite neighbor's face, her dress, and her ensemble. She did not speak to me; she turned her face to the window.—I thought her earnestly interested in the fascinating romantic scenes past which we were flying; the rocky heights, the castle looking rocks, and rocky looking castles, the blue bays, and grey plains, which she was seeing now probably for the first time. Very soon a gentle, stealthy movement of hers, a small hand slipped into her pocket, and then her handkerchief lifted to her face assured me she was crying. I am always afraid of a woman who is crying. A man is a brute who can speak a harsh word to a weeping woman, and a mild one often changes a mild trickling of the salt waters to a deluge, so I left her alone. She kept her hand, and her handkerchief in it, over her face, and her face turned toward the window as much as possible. I began to hope she would fall asleep. I believe I fell asleep for a few moments. By and by I was aroused by the falling of a book from my hand; when I at last opened my eyes, I found my opposite neighbor's fixed upon me with a look of waiting for the opportunity to address me. She had left off crying then; that she had cried a good deal her face told; her lids were reddened in tiny spots; she looked very ill. She had her purse open in her hand.

'Shall I have enough money?' she asked me, holding it toward me, when I gave evidence of being fully awake.

I took the poor little, poorly furnished purse in my hand. 'Oh, yes if you don't get cheated; and as I am going to Rome by this route, I will see to that if you will allow me.'

'You are are going to Rome!' Such a light in the eyes, and such a pretty transient flush over delicate face. 'You are going all the way that I have to go?'

'Yes.' It was the state of her purse that decided me.

She put the money I returned to her back in her bag. After that and when I pretended to be looking in another direction, I saw her small hands folded together, and was confident that her lips formed the words 'Thank God.' Somehow I was more touched than I could have told reason for by this.

'Have you slept at all on the road?' I asked presently.

'No; I have been too anxious.

'Try and sleep now, or you will be utterly worn out. I am going to do my best to take care of you. Try and fancy I am the friend your brother sent for you. I will try and and take as good care of you as if I was. It was not a case for half measures, you see.

'You are very good,' she said and her eyes filled.

I put my hat box for her feet, and threw my wrapper over her, and then immersed myself in my books again.

Two old ladies and one old gentleman were nodding in the other compartment of the carriage. For a long time I did not stir hand or foot, or look at my neighbour, hoping that, her mind more at ease, she might catch the infection of their drowsiness. She did; when I did venture to look at her she was asleep. Her hat lay on her knee, her head was leaned back in the angle of the cushions. The light of the carriage lamp slanted down from the bright hair, threw a shadow of long lashes on the pale cheek, fell on the round white throat, but it did not look careful sleep; the mouth retained lines of anxiety and depression. I did not look at her long; I was afraid of disturbing her, and besides it seemed to me that it would be a piece of unchivalrous audacity and profanity to take advantage of the unconsciousness of one so strangely thrown upon my protection. Her hat slipped off her knee and fell to the floor of the carriage; I picked it up reverently and laid it on my own, which was on the seat beside me. I fell to considering it; it was a modest little, but pretty, but not in a coquettish way; simple and tasteful, and free from any of the grotesque and unsuitable excrescences I have wondered at on other women's head gear. Her whole dress had struck me, as I had noticed her at the station, as having a special appropriateness, a neat completeness, an absence of all superfluity, and yet there was no absence of feminine gracefulness.

'Who and what is she,' I pondered, and as I pondered my eyes fell upon a card attached to the handle of her bag, which I had put on the seat beside me, to give her more room.

The name, not a common one, was not unfamiliar to me, and yet the familiarity of it carried me far back into the past.

'Harkness?' I kept repeating. I questioned and perplexed myself to no purpose, but by and by, when I had given up, or imagined I had, thinking about the matter, it all came to me.

Harkness was the name of an old drawing master of mine. Harkness was the name of a young schoolmate of mine; Harkness was a name that for two or three years I had seen in the Royal Academy's Catalogue as the painter of pictures which had struck my fancy—mostly scenes in the country around Rome—cattle and peasants of the Campagna. For the sake of the name as much as for the pictures themselves, I had purchased two or three of these works at the time, wondering if that young artist Harkness was my young schoolfellow Harkness.

I now determined that the two should certainly be one, and that one the brother of my little companion, who most certainly be the sister Ruth of whom he had often talked, a baby girl then, and the object of his almost idolatrous affection.

While she slept I furbished up my memory as to all matters regarding the Harknesses, father and son; it was some time before I could remember the son's christian name; but at last that came too; Harold—Harold Harkness. I was triumphant, almost anxious the tired little sleeper she'd awake, quite resolved that Harold Harkness should have been my very dear friend. I could remember happily that I had sometimes been of service to him.

My charge, for so now I regarded Ruth Harkness, moaned in her sleep in a faint, distressful sort of way.

I bent toward her; we were stopping at a station; she roused herself.

'Could you get me a glass of water?' she asked. 'I am so sorry to give you trouble.'

I brought the water. She took it with a grateful, confiding look, and drank it.—Having paid a porter to return the glass, I was lingering on the platform near the carriage door, regardless of warnings to get in, amusing myself by watching the eager hurry of others.

'If you should be left behind, or get hurt in getting in in a hurry,' she said. 'I was in the carriage before she had finished speaking, her anxious face was enough.

I bought her a small nosegay of Provence rosebuds, jasmine and violets, but I took it away from her directly, saying, 'The perfume is too strong.'

She let me do as I pleased, but looked at the flowers lovingly.

'I wonder when you ate anything last.'

'I have eaten some biscuits I had with me; they told me I should have plenty of time to get refreshments on the way.'

'Then you have lived on biscuits since you left London?'

'I have got been hungry.'

'I have made a very pleasant discovery since you were asleep, Miss Harkness,' I said, pointing to the card on her bag. 'This is your name?'

'Yes.'

'It is a well known name to me. A favorite schoolfellow of mine was called Harold Harkness, a favorite artist of mine is called Harold Harkness. Now don't tell me you are not the little sister Ruth he used to talk about.'

'I am only too proud and glad to tell you that I am.'

'You don't ask who I am, or seem surprised at my discovery.'

'No,' she answered, 'I knew before.'

'Knew me?'

'Yes; Harold used to talk to me about you enough to make me remember your name very well; and I read it on your luggage at Marseilles.'

'But how did you come to associate the luggage with its right owner?'

'By instinct, I suppose partly, and partly because Harold once tried to paint a likeness of you from memory, and you are still enough like his picture to have made me notice your face.'

When we reached Nice, I wondered what it would be best to do with Miss Harkness. I did not venture to ask the old ladies to take charge of her until morning, as I did not wish them to know that I was not her legitimate protector.

As I handed her from the carriage, I felt that she was trembling.

'You cannot go on till the eight o'clock diligence in the morning. I shall secure a room for you at a hotel where I can rely on your being safe and comfortable. I shall call for you in the morning.'

'How can I ever thank you!'

'It is nothing. I am a very idle, unoccupied fellow, at any body's service, especially at the service of your brother's sister.

'If he is only alive. You say I cannot go to-night?'

'No, and besides you ought not.'

The mistress of one of the Nice hotels was well known to me, and I committed Miss Harkness to her care.

After partaking of some refreshments, I lounged on the esplanade, and looked toward the house where I had left Miss Harkness, and wondered dreamily what would come of it.

Suppose a wife should come of it.

There is judgment, discernment, wisdom beyond her years in that sweet little face.

I was sorry she had seen my name otherwise I could have laid the flattering unction to my soul that it was my face which had inspired her with confidence.

Next morning I went early to her hotel, and sent a message to her, telling that everything was arranged.

I shan't easily forget the graceful look she gave me when we met. As I tucked her up snugly in the coupe, I asked if she had been comfortable.

'Oh, yes; I had thought of everything. I had been most kind,' she answered, with her eyes full of tears. And then—'Where was I going?' with a half alarm, when she found I did not take my place beside her.

'To the banquette up above; I am your courier, madamoiselle: one sees better there but it is filter for a lady.'

It was an early February morning: the sun and sky as bright as only a Riviera sun and sky could be; the Mediterranean blue, as only the Mediterranean could be.

What wonderful Cornice Road! I had often travelled it before; but that only make me better able to admire it then. Now high on the hills, where you seemed to have glimpses of a whole Switzerland of snow mountains; where you had below you bay after bay glittering azure, violent,—town village or tower, and distant expanse of sea; where you look upon little castellated cities sitting on their natural fortifications, secure, impregnable—and then down to the shores though the queerest and quaintest of small ports, past new built and building fleets, between boughs laden with lemons, through orchards of lemons, past the palm groves of Bordigoera—what an enchanted world it seemed. Mineral and romantic, northern strength, southern grace, but it is not of these things that I care to talk now.

We did not stop more than a few hours at Genoa. How long we were upon our route altogether I cannot distinctly remember.—We had bad weather at the time, cold and rain, snow, wind and hail; that was I think in crossing the Appennines between Sestris and Spezia. She never complained, altho' she got so benumbed with cold that she would have fallen, but I caught her in my arms, one evening as I was helping her to alight—that was at Spazia—she never complained.

Caught her in my arms! yes, and before I knew it I had given her a sort of compassionate hug, exclaiming 'You poor, tired, patient child!' I could not help it.

Rail from Spezia to Leghorn; past the marble quarries of Carrara, past Pisa; rail to Rome. Our journey was not long since, you see.

When she reached Rome, in the full brightness of a sunny morning, she did look travel worn, fagged and jaded. The night before in a crowded diligence—I had not been able to secure a coupee for her—she had slept a great part of the night with her head on my shoulder—a sleep of such profound exhaustion as half alarmed me. I had ventured to put my arm around me in order to support her better—what a slight, fragile form it was! As I held her thus and she slept this dead sleep, my eyes never closed and my mind was very busy.

What would be the end of this journey? Should her brother be already dead?

Friendless, homeless, moneyless, and alone!

When we stopped once she half aroused; she looked up into my face as I bent down to her.

'I am afraid I weary you,' she said, 'I can't help it; I am so tired!' She was half stupified with fatigue.

Almost before she finished speaking her head dropped on my shoulder again.

I pressed her closer for answer, that was all.

'Your wife, poor young thing, seems quite worn out,' said a kindly, half quakerish looking lady sitting opposite. I had noticed how pleasantly and compassionately she glanced at Ruth. A few days ago I should on this have told Ruth's story, and claimed a woman's protection for a woman; but now—well, I was jealous and selfish. I wanted her all to myself, wanted her to be cared for with my cares—all mine, only mine.

I simply answered. 'She is worn out, she has travelled from London almost without stopping; she has a brother dying in Rome.'

'Poor young thing! but she is happier than many; she will meet sorrow with one by her who loves her with more than the love of a brother.'

My conscience was aroused: none of our fellow passengers could hear us: I briefly told her Ruth's store, and finished by asking, 'Are you going to stay in Rome?'

'Yes, friend, and shall be glad to be of service to the young lady.'

You may perhaps be of the greatest service.'

I gave her my card and she gave me hers, penciled on it her address in Rome.

(To be Continued.)

ANECDOTE OF POPE.—One day as Pope was engaged in translating the 'Iliad,' he came to a passage, which neither he nor his assistant could interpret. A stranger, who stood by, in his humble garb, very modestly suggested that he had some little acquaintance with Greek, perhaps he could assist them. 'Try, try,' said Pope, with the air of a boy who was encouraging a monkey to eat a red pepper. 'There is an error in the print!' said the stranger, looking at the text. 'Read as if there was no interrogative point at the end of the line, and you have the meaning at once.' Pope's assistant improved upon this hint and rendered the passage without difficulty. Pope was chagrined; he could never endure to be surpassed in anything. Turning to the stranger, he said, in a sarcastic tone—'Will you please to tell me what an interrogation is?' 'Why sir,' said the stranger scanning the ill-shaped poet, 'it is a little crooked, contemptable thing that asks questions!'

Remember in all things that if you do not begin you will never come to an end. The first weed pulled up in the garden, the first seed in the ground, the first shilling put in the savings' bank, and the first mile travelled on a journey, are all important things; then make a beginning, and thereby a hope, a promise, a pledge, and assurance that you are in earnest with what you have undertaken. How many a poor, idle, erring, hesitating outcast is now creeping and crawling through the world, who might have held up his head and prospered, if, instead of putting off his resolutions of industry and amendment, he had only made a beginning!

Progress of the Russian American Telegraph.

The following account of the progress of this work, from the San Francisco Bulletin though not so late as our telegraphic advices, contains some interesting particulars:

'Colonel Bulkley and those officers of the Russian-American Telegraph enterprise whose services may be necessary here during the winter have recently returned to this city, having made all the necessary preparations for the explorations in the Russian Possessions, British American and Siberia. Winter quarters have been established at Lake Babine Columbia, at the mouth of Anadyr river in Russian American, at Fort St. Michaels, on the Kevicpak river, and at the Russian trading post at Nicolofski. Each of these points will serve as a base of operations, from whence exploring parties are sent out, and from which supplies will be drawn. The winter months are the most favorable for explorations in the northern latitudes, owing to the fact that the ground is covered with snow, which freezes, and thus renders travelling comparatively easy in sleighs drawn by reindeer, of which animals about three hundred have been collected by the Indians at the mouth of the Anadyr river, some of which will be used by the expedition. Of the exploring parties now out, is making its way from the mouth of the Amoor river toward the Ochotsk sea, another at the head of Penjusk Gulf, and another recently left Petropaulowski to explore the peninsula of Kamchatka, and were at last accounts at Tigel, waiting for snow to fall while other parties are pushing northward in British Columbia.

'Wherever the Indians were met with they were found to be tractable and kindly disposed, and there is every reason to believe that they can be successfully used in various ways in the prosecution of the work. More particularly is this case with the Tchouk Indians inhabiting the north eastern coast of Asia, who were supposed to be hostile, and some trouble was anticipated in getting them under subjection, but they agreeably disappointed their rectors by their amicable bearing.

"It has always been supposed that the Kevichpak and Yukan rivers were separate and distinct streams, the latter emptying into the Arctic ocean; but Colonel Bulkley has definitely ascertained that they are but one stream, and that what is known as the Yukan is but the mouth of the Kevichpak.

'The precise points from whence to lay the cable across Bherings Straits have not yet been decided upon. The soundings made by the Gate and Wright showed good bottom and favorable to laying the cable at any other point for distance of one hundred and fifty miles either way.

'The country on the eastern, or American side is a rolling country and easy of travel; but that on the western or Asiatic side is mountainous and extremely difficult of exploration, and entirely destitute of timber. During the winter the exploring parties will probably make their way a long distance into the interior, and in the summer be able to give to the world much valuable information concerning a large tract of country of which nothing is as yet known.

'The general idea of extreme coldness of the weather on the northern Pacific coast is mistaken one, the cold not being nearly as intense as in the same latitude on the Atlantic. It is a curious fact in this connection that Anatche bay, on the coast of Kamschatka never freezes. Col. Bulkley has been up to latitude sixty-six degrees north, and the little steamer George S. Wright has ploughed her way through twelve thousand miles of water since their departure from this port."

THE BODY OF KING JAMES III, OF SCOTLAND, DISCOVERED AND REINTERRED.—By command of Her Majesty the Queen an elegant tomb or monumental structure has been erected on the spot of ground at Cambuskenneth, near Stirling, where were found some human remains, supposed to be those of King James III. and his Queen, the Princess Margaret of Denmark. The royal remains were dug up in the course of some excavations which were made in the summer of last year, when the foundations of the ancient Abbey were laid bare. It may be stated that the structure is built of freestone, is about 44 feet in height, 8 feet long, 4½ feet broad at the base, and about 9 feet broad at the top. On the north side the following inscription is cut in raised letters: "This restoration of the tomb of her ancestors was executed by command of her Majesty Queen Victoria, A. D. 1865." On the south there is the following: "In this place near the altar of the Abbey of Cambuskenneth, were deposited the remains of James the Third, King of the Scotts, who died the 11th June, 1488, and of his Queen the Princess Margaret of Denmark." On the west end are the Scotch arms, with the motto, Nemo me impune lacessit, on the east end the Scottish arms, quartered with those of Denmark, surrounded by a scroll of thistles. —Dundee Advertiser.

LIVES LOST BY THE AMERICAN REBELLION.—The War Department compiles the number of deaths in the Union armies since the commencement of the war at 250,000, and of the Southern soldiers at least 225,000, making at least 525,000, "lives that have been lost, a part of the costly price paid for the nation's life. At Gettysburg, 25,000 Union soldiers were killed, wounded or taken prisoners—our greatest loss during the campaign. General Grant's losses, from the time he crossed the Rapidan until Lee's surrender, were 90,000.

A NEW MOVEMENT.

The Conservatives of this Province are making very strenuous efforts to obtain the ascendancy in the future if possible. The latest dodge is the formation of a Society to be called "The Liberal Conservative Association." By means of this society, we suppose they expect to extend their boundaries so as to encroach upon the ranks of Liberals —or Reformers. This society proposes to affililiate with it other similar societies in any part of British North America that have similar ends in view. The professed object of the "Liberal Conservative Association" is the maintenance of British connection; the accomplishment of a British American Union; the perpetuation of British institutions, and the support of a Liberal yet Conservative administration of government in this country.

We may reasonably ask what new idea in the above list of objects can this association claim as peculiar to itself, which party has fought most faithfully for British connexion, a confederation, and the perpetuation of British institutions in this country? surely not the Conservatives particularly! Through which party did the great idea of a union of the British provinces first assume a somewhat tangible shape? was it not through the Hon. Geo. Brown, the leader of the Reform party? And the Reform press of Canada has consistently and ably contended for the perpetuation of British institutions and the maintenance of British connexion. The association, therefore, can lay claim to no new ideas among its proposed objects. The whole is nothing more than an artful manœuvre to entrap the unwary Reformers who may chance within the range of its influence, so that if possible the Conservatives may be able to gain a constituency at the next elections.

Let Reformers beware of such wiles; the best and surest way to ensure good government and the maintenance of everything that is near and dear to every sound patriot, is to stick close to the good old ways: support the men who have fought the battles for Canadian liberty, the men who broke up the old compacts, the men who obtained redress in the matter of the Clergy Reserves, and the men who are now willing to allow to us the education of our children, free from the trammels of priestly influence, and according to the dictates of each parent's enlightened reason and conscience. The Reformers—not Conservatives, nor Liberal Conservatives—deserve the support of the Canadian people, as the past history of our Province fully testifies. If the country be ever raised to a place among the nations, it will be through their efforts.

Grammar School Trustees and County Council.

The new act relating to Grammar Schools takes from the County Council the appointment in part of the Grammar School Board, giving the Town Council the appointment of three members of the Board, and to the County Council the appointment of three.—There will, therefore, in future be but six members, instead of eight as before. The Town Council has appointed three, viz.:—Colonel Haultain, Dr. Burnham and James Stevenson. The County Council will, no doubt, complete the requisite number at its first session. From our knowledge of the gentlemen who will compose the Council, we are sure they will make an equally good selection. There appears to be a desire to remove Ministers from the Board altogether, and the action of the Town Council seems to indicate that desire; although we are not prepared to say that the Town Council rejected Ministers, as such. But giving way more or less to public opinion, the Council chose men whom they thought well qualified to attend to Grammar School matters, and in doing so did not happen to choose a Minister. This same feeling prevails more or less in the County Council also, but not to the same extent that it does in the Town. We must, however, wait their action in the matter before we make any further remarks on the subject. But still we cannot refrain from pointing to the difficulties that are likely to arise from total rejection of them.

The members of the Grammar School Board are members of the Board of Education for the examination of Teachers, in connection with the Local Superintendents of Schools. It has so happened that some of the Superintendents never gave themselves any trouble about the matter of examining Teachers; never attended meetings of the Board at all; this threw the burden of examination on those members who did attend, and who generally were Ministers. Those who were very punctual were Rev. Mr. Roger and the Methodist Minister here from time to time. These, assisted or as assistants, with one or two Local Superintendents, did the work.—There were also two or three Lay-members of the Board who rendered material aid.—Now, if the Ministers are rejected from the Grammar School Board, the Council must see to the appointment of Local Superintendents who will come forward and supply the absence of those who may be removed from the Board. We do not speak in the spirit of dictation, nor are we giving our opinion pro or con in relation to Ministers being on the board; we are only pointing out difficulties so as to avoid them.

Perhaps the hint of the Hon. Billa Flint may prove worthy the attention of the Council. One thing is certain, the present system does not give very general satisfaction.

Reeves and Deputy Reeves for 1866.

OTONABEE.—E. Ingram, Reeve; J. Miller, D. Reeve.

ASPHODEL.—P. M. Grover, Reeve; Mr. Patterson, D. Reeve.

Mr. Coughlin, through some informality of the Returning Officer for his Ward, was not allowed to take his seat. Since, we heard the report that the Returning Officer had not made his return to the Clerk within the time prescribed by law. We are not prepared to say that this would unseat Mr. Coughlin, we rather think not. It might render the Returning Officer liable but we hardly think it would unseat the Councillor elect.

NORTH MONAGHAN.—J. W. Gilmour, Reeve.

SMITH.—Here we have a complete change. M. S. Dean, Reeve; George Fitzgerald, D. Reeve.

DUMMER.—John Carnegie, Jr. Reeve.

DUMMER.—Mr. Kidd, Reeve.

BELMONT.—Although we have no official report, we feel safe in saying that P. Pearce, Esq., is Reeve.

BURLEIGH, &c.—John Carroll, Reeve.

HARVEY.—W. A. Scott, Reeve.

ENNISMORE.—Jeremiah McCarty, Reeve.

SMOWDEN.—S. S. Peck, Reeve.

The other Townships not heard from.

BIBLE SOCIETY.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Peterborough Branch Bible Society will be held in the Canada Presbyterian Church, Peterborough, on FRIDAY, 26TH JANUARY, 1866, at 7 p. m. An interesting meeting may be expected as every effort is being made to render the meeting all that can be desired.

LOCAL MEETINGS will be held at each of the following places, on TUESDAY, 23RD OF JANUARY, 1866, at 7 o'clock, p.m., addressed by the gentlemen named:—

OTONABEE.—Armstrong's School House: Rev. J. M. Roger, Jas. Edwards, Esq., and Mr. Richardson. Stewart's School House: Rev. E. Crawford, John Walton, Esq., and Mr. Glover.

MONAGHAN.—Town Hall: Rev. E. R. Roberts, T. M. Fairbairn and J. M. Burns, Esqs. Tully's School House: Rev. J. Gilmour, Sheriff Hall and Colonel Haultain.

SMITH.—Fourth Line School House: Rev. Mr. Candlon, James Stratton, Esq., and Mr. Taylor. Methodist Church, at John Robinson's: Rev. Mr. Blain, Dr. Brown and J.W. Gilmour, Esq.

EMBRO NORTH.—Methodist Church: Rev. W. M. Roger, Wm. Hall Esq., and Dr Burnham.

It is to be hoped that these meeting will be well attended and that a lively interest will be taken hereafter by the people in this county in the Bible Society.

A Man Killed in Belmont.

Last week while a farmer in Belmont, named Edward Bloomer, was chopping down a tree, it lodged; in his endeavors in some way to cut both down, he received a stroke which killed him. The whole particulars are not known, as Bloomer was alone at the time, and had been dead for some time, but not quite cold, when found by a neighbor who went in search of him on some business matters. It is supposed that the tree in falling must have struck the unfortunate man on the head, causing bleeding at the mouth and nose; yet no cut was made, and the falling tree has lodged on a stump fully four feet from the ground. Deceased was found beside it. He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn this sudden stroke.

Trial by Jury becoming a Farce.

From the reports of the Globe and Leader, it will be seen that the Jury on the Maitland Distillery case could not agree. Nine, it is said, being for conviction, three against it. The evidence was plain and conclusive enough, but the jury would not agree. This is nothing to be wondered at. Who imagines that all men see alike, or are alike desirous of meting out justice. Have not Juries been found giving decisions directly contrary to the plainest facts? And this will continue to be, until there is a higher standard of moral responsibility attached to men's actions as Jurors.

County Council Meeting.

The Reeves and Deputy Reeves will meet on Tuesday next, at the Court House, to organize the County Council for the current year. From the returns received we find that several well known faces in the old Council need not be expected there owing to the whims of public opinion, or rather we might say owing to some private pique. Let us hope, however, that the new ones will do as well as their predecessors.

Board of School Trustees.

There was no meeting of this Board on Tuesday evening for want of a quorum. The evening was cold—perhaps that detained some. Those who were there deserve praise for facing the storm at all hazards.

Metropolitan Saloon.

Mr. Ellis of Rochester City, N. Y. has opened a first-class Saloon in the old stand which was recently kept by FRANK, under Nos. 1 and 2 Market Block. A free lunch is served up every day from 10 to 11 a. m. See advertisement in another column.

Peterboro Literary Club.

Subject for debate this Evening—"Has the Stage a moral tendency?" Leaders Messrs. Stratton & Gilbert. Readings by Messrs W. H. Scott & H. T. Strickland. The public are respectfully invited.

The Weather.

We have had a cold "spell" or two since the New Year; some of the coldest we have any memory of. The thermometer went as low as 22° below zero; some report even lower.

Parliament will meet on the 18th proximo, not instant, as got into our last by mistake.

Little Lake Cemetery Company.

The Annual Meeting of the above Company was held on Monday, the 15th instant, in the Council Chamber. The report of the Secretary, as below, was read; also, the Treasurer's Report—the most important one—showing cash in hands of Treasurer $127. The following gentlemen were then chosen Directors for the current year:—Rev. Mr. Gilmour, and Messrs. Robert Dennistoun, W. Clurton, W. Eastland, Thomas Fortye, William Lundy, Dr. Harvey, R. Walton, Wm. Hall.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

To the Directors and Stockholders of the Little Lake Cemetery Company.

GENTLEMEN,—

Your Secretary begs leave to report that he has sold during the year Twenty-seven Lots, amounting to $270; and three single graves at $1 each.

There are accounts due to the Company for Lots sold, which can be collected, to the amount of $70.40.

Of deaths during the year and interred in the Little Lake Cemetery, there has been 46; 18 males and 22 females. Of the above number, eight have died under 10 years of age, two between 10 and 20, thirteen between 20 and 40, nine between 40 and 50, seven between 60 and 80, and one at 94.

Their nationalities were: Canadians 21, English 8, Irish 7, and Scotch 4.

Twenty three have died in the Town of Peterborough, 5 in Ashburnham, and 12 in the surrounding country.

The diseases from which they died, so far as they are given, are as follows:—Consumption 14, Intemperance 1, Inflamation 2, Paralysis 2, Still Born 1, Dropsy 1, Chronic Throat Disease 2, Chronic Rhumatism 1, Disentegration of Blood 1, Fungus Amatodis 1, Congestion of the Brain 1, Gastric Fever 1, Tumor of the Stomach 1, Accidental 1, Heart Disease 1, and 9 whose diseases were not given.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A. STEWART,
Secretary L. L. C. Co'y.

Peterboro', Jan. 15th, 1866.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, Jan. 15th, 1866.

The newly elected Council met at noon, when the following gentlemen were present: William Hepburn Scott, Mayor; and Messrs. Chamberlen, Hamilton, Doherty, Ormond, Cox, Ewing, Toole, Wilson, Stevenson, Miller and Wrighton.

The Clerk stated that he had received certificates from the Returning Officers of the different Wards of the due return of the following gentlemen, as Councillors for the the present year, viz:—

NORTH WARD—Messrs. William Toole, Edward Wilson, W. H. Wrighton.

CENTRE WARD—Messrs. Jas. Stevenson, John Doherty, Robert D. Ewing.

EAST WARD—Messrs. G. A. Cox, Melville Millar, Charles Ormond.

SOUTH WARD—Messrs. Edmund Chamberlen, Elias Burnham, Peter Hamilton.

And further, that all the members present had made the requisite declaration of office.

The minutes of the last meeting were then read and confirmed.

The Clerk, on request, read over the Rules of Order; when it was moved by Mr. Toole, that the said Rules, as far as applicable, should be adopted by this Council—which was agreed to.

A By-law for the appointment of Auditors was read a first time.

On motion, the Council went into Committee of the Whole—Mr. Chamberlen in the chair—on the second reading of the said By-law.

His Worship the Mayor nominated Mr. Charles Cameron as one of the Auditors; and on motion of Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Ormond, the name of Mr. Edgecomb Pearce was concurred in as the name of the other Auditor. The By-law was read and the blanks filled with these names, when the Committee rose.

The Council resumed—the By-law was read a second time without amendment.

On motion of Mr. Toole, the By-law was read a third time and passed.

The Council then adjourned till Monday evening next, at half-past seven o'clock.

Monaghan Township Council.

The members of the new Council met in conformity with the Act, when John W. Gilmour, for Ward No. 1; Henry Collins, for Ward No. 2; Wm. Robson, for Ward No. 3; and John Dundass, for Ward No. 4, severally qualified, and took the required oaths of office.

On the motion of Councillor Collins, John W. Gilmour, Esq., was unanimously elected Reeve, for the third consecutive time, when he took the required oath of office.

In his official capacity he named Robert J. Shaw, Esq., and on motion of Councillor Collins, seconded by Councillor Dundass, John McIntosh was appointed the second Auditor of Township accounts for past year.

On the motion of Councillor Collins, the Council adjourned for a short time when they met for the discharge of public business, the Reeve in the chair.

Present—Councillors Collins, Robson and Dundass.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Mr. Robert Laing, Jr., stating that it appeared from the return forwarded to the Clerk, by the Returning Officer for Ward No. 5, that he was elected to serve as Councillor for the present year; that as all his assessed property was not freehold, he was unable to take the obligation which the law required, and that it would therefore devolve on the Council to take the necessary steps to have a properly qualified person to represent the Ward. The Reeve was requested to issue a writ for a new election.

From Dr. Bell, stating that there was one dollar unpaid him from the Council for some past, for duties as Auditor; that he proposed, if the Council thought fit, to offset it against a day's statute labor, which was omitted to be performed by him last summer. Granted.

The Reeve gave in his account for charities from 12th August to 31st December, which amounted to $13.56½.

An order for $2 84 was given in favor of Messrs. Graham & Stratton, for printing for last year.

BY-LAWS.

A By-law to repeal a By-law passed on the 4th February, 1865, for the purpose of prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in this Municipality, received two readings.

A By-law to repeal a By-law passed on the 7th day of May, 1864, defining the duties of Path Masters, &c., received two readings.

The Council adjourned to the 2nd day of February, at the hour of 10 o'clock, a. m., then to meet for the appointment of officers for the current year, and also for the discharge of other business connected with the Council.—Com.

ASHBURNHAM COUNCIL.

The Councillors elect for the current year met on Monday at noon according to law.—All present.

The new members all made and subscribed the necessary declarations of qualification and office. The members of the Council then selected A. C. Dunlop, Esq., for Reeve for the current year.

Mr. Dunlop having made and subscribed the declaration of office for Reeve, took his seat when the minutes of the last Council meeting were read and confirmed.

Jonathan Stevenson and Daniel McDonald Jr., were appointed auditors for the current year.

The Clerk was directed to call on the Pound-keeper to make the yearly returns to the Council at next meeting.

The Council adjourned to first Monday of February next at 7 o'clock.

OTONABEE COUNCIL.

MR. EDITOR,—The newly elected Councillors for the Township of Otonabee met in their Council Room on Monday last, the 15th inst., and after having been duly qualified, proceeded to elect their Reeve and Deputy Reeve, in the presence of a number of spectators. It soon became evident that the old Reeve was their choice from the fact that he was elected to the high and honourable position of Reeve by acclamation. John Miller, Esq., was elected Deputy Reeve, in the same manner. He is a gentleman of a most exemplary character, and one of the wealthiest farmers in the Township. The present Council is looked upon as a good one, and an improvement on the last. The Reeve then took the chair after having qualified as such Reeve, and in a few brief but appropriate remarks thanked the Council for the honourable position he was placed in—unsolicited on his part—and pointed out to the Council a few of the more important duties they would be called upon to perform. The Council then proceeded to business and appointed Messrs. Russel and Evans, Auditors. The old Assessor and Collector was re-appointed for the present year. A By-law to repeal the Dunkin Law was passed, some cases relating to arrears of taxes were read and adjusted. A few small accounts were ordered to be paid, and a few small sums were granted for the relief of certain parties in the Municipality.

Council adjourned to the third Monday in February next.

I am, Mr. Editor, yours, &c.,
A SPECTATOR.

Monaghan Intellectual Improvement Society.

The eighth Annual Soiree of the North Monaghan Intellectual Improvement Society was held at the Town Hall, on New Year's Day, when upwards of one hundred sat down to tea. The spread was sufficient to satisfy the most fastidious, and right heartily indeed did those present seem to engage in the performance of a most pleasing and agreeable duty.

J. W. Gilmour, Esq., Reeve of the Township was called to the chair, and in a very appropriate speech stated the object which had brought them together; pointed out the facilities which now existed for mental improvement—gave some suggestions relative thereto—was glad to see so many present, all apparently so well pleased—wished them a happy New Year—and called upon the Secretary for his report.

The Secretary said that for a long series of years he was enabled to report favorably of the Society; but, for the first time, he regretted he could not now do so, that the past year had been a blank, but they would would not give up; they had lost many of their former lecturers, still they had promises on which they could rely for this season, and as they could not recal the past they would strive to improve the present. Respecting the Intellectual Improvement Society he considered the following line very appropriate:

"So here we stand.
Like ship wreck'd mariners on sun-beat strand,
Propell'd to embark, and tempt the waves anew,
And whether we sink or float, depends on you."

Mr. James Campbell, addressed the meeting at considerable length, showing inexhaustable resources; gave some useful hints as to the improvement of time, and noticed some things which he considered most suitable to affect that object.

Col. Haultain, on rising, was greeted with evident manifestations of applause. He expressed his pleasure at meeting with so many of his own Township on such an occasion. He sincerely wished them all a very happy New Year. The meeting had special connection with the Intellectual Society of this Township. Great credit was due to the organization for the zeal and perseverance which they had manifested in sustaining the work; only those who have attempted it are aware of the trouble entailed upon the persons undertaking it. The lateness of the evening and the length at which they had been addressed, made it desirable to bring their meeting to a termination. When he thought of the very wonderful powers of the human mind, and its capacity for improvement and development, he felt it almost unnecessary to urge it upon them as a duty to seize all reasonable opportunity for self-improvement. He would take the liberty at the same time of reminding them that self-improvement was only a means to an end. The author, the creator of these powers or faculties must himself be the end of all that He has created. To improve all for Him, and to employ all for Him, is at once our plainest duty and our distinguished privilege. It adds stability to the character; it raises it and enobles it. This was period of the year suggestive of much, both as regards the past or the future. Had time permitted he (Col. H.) would have thought it most appropriate to have alluded to the peculiar circumstances of the Province—what has been done and what remains yet to be accomplished. He would contrast the forebodings that had ushered in the past year with the remarkable prosperity with which it had closed. The diversified interests of the British Provinces, as regards the past, might well have been reviewed in connection with the future that is before them. He looked with great satisfaction to the apparent re-action that had taken place in the two most important of the Maratime Provinces. He would like to have said a few words relative to the vast country stretching away to the Rocky Mountains—vast in its extent, and not less so in its resources. In fact the commencement of a new year seemed to him to be a time that naturally induced thought and reflection, which might lead to greater wisdom and activity and forethought than has characterized our past. Agriculturally and commercially, intellectually, morally and spiritually, we ought to hope for improvement, and resolve with God's help to make progress. The termination of the civil war across our borders is matter for rejoicing, both for ourselves as well as for those more immediately suffering from it. But still the condition of the continent is remarkable. The three great separate nations inhabitating it are all in a transition state endeavoring to re-construct, and it is to be hoped, to amend their condition. Europe also presents an aspect that seems to defy conjecture as to the future. The death of Lord Palmerston and the King of the Belgians are events of no small importance. Belgium, with its by no means united population, is a prize that may prove too near to the amoitious and unscrupulous master of the French nation. The withdrawal of French troops from Rome, the unsettled state of Italy, the divisions of Austria, the unblushing rapacity of Prussia and the almost judicial obstinacy of its king, and the stirrings of the peoples of all the European nations, in addition to which many very learned as well as pious men have agreed that momentous events are centred about the present time, all point to changes at no distant date. Happy indeed ought we to esteem ourselves in the peaceful character of the efforts that we are making to remove our difficulties. In conclusion he cordially and seriously invited those present most humbly to ask for His guidance, who reigns supreme amongst the nations of the earth.

The proceedings terminated by singing the National Anthem.—Com.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—Having on previous occasions contributed to your widely circulated and valuable journal, I still when at a distance consider it a great pleasure—greater than before—to have some of my loosely thrown together ideas brought before your many readers.

Chicago is a city beautifully situated on a prairie land, on the western shore of lake Michigan, and is noted for being the great centre of trade of the north-west. Its large manufactories, its 16 or 17 railroads, together with its almost unparalleled water communication, claim unquestionably for it the well merited appellation of "The Great City of the West." Its length is about six miles by three wide, containing about 200,000 living souls, a great number of whom are Germans, a class of people highly intellectual and praiseworthy.

The inhabitants of this city are truly a go-ahead people. The grandeur of their public buildings, their safe and expensive harbour, the manner in which their streets have been built and are still in progression, bespeak for them the highest amount of praise. The stranger who visits this city finds the streets thronged with vehicles conveying merchandize of every description; he sees great wholesale and retail establishments crowded with purchasers, evidently showing to the most casual observer that undoubtedly a heavy trade—in dry goods, groceries, hardware and other merchandise—is carried on; but those branches of trade which constitute the great body of our commerce, seem almost invisible. The trade in live stock is carried on in parts of the city rarely visited except by those connected with the business; the lumber trade is also confined to a portion of the city scarcely ever seen by travellers; and the grain, most important of all, only requires for its transaction a few storehouses and the labor of some hundreds of men: silently and rapidly everything is conducted in connection with the grain trade from it enters till it leaves the city. One might live here for years and never dream that through this city passes the greater part of the exports of the north-west. The arrangements for handling grain in Chicago have almost reached perfection: cars are emptied as fast as men can shovel their contents into hoppers, and vessels are loaded as fast as grain will run through a nine inch spout from the top of an elevator.

I have been informed with regard to the exports of this city that 27 years ago, Chicago shipped only seventy-eight bu hels, a quantity which might be consumed by one family, while during the past year of 65, according to some late statistics, she has exported the almost incredible quantity of 46,000,000 bushels.

About a year ago an extensive operation was begun here, that of digging a tunnel under the lake to the distance of two miles from the shore, at the outer extremity of which is built the tunnel crib from which a perpendicular shaft (built of brick) is sunk to the distance of 70 feet below the surface of the lake, to meet the horizontal tunnel from the shore, which is now about half completed. This is for the purpose of getting pure water with which to supply the city, the water now being taken from near the shore is anything and everything but that which is pure and healthy. When the new water works are completed the people will I presume rise one and all in a general rejoicing at being delivered from the fish nuisance with which we are now pested. Those little fishes some how or other get into the outer end of the large hydrant and are sent on a fish raid throughout the city, it is no unusual thing when drawing a glass of water to have 3 or four of those unclean visitors ejected from the hydrant into your drink.

The street hydrants were lately opened to draw off the noxious fluid and filth which had accumulated in them. Thousands almost millions of little fishes alive and dead were violently thrown into the gutter and saved the trouble of wending their way further into the hydrants of dwellings. During the flow of the water at the corner of one of our streets, were discovered two fingers of a human hand lying in the gutter where the flood had washed away the dirt and exposed them to view. Considerable excitement therefore prevailed the crowd of spectators, and when some bystander suggested the members in question were ejected from the hydrant, the sensation greatly increased. The fingers were the index and second of some person's right hand and had the appearance of having been rudely torn from their fellows, the two hanging together simply by a piece of flesh having a very fresh appearance. The affair is yet involved in mystery and likely so to remain. The fingers are now in charge of some of the authorities for identification.

With regard to the people here, Sir! I often wonder (when I think of the people in Canada grumbling, as they do, of the petty tax they have to pay) how the Americans can cheerfully and contentedly submit to their taxation.—When we consider that five years ago they had scarcely anything in the way of taxation and that now they are the most heavily taxed people in the world, that there is hardly anything they buy, sell, use or enjoy but what is taxed, and yet such is there anxiety to pay their national debt that they cheerfully submit to this system of taxation without a murmur.

Terrible indeed have been the sacrifices of blood and treasure during the late struggle. Thousands have gone down amidst the shock of battle or have been swept from existence by that grim pestilence which always follows in the path of war. The widows and orphans of America are at this moment greater in number than in any other country on the face of the globe. Many of these brave men (who have valiently fought for their country's cause) may be seen bobbling about this city, and are now but the shattered remains of their former physical manhood; and looming in the distance beyond all this flood-tide of desolation, (that has rolled in waves of blood across this country from ocean to ocean during the last four years) rises black and portentous in the horizon a public debt of $2,700,000,000, but the yearly payment of some 40 or 50 millions will soon liquidate this debt and America will be herself again.

I presume many of your readers are somewhat started with the Fenian excitement—their threatened attack upon Canada. I have had the honor of paying for attending some of their public meetings here, heard them speak in the most disrespectful terms of England and English law, her tyranny over Ireland, her neutrality during the late american struggle, but never did they say one word of making a raid upon canada—the thing is absurd, they don't want canada; the object (for which they appear so Zealously affected, and for which they say they will spill their hearts blood) is the small Emerald Ile now sorely but not irrecoverably oppressed by English domination. Many Guardians believe that the Americans, especially the people of Chicago, do and will assist those fenians in their unwarrantable undertaking; such is not true; America wants peace with England and that peace can only be maintained by respect and manly conduct. They believe Feinianism to be a miscreate humbug, a bubble, the bursting of which has already become apparent. Those at its head are carrying on the scheme at the expense of poor laboring men and servant maids, for the purpose of lining their own pockets, rather than to free their supposed oppressed country. Many collections have here been taken up in aid of this fund. The celebrated G. F. Train lectured here a short time ago in behalf of his country, and the money collected on that occasion alone must have reached an incredible amount, it was indeed grevious to the lecturer that the large hall could hold no more, then being as many outside ready with their coat ibutions, as would fill a hall double its size. Within the past week or two one city has been visited by Father Curly, a Catholic priest in most excellent standing from the faroff shores of California, who was moved by inspira tion to preach the redemption of Ireland by the sword. He came here with the cross in one hand and the sword in the other, threatening the hard-hearted, encouraging those in weakness, strengthening the strong, and commanding all to go in person to the field or send without delay the paltry sum of $10.00 to O'Mahony, the latter course being the most acceptable. If he did not marshal many recruits he certainly collected huge piles of the one thing needful. People here say he went to Canada on his mission of love, he, however, is travelling still and travels well, is talented because he carries all the talents he can get, and if the Green Isle is not made free in due time, then Father Curly will have invoked a brilliant crusade, to end after years of glory, in utter failure.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The following letter which we copy from the Globe shows to a happy extent the delight felt by a patient on recovering his health.

(To the Editor of the Globe.)

DEAR SIR,—Allow me to express through your valuable journal my grateful acknowledgements to Drs. Hunter and Malcolm for their skill and attention during my illness. My health has improved so much since I began their treatment by inhalation that I deem it my duty to publish the facts of the case, so that all who feel as I did may be induced to embrace the opportunity which this wonderful treatment affords, and regain their lost strength.

For six or seven years I was troubled with a dull pain in my sides. In the last year it grew much worse, and I had a hacking cough; my expectorations were of a yellow color, and I was short of breath on very slight exertion. When to this I add, that I was of a scrofulous habit of body, and that one sister had died of a pulmonary disease, you can understand the state of mental expression and anxiety with which I contemplate the future.

In five weeks after I began the inhalations I gained twenty-five pounds in weight, and now I feel like a captive released, all my bad symptoms having left me. I would recommend the world-weary, the sick and sad to try this treatment, in the firm conviction that it will not disappoint their highest hopes.

Though the days of my years were not many in number,
Already the grave-yard began to appear,
And my spirit would shrink at the shade of that slumber
The last and the longest which comes to us here.

But now, since I've taken the mild inhalations,
Again the high hopes of my manhood are near,
And I feel like A lad the first day of vacation,
When his hat and his ball both go up with a cheer.

I am, dear Sir,
Very truely yours,
J. R. RAMSAY.

Cainsville, C. W., Jan. 19, 1864.

NOTE.—Dr. Malcolm, referred to in the above letter, will be at Caisse's Hotel for consultation on Friday and Saturday, the 26th and 27th inst., from 9 a. m. to 4. p. m.

Mr. J. T. Breeze, the Canadian poet, is at present in Town, and is offering for sale a volume of his poems. We trust that he will receive the encouragement his work merits. Mr. Breeze is a voluminous writer.

Canada Farmer.

Subscriptions for the Canada Farmer will be received at Graham & Stratton's at clubbing rates.

An immense mass meeting in honor of the Fenian delegates was held in Union Square, New York, on the 11th instant. Addresses were made by several delegates from various states, and by Colonel O'Mahoney.

Gen. Grant expresses the opinion that the necessity for maintaining a large military force in the Southern States no longer exists, and he believes that a material reduction in the number of troops remaining there may be still safely made.

GREAT FIRE IN QUEBEC, JAN. 13th.—John Anderson & Co., Haslett, McCall, Sheehyn & Co., M. G. Mountain, Myrand, Gingres, O. S. Richardson & Co., Lemieux & Noel, all burnt out this morning, at seven, by explosion of coal oil at Anderson's. No body hurt. Loss heaviest this year for insurance.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.—This little colony is progressing. Twenty-three years since the population of the island numbered 47,034, it is now over 85,000. In the year 1842 the revenue was only £13,545; it is now not less than £60,000. There were then but 121 schools; now there are but few less than three times that number. At that period 644,824 bushels of oats were raised in the colony; it now raises two and a half millions. Then it raised 83,229 bushels of barley; now it raises nearly 300,000. It owned then 9,861 horses, at present there are 20,000. The shipping of P. E. Island has increased in an equally satisfactory ratio. A judicious settlement of the landlord and tenant question, which can only be accomplished by confederation, would impart a vast impetus to the "Granary of the St. Lawrence."

The Hamilton Spectator says that a disgraceful outrage was perpetrated in the Episcopal Church at Jarvis on Christmas day. Considerable trouble had been taken by the congregation to decorate the church with evergreens, and among other appropriate emblems three crosses had been placed up against the wall. After the service, however, and before the congregation had dispersed, a ruffianly person walked up and tore one of them down from its place and throwing it on the floor hurried from the church. For this outrage he was summoned to appear before a justice of the peace on Saturday. There is great excitement in the neighborhood.

Rumored Plot to Rescue Jeff Davis.

An exciting rumor is afloat of a plan in progress to rescue Jeff. Davis. The organized scheme, according to prevailing reports, is for the participators in the plot to come here in schooners and under such guise of legitimate trading and intervals of arrival as to ward off suspicion of the object sought to be accomplished. The whole thing may be a rumor and nothing more—the mere vagary of some one burdened with extra vividness of imagination and sharpness of vision capable of penetrating mill stones, beyond the depths of ordinary folks. One thing is very positive, however, that enough importance has been attached to the rumor to cause a thorough search to be made of all the vessels in the harbor in quest of some of this alleged band of conspirators. Thus far no arrests have been made. No Guy Fawkes stripe and look of men, long-haired and reckless of men, have been found hovering in the holds or on the decks of the vessels in port. What may come in other vessels a look through them will show. Of course, too much vigilance cannot be exercised to thwart any such scheme as the one referred to, if it is on foot, and it would be far better to err on the side of over caution than through any negligence to allow Jeff. Davis to slip through our fingers. There can be no doubt, of course, that there are those who would willingly be induced to give their personal aid to rescue Jeff. Davis from prison, and, further, it cannot be doubted that the ex-rebel chieftain would very much like to see the way clear for walking securely away in any fashion, saving that of St. Denis, with his head under his arm. The growing and strengthening impression is that some one has been sold. The real fact doubtless is, that in all the vast domain of the late confederacy there are but few, at most, who give themselves the slightest thought or care touching the future of their quondam pseudo ruler and chief. It is natural it should be so. The feelings and conduct of the Southern people only exemplify the way of the world—a cringing, not to say fawning subservience to the powers that be, and ignoring the powers that were. Jeff. can do nothing for them now, cannot give them place or position, and, with no chance of doing anything for them in the future, has become of the slightest possible consequence. But if there are those crazy headed enough to meditate the rescue of Jeff. Davis, one thing is certain—that, come in what force the rescuers might, they would have a sorry time of it getting Jeff. Davis away. To have the slightest show of success would require a very large, very determined and very sacrificing body of men. The leader of it would have the leading of the fool-hest of forlorn hopes. Those who are anxious upon the subject of the safe custodianship of Jeff. Davis may rest assured, therefore, of his safe keeping here until his release for his trial, hanging or liberty, is ordered by the government.—Fortress Monroe Cor. N. Y. Herald.

The Maroons of Jamaica.

A London correspondent writes in a recent letter, in which he speaks of the Jamaica insurrection, the following brief account of the "Maroons":

These people of Jamaica, who formed Her Majesty's allies in the late insurrection, are of Coromantee descent, and represent the original inhabitants of that Island. "Maroon" means "hog-hunter," and was given to the slaves of the Spanish colonists of 1655, who (the slaves) on the invasion of England fled to the mountains and supported themselves by robbery and boar-hunting. They skulked about the skirts of the outlaying plantations, and murdered stragglers, and at night set fire to cane pieces and out-houses. A regular war was undertaken against them in 1730, during which they were headed by a famous chief named Cudjoe. It lasted four years, and presented some of the most curious features which war admits.—The Maroon chiefs used to station themselves in glens—called in the West Indies "cockpits"—inclosed by nearly perpendicular mountains and rocks, and only to be entered by a narrow "defile." Here, when an enemy was expected, they planted themselves on the ledges of the rock on each side, and fired on them as they advanced in single line. So harrassing were hostilities of this kind that in 1738 and 1739 regular treaties were made and concessions given to these brave savages. Land was yielded to them, and a Jurisdiction bestowed on the chiefs which constituted an imperium in imperio in the island. This state of things, modified now and then by new regulations, continued until near the end of the last century, when the influence of the French Revolution (acting on the West Indies just as that of the American Revolution is acting now) produced the great Maroon war of 1795. Jamaica was then governed by a distinguished soldier—Alexander Lindsay, Earl of Balcardles—who conducted the struggle to a satisfactory conclusion. At that time the common negroes did not, as a general rule, join the rebellion, while now it is they who rise and the Maroons who remain firm to Her Majesty's Government.

NEW PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL.—We are pleased to learn that the Hon. A. J. Fergusson Blair, member for the Brock Division, has accepted the seat in the Cabinet vacated by the Hon. George Brown, and refused on the authority of the Globe by Mr. McKenzie the member for Lambton. We are glad that Mr. Blair has had the moral courage to accept office under such circumstances, for his doing so shows that the question upon which Mr. Brown resigned is not viewed by Mr. Blair in the "grave" light in which it is regarded by his faithful follower, Mr. McKenzie. In Mr. Blair's acceptance of office the Reform party will have a renewed pledge of the continuance of the compact in its integrity. Mr. Blair is one of the oldest and most reliable public men, a true and tried Reformer, and will therefore prove a faithful representative in the Cabinet of the principles of his party. The new President of the Council will undoubtedly be returned by acclamation, and we trust that he will see that no time is lost in hurrying forward the measure, the carrying of which is the only justification of the existence of the government as at present constituted.—Berlin Telegraph.

FENIAN EXCITEMENT.—The good people of Prescott were on Wednesday night thrown into a state of intense excitement, a rumour having gained currency there, on that evening, that an overwhelming number of Fenians were to take possession at once of the town, and that ere morning the "flag of freedom" would flaunt defiantly from the historical wind mill. Col. Atcherly immediately communicated to the Prescott Volunteers the precise state of affairs, and No. 1 Company promptly and loyally turned out, determined to "bleed and die" in defence of their town and country. Pickets and guards were stationed at proper points throughout the place and a "state of war" prevailed, second only in importance to the war itself. On Thursday evening No. 2, with also the most laudable enthusiasm went on duty, but we are happy to chronicle the fact that the excitement ended in "nobody hurt" and no disturbance.—Ottawa Citizen.

COBOURG AND PETERBORO RAILWAY.—We are glad to note that a great step has been made towards the amalgamation of the Cobourg and Peterboro Railway Company and the Marmora Iron Company. A meeting was held on Wednesday last at the office of the Campany president over by Hon. A. A. Burnham, at which Hon J. Cock

A WORD TO THE LADIES.

AT the commencement of a New Year, the proprietor of

Frank Leslie's Lady's Magazine

Appeals, confidently, to his fair subscribers to assist him in increasing its circulation. The simple fact that they themselves patronize it is a sufficient proof that they consider it the best, a distinction which the publisher has endeavored to deserve, by sparing neither pains nor expense.

The double Steel Fashion Plate, exquisitely colored, surpasses that of any other Magazine; while the other Fashion plates exceed in number and beauty those of all other Lady's Magazines combined.

The commencement of a New Year and a New Volume, induces us to ask our Lady Subscribers to recommend this, their favorite publication to their friends. This will enable the proprietor to render Frank Leslies Lady's Magazine still more acceptable.

The present number contains two features of great interest:—One a series of Lithographic copies of the most popular Parisian Pictures, colored in exact imitation of the original, possessing all the delicacy and finish of water colors. And the other a Plate of Doll Fashions arranged to be cut into separate pieces, so as to form a perfect Doll with change of costume. Other pictures and models are in course of preparation and will appear in succeeding numbers.

TERMS.—One copy one year, or 12 numbers, $3 50; four copies one year, in one wrapper, to one address, $14, with an extra copy to the person getting up a club.

Subscriptions to be sent to 537 Pearl Street, N. Y.

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE CO.

OFFICE 591 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

GUARANTEE.—After a fair trial, if any purchaser does not regard the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine as superior to any machine in market, he can return it and have his money. It has taken many of the highest prizes.—is less complicated than any other first class machine,—does a wider range of work without changing,—requires no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate machine.

N B. Any Clergyman sending us two orders for Machines, shall receive one for himself as a present. The same proposition is extended to Professors and Teachers.

We have now completed our New Manufactory at a cost of some $200,000, including New Patents and important Improvements: and the object of the above proposition is to secure the immediate introduction of our improved machine into every town in the United States without incurring the great expense of a travelling agent.

This proposition cannot avail in towns occupied by our own agents.

Please send for descriptive Catalogue, with samples of sewing.

When Old Friends Were Here.

When old friends were here,
In days that are flown,
How fond were the wands
Which oft clasped my own.
The path ways of life,
Were pleasures sunny hue;
All voices were near
With tones warm and true.

Chorus—All are gone,
Now loved ones near,
I weep for the happy days
When old friends were here,
When old friends were here,
Those gentle friends so dear,
I weep for the happy days,
When old friends were here.

When old friends were here,
We roamed o'er hills,
We sang merry songs
As free as the rills;
Life flow on its wave
Bore rudely borne away
Our fair dewy flowers
Of life's early day.

Chorus—All are gone, &c.

Cat Parody on Poe's Raven.

The local editor of the Montezuma Iowa Republican appears to have a great horror of cats, and admiration for the style of Poe's Raven. Witness the following parody effusion:

The other night while we lay musing, pondering weary brain confusing over the topics of the day, suddenly we heard a rattling, as of serious hosts a battling as they mingled in the fury. "What is that?" we cried, up starting and into the darkness dimly gazing! we ran against the door, "'Tis nothing," Edward grumbled, as over his arm chair he stumbled, "it's nothing but nothing more.' Then we said, determined rising, (for we thought it so surprising that a bug should thus offend,) "Do you think a small insect, sir, thus would fill their infant, sir?" No, 'tis not a bug but a friend."

Now, being sorely frightened, round our waist our pants we tightened, and put on our overcoat and hat, when into the darkness peering, we saw with trembling and mud hating, the glaring eyes of Thomas Cat, Esq. With astonishment and wonder, we gazed upon this son of thunder, as he sat upon the floor; when resolution taking, and a rapid movement making, lo, we opened wide the door. "Now clear out," we hoarsely shouted, as o'erhead our boot was found, "take your presence from my floor." Then with air and mien majestic, this dear creature called domestic, mad heaven through the door. Made his exit without growling, neither was his voice heard howling; not a single word he said. And with feeling much elated, to escape a doom so fated, we went back to bed.

How a Doctor was Sold.

A young medical friend of ours who was not at all conscious of his excessive softness of goodness, was suddenly awakened to a knowledge of those facts in the following way. We leave him to tell the story in his own words:

I was down to see the widow yesterday (and Tim's uncle) and she gave me dinner. I went down rather early in the morning: we talked and laughed, and chatted, and ran on, she was going out and in occasionally, till dinner was ready, when she helped me graciously to pidgeon pie. Now I thought that, Tim, rather favourable. I took it as a symptom of personal approbation, because everybody knows I love pidgeon pie, and I flattered myself she had cooked it on purpose for me. So particularly cheerful, and I thought I could see it in her, too. So after dinner, while sitting close beside the widow I fancied we both felt rather comfortable like—I know I did. I felt that I had fallen over head and ears in love with her, and I imagined, from the way she looked, she had fallen in love with me. She appeared just for all the world like she thought it was a coming, that I was going to court her. Presently, I couldn't help it, I laid my head softly on her beautiful shoulder and I remarked, when I had placed it there in my blandest tones, Tim, for I tried to throw my whole soul into the expression, I remarked thee, with every outpouring love, truth, and fidelity right into her—

"Widow, thou is the nicest, softest place I ever laid my head on in all my life!"

Looking benevolently at me, and at the same time flushing up a little, she said, in melting and winning tones—

"Doctor, give me your hand, and I'll put it on a much softer place."

In a moment, in rapture, I consented, and took my hand, she gently, very gently Tim, and quietly, laid it on my head—and I lost into a laugh that's ringing in my ears yet.

Now, Tim, I haven't told this to a living soul but you, and, by jinks! you mustn't; but I couldn't hold it any longer, so I tell you; but mind, it mustn't go any further

---

A scrub-headed boy being brought up before the court as a witness, the following colloquy ensued:

'Where do you live?' said the Judge.

'Live with mother.'

'Where does your mother live?'

'She lives with father.'

'Where does he live?'

'He lives with the old folks.'

'Where do they live?' says the Judge, getting very red, as an audible snicker goes round the room.

'They don't home.'

'Where in the thunder's home?' roars the Judge.

'That's where I'm from,' says the boy, sticking his tongue in a corner of his cheek, and slowly closing one eye on the Judge.

'Here Mr. Constable,' says the Court, 'take the witness out and tell him to travel; he evidently does not understand the nature of an oath.'

'You'd think differently,' says the boy, going towards the doorway, 'if I was once to give you a cussin'!'

TAKING IT COOLLY.—In the notes of an army surgeon we find the following—I remember one day, in making my hospital rounds, a patient just arrived, presente I me an amputated forearm and in doing so could scarcely refrain from a broad laugh: the latter was constantly on his face. "What is the matter? this does not strike me as a subject of laughter.' 'It is not doctor; but excuse me—I lost my arm in such a funny way, that I still laugh whenever I look at it. Our first sergeant wanted a swing, and got me to attend him, as I am a corporal. We went together in front of his tent; I had lathered him, took him by the nose, and was just applying the razor, a cannon ball came, and that was the last I saw of his head and my arm. Excuse me, doctor, for laughing so, but I never saw such a thing before."

A sour fellow says that he always looks under the marriage head for the pews of the week.

T HAS BECOME NECESSARY

TO SUPPLY ANOTHER SET OF TELEGRAPHIC INSTRUMENTS and open another Office, to meet the wants of the constantly increasing number of Students studying this Art at the

LONDON COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.

In future those Students learning to operate by paper will be entirely separate from those learning by sound. Regular instruction will be given in each class every day.

Instruction will also be given each day in Phonography, by Mr S. Hotchkinson, late reporter for Fowler & Wells, N. Y. We guarantee that an ordinary student can become thoroughly grounded in this Science whilst taking the Commercial Course, without materially interfering with his progress in that course.

The additional charge for full instruction in Telegraphing is only $5.

The additional charge for full instruction in Phonography is only $2.

Owing to the increase in the number of our Commercial Students, we have also found it necessary to add to our already large number of desks, and the cry is, 'Still they Come!' All right, Gentlemen! We will furnish a desk and seat for each of you, and good practical instruction, too. Remember, you can take a good thorough course in this College cheaper than in any other. Please send for circular, containing full information. For specimens of Penmanship, &c, enclose stamp and address,

AMERICAN
Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering
SEWING MACHINE
COMPANY,

627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-hole, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, glazed or chine silks, and produce a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c, &c, it is indispensable, it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c., &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc, opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES
DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMETS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong Iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old heavy frame of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wallenhaupt,	A. Barili,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Von Heinz Family,	Charles Fradel

Mr. SIGISMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal verisimilitude, that crowning excelence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos the night out the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5.—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supersede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

SEWING MACHINES.
EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms, { 536 Broadway, New York. / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nansook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it almost impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

New Map

OF

Peterborough and Ashburnham.

THE undersigned beg to announce that their New Map of the Town of Peterboro' and of the Village of Ashburnham, is now complete and ready for publication.

This Map has been compiled with great care from the original registered plans and surveys, and the entire accuracy secured not only by close scrutiny, but by actual survey and careful admeasurement. In the two corporations named, not only is every Lot given and its subdivisions where divided, but the names of the owners, as contained in the last Assessment Roll, are neatly printed on each lot. All public buildings, manufactories, stores, and private residences, together with the existing and proposed railways, streets, mill-races, water-courses dams, bridges, &c., are laid down from actual measurement. The built-up portion of the town is so colored as to distinguish at a glance the materials used, whether of wood, stone or brick; while the whole is finished in a superior manner, so as to be both useful and ornamental, in securing which neither pains nor expense have been spared

During the ensuing week, the undersigned will be prepared to receive the names of intending subscribers, at their office, Scott' Buildings Early application is desired, as but a limited number of copies will be published.

THE LASS O' HALLYDOWN.

Upon a sunny night in June,
The sky was azure blue;
The sun had set down in the West,
The evening star in view.
At Exemouth Fair, fair maids were there,
From country and from town,
But there I saw no neat and braw
The Lass o' Hallydown.

I kindly did salute this maid;
Love's pulse was beating high;
I gave the slip to every care
When Geordie dear was nigh.
In your com any I long to be,
It would my wishes crown.
What ever bet I'll be thy guide,
My love, to Hallydown.

The lassie blush'd and gave a smile,
Love's token of consent.
Then arm and arm we on did walk,
Along the flowery bent,
And as we walked and sweetly talked,
I praised all about
Oh, to be wi' such modesty,
As the Lass o' Hallydown.

Her homely cot appeared in view;
The day began to dawn;
The waving Corn with morning dew,
Dropped on the verdant lawn.
Good morning, maid, I to her said,
I'll call upon the soon
I'll not neglect to pay respect,
To the Lass o' Hallydown.

FAST AND FIRM.

A ROMANCE AT MARSEILLES.

(Concluded.)

'This your brother's address?' I asked Ruth, as we approached Rouse, reading a card she gave me.

'Yes, you are surprised. Why?'

'This is such a miserable quarter,'

'Oh, he is very poor, and always saving to be able soon to give me a home' she said. He says I shall never be happy as a governess.'

'Ruth I said, taking her hand as we drove through the streets. 'Let me call you so. I am not a stranger now; I am mother to you, wishing to be to you more than any brother; but I am not going to speak of that now. Are you prepared to a great shock. Can your physical system bear it. I know that brave mind will I mean if your brother should be very, very ill, dying—dead.'

She shuddered. 'You have said the word; I could not. I have been thinking all day that he is dead, that is why——'

'Why no one met you.'

'Yes.'

'I fear, poor child you may be right.—You will try to bear up bravely; and—you will let me be a brother to you till——'

Now the ears so good.

'This street is enough to have killed one,' she said. 'Surely it is not here.'

We had a opportunity of the narrow hall, as a matter of course, loiterers in crowds of which there are plenty in Rouse. 'It is here, I said, as the cabman opened the door.

I gave the word 'Wait,' and lifted her out.

Up the dark chilly dirty stair, up we up. At last we reached a room on which the poor fellow's scant was nailed.

She seemed to gather courage now She led the way through a small dark antechamber, in which I paused.

I listened.

I heard a smothered exclamation from her, from him a cry so short as to be almost a scream—'Ruth'

I walked to the head of the staircase and waited there perhaps half an hour.—Then she came to me and laid her hand upon my arm—the expression of the pitiful eyes told to mine told me there was no hope.

With a caressing word I drew her to me. She leant her forehead against my arm a moment, then——

'Harold wants to see you; Harold wants to look you,' she said, in a scarcely audible voice.

I followed her to the room.

The full light of a small square window from which one could see the Tiber, the Castle of St. Angello, and the line of Monte Janiculum, was streaming on a low couch where my poor school-fellow lay.

I saw directly that his wish was a question of no more than days, perhaps only hours.

Yet what a bright bright face it was still. What a light streamed from those patient eyes as he without rising—he was past that—stretched both hands towards me.

Ruth was crouching by him: one hand soon clutched her again; the other grasped mine as I sat down by him.

In the strange world how often are simple deeds that cost nothing to the doers, most richly rewarded. What had I done? What sacrifice had I made? And how they thanked and blessed me. He with his difficulty-spoken, fond words; she with her tender eyes confirming the phrases.

A few words explained the case.

He had rallied after sending the first telegram, and had thought it needless that Ruth should come; he had not calculated on the possibility of her starting off immediately as she had done; and the second message which by her not come had not reached her.

A few days after—two days since now—he had broken a blood-vessel, and had been pronounced beyond hope.

If only I had known of all this sooner, I thought as I looked at the miserable room, and thought of my idle hundreds and thousands.

When, by and by, Ruth for a brief while absent—a woman being in the rooms below who had been very kind to Harold, had taken her aside to give her some refreshment—I stammeringly expressed something of my regret, he answered:

'It is better as it is; for myself I am content. I believe in another working world where there will be a better light, a truer sight, more beauty to perceive, and purer senses to receive it.'

'Is your sweet sister free?' I asked; 'free from any engagement,—free-hearted.' I spoke low and hastily, and felt in all my being how much hung upon his answer.

'My little Ruth—oh yes, as far as I know, and she never had any secrets from me.'

'I love her' I responded. 'If she can love me, I will do what a man can to make a woman happy as a wife.'

He did not immediately answer; he lay with closed eyes; but I felt the tightening pressure of his hand.

'I may tell her by and by that I had your good wishes.'

'You may tell her,' the radiant eyes unclosed on me, 'that in my last hours I drank a full cup of happiness, believing that my little Ruth would be happy as your wife.'

'You have not lost your generous enthusiasm for a very unworthy fellow,' I answered

'Nothing I have heard of my old friend, my protector my benefactor, has tended to lessen these feelings' he said.

'One word of yours in your sister's ear will make me——'

She came in at that moment. I was going to leave them together, but he begged me not to go; and while he spoke a mortal faintness surprised him.

It passed, however. He asked to be lifted up; the recumbent position was painful to him; he lay with his head on Ruth's shoulder, bright hair mingling with light hair.

The doctor came and went, and the woman who had nursed him; they both foreboded that the last hour was near.

It was an afternoon not to be forgotten. He said he did not suffer much; now and again he talked; and when he talked wisdom out of the world was in his words.

Ruth did not shed a tear; she seemed absorbed in him beyond consciousness of self or sorrow; she moistened his lips or wiped his brow continually, and her eyes seemed to cling to his.

The sunset entered the room touching these two. She watched him intently; his eyes closed, half opened, seemed to look at her dreamily, like the eyes of one who I yes off to sleep. The light faded; the dusk gathered; we did not stir, believing he slept.

By and by through the gloom, the near and the distant noise of the great city Ruth's voice, low and awe-struck, reached me, asking for a light. I had fallen into a profound thought—life, love, death and mortality, failure, success, the world's vanity—I do not know what I did not think of as I sat motionless in that dusky room

I presumed a lamp; I set it down on the table, where the light fell on those faces. I found that Ruth had sank lower and leaned the head on her shoulder grew heavier. All need to tell me the truth; he was dead.

She saw it; she knew it. She sank down lower yet, till his bright head was on the pillow by hers beside it. She mourned, lying thus cheek to cheek. I heard a few words:

'Brother take me, take me with you; I have none but you.'

Then she lay quite still, half on the couch half on the floor, face to face with the dead.

What did I do?

I stood and looked at them.

As I stood and looked at them, I were through one of those experiences that it is no use to try to record; that are written on the side of life, upon the scant of heart cover.

By and by I found that she was lying in a dead faint.

I disentangled them then, and laid her on the floor on as good a couch as I could make of my wrapper and of the cushions of an old chair.

I did not tell her the truth when I told her I was sent for a doctor That had been the profession I had not loved well enough to follow, after a large to time left me his made the pursuit of a profession needless I could treat her as well as another. I did all I could for her, but saw her recover. My entreaties persuaded on her, after a time, to leave the room for a few hours going with the woman of the rooms below; but before the night half passed, she was back again

'Do not be angry with me. I want to sit and look at him. I won't cry. Soon I shall lose him forever.'

She took her seat from by him; she begged me to go away some where to get some rest, I pretended to yield but found myself too anxious to go beyond the anteroom; she was not in a state to be left alone.

The dawn brought the horrible business—of putting away, out of sight, out of reach, the mortality that has been so dear that we have watched so close, and never could keep too near—to my mind.

I talked to her as little as I could and as gently Gently! if words could have fallen as on the air like eider down, or touched with gossamer light touches, they would all have seemed to me too rough to assail her thus.

'You know what is best you will do what is most right,' she answered me gently; 'but don't ask me to leave the house while he is in. Think of the long years that I have not seen him, think of the long years that—' Then she paused, burst into violent weeping—she had not cried before—'Oh, I feel as if my heart was breaking!' she said, pressing her hand over it.

I closed her to me; I comforted her as well as I could reminding her, as well as I knew how, how well things must be with her beloved brother. I spoke too, of the place where we would lay him to rest, of the country quiet among the roses, the violets, the cypresses.

She lay quiet in my arms, and by and by lifted up her face to listen. To see that sweet sad face resting against my breast, to look down upon it, and meet its tearful eyes, filled me with over-mastering emotions.

'If you can love me,' I said then, 'you need never feel alone or unsheltered, never more while I live. This is no fit place or time to tell you this, or he knew I loved you, and was glad in knowing it; but I do not ask or expect or desire any answer—not now.'

I hardly know that she then took in the sense of my words sorrow and exhaustion had drained her life. No tinge of color came to her cheek; she just listened.

'How good you are! how good you are! she said. 'What could I have done but for you?'

I arranged everything for the best as far as I knew; I escorted her from the room to go with me to the Protestant graveyard beyond the walls, to choose where he should lie. She said or spoke; she said after words it was all like a dread, from which she expected at any moment to awake.

The next day we buried him.

When all was done we lingered near the place. A spring-bread soft wood was blowing; the evergreens were swaying to and fro; the place over by the great mound mental pyramidal tomb of some forgotten great one, with the wonderful city of mercories of surviving at lying in sight.

That was a day to be remembered.

I promised her that the grave should be cared for better than any other in the place; that flowers would always blossom on it, and its headstone never be moss encrusted.

When we were away I left her to the care of that motherly, kind lady of the diligence, whom I had prepared to receive her.

I did not see her again for some days; she was too much exhausted, when the react on from long over-tension set in, to leave her bed.

I called every day, and always found some gentle-worded, graceful message ready from; but day after day I did not see her.

At last a bright day came when I did.

She was more altered, more dow nbent-ed than I had anticipated; meeting me agitated her greatly; her black dress, too, increased the delicacy of her look. Mrs Morton stood by her, smoothing her hair and petting her with loving deeds and words till she was calmer, then, good woman, she left us together.

I had no idea what lay before me. Our interview was a long one. More than once I left her side, and paced the room in despair, stood at one or the other of the windows that faced the city, and pondered how I could convince her of my love, that is to say, of the selfish and interested nature of it.

She met my definite offer of my hand and heart (as the novelists phrase it) with almost horror, but firm refusal.

Her gratitude was so full and so lowly her agitation so great I could not be angry with her, but I was greatly wounded, and turned my irritation against myself; I reasoned myself that I could find no words strong enough to convince her. She had met me in a pinnacle, and meant that I should remain there. I and wanted to be no higher than the level of her love.

It was just what might be expected of me, she told me. Just what she had always heard of me. She would always have me with the most grateful, reverent love, always remember me in her prayers, but be my wife—no.

I was long before I could get a reason why; but at last I tortured it from her. She believed that I was sacrificing myself that I loved her because she was friendless, alone; but she was not to be for me, she told me; she had not the accomplishments, the education, the talent, the beauty, the attaining that my wife should have. As for her name I need not be anxious, she assured me. Mrs. Morton had all that in Rome, she could procure her a suitable situation.

At last, when I had exhausted every argument, or though I had, and desperately, at all events, of present success, I grew hurt and angry; I turned from her to a window, and gazed out. A cold gloom was between me and it I was gazing on. I was filled with anger, disappointment and thwarted will.

I never realized how long I stood so, (but I believe it was a long time) when the rattle of small heels entered room, which sang down beside me, I started and looked round. She was looking up into my face so was fully, her own face strained with pain and earnestness.

'You look so pained, so displeased,' she said. 'I must say to you so thoroughly ungrateful and heartless. I cannot bear it.'

Before I knew what she was going to do she was kneeling beside me; before I could prevent her, her soft fingers were raising my hand to her softer lips.

I lifted her up; holding her by the shoulders, I asked her, I am afraid almost fiercely. 'Can you tell me that you do not love me?'

'No, I cannot. I do love you very dearly.' Her tears began to fall, and she, tottering towards me, hid them on my breast.

I hid her there, fast and firm, and never since has she disclaimed the right to be there.

SLEEPING IN CHURCH.—In St. Philip's Chapel, Winchester, England—a very old edifice, built long before the reign of Henry VIII.—there are ancient stall seats affixed to the wall of the aisle chapel. These seats are fixed upon hinges, that those who sit on them can only maintain their position by balancing themselves with care, and the ting their elbows on the seat arms; so that if the old monks who used them dropped asleep during divine service the seat came forward and pitched them headlong on the floor; nay, if they only dozed and nodded the last to the would, the hard oaken seat clapped against the oaken back, and made noise enough to attract the whole congregation. This may serve as a hint to those who are at a loss how to rent ire something to keep people awake in church.

Integrity, however, rough, is better than smooth dissimulation.

Two Men Elope with a Married Woman.

A strangely complicated case of fraud, cruelty, desertion, love, folly, and perfidy, is at present under investigation by the police. The names of the two extraordinary culprits are Richard Burke, the keeper of a grocery store, No. 364 Division street, and Jerry Courtenay, formerly a porter in the Matteson House, who resided next door to Burke. The former is a man about forty years of age, and has a wife and four children. Courtenay is five years younger, and has a wife and one child. Whether they were happy in their domestic relations, and loved, honored, and cherished their respective wives has not been ascertained officially, but from what follows it may be suspected that neither Mrs. Burke nor Mrs. Courtenay found favor in the eyes of their lords. The reason of this was not far to seek. In fact, it existed in the shape of a young and comely wife, the wife of Patrick McCann, an express driver, who resides in that neighborhood. Mrs. McCann appears to have been afflicted with the same moral disease, a criminal partiality for another than her husband. She is twenty-five years, and is the mother of a boy of five.

Kate Sullivan—such was her maiden name—succeeded in captivating the heart of the grocer. "Those side-ou tured eyes" waged a willing and successful war upon the affections of Richard Burke, who gradually became estranged from his wife. He neglected his family and his business to follow her. The family in consequence became destitute, and the business fell into decay. Customers deserted his store, while deserted as was fireside, and soon ruin stared him in the face.

While this unnatural flirtation was progressing between Burke and Mrs McCann the latter was secretly carrying on another with Terence Courtenay, who had likewise been smitten, and who, like his neighbour, the grocer, had become estranged from his own wife. The affair was so artfully managed by Kate that neither of her two lovers was aware of her partiality for the other.

Burke, it appears, had privately sold off all his effects for as much as they would bring, and then made an assignment of his property in favor of his creditors. Prior to the he had accumulated an immense sum of money—about $10,000 in all—by means of borrowing small sums, varying from $50 to $500, from his friends around the city. Matters having come to a crisis, as we said Burke judged it prudent to run away.

Meanwhile Terence Courtenay, who first learned himself that he was the sole object of her unhallowed passion, was engaged in a precisely similar undertaking. He, too, was selling off and borrowing, in order to prepare for a flight. He was not quite so fortunate as Burke in raising funds, but he succeeded in getting a respectable amount. Perhaps the a ttul Kate was waiting to see which of her two lovers would raise the most before making a final decision. On Thursday evening Mrs. McCann packed up her clothes put money in her purse, made good-bye to her home and little boy, and proceed d to the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Depot. On the same evening Burke, with his well lined purse of $10,000 also took his way to the same rendezvous. Lastly, Terence Courtenay came, and the whole three started off together. If the affair was preconcerted among them all very likely all were quite satisfied; if otherwise, it may reasonably be conjectured that a storm would break before the two arrived at their destination.

The atrocious feature of this remarkable elopement is that both of these heartless wretches left their wives and families in utter destitution. Not a rag of clothing or a stick of furniture has been left to either of their houses. They have robbed their friends of their money, robbed their own family of everything, and finally eloped another man of his wife. Such a concatenation of crimes and criminals is not often to be found, and as it really be rega ded as a curiosity.—Chicago Tribune

MARRIAGE NOTICES. — A Western paper gives the following notice:—"All notices of marriage, where no bride cake is sent, will be set up in small type, and poked in some outland shy corner of the paper.—Where a handsome piece of cake is sent, it will be put conspicuously in large letters, when gloves or only a bride favors are added a piece of illustrative poetry will be given in addition. When, however, the editor attends the ceremony in propria persona and leaves the bride it will have especial notice—very large type, and the most appropriate poetry that can be begged, borrowed, stolen, or coined from the brain editorial.—The American Joe Miller.

It is hard for a man to amass riches by looking in the shop when there is a leakage in the kitchen.

Paddy who is dead now? said some one to an Irishman, as a funeral was passing Faix, I don't know, unless it's the man in the coffin.

The Chinese in California are advancing in civilization; instead of pillering the hen roosts they now rob the banks.

Hall's Journal of Health expresses the opinion that buckwheat cake contain more nourishment for less money than any other popular article of food.

HUMOR.—Humor is a perennial source of gaiety and freshness of the mind. It clears away the cobweb; it quickens the hot, rock draughts of sentiment; it freshens up the satiated edge of appetite; it flows through the whole being like a babbling stream, with verdure always green upon its banks. Without humor, we are either hot sunnoons or arid plains.

There is a difference in time between this country and Europe, said a gentleman in New York to a newly arrived Irishman. For instance, your friends in Cork are now fast asleep by this time, while it is now here evening. "That's always the way," exclaimed Pat, "Ireland never got justice yet."

Sequel to War.

Considerable discussion has arisen out of Mr. Oliphant's strictures, on the London Times, on Gen. Sherman's conduct in reference to the burning of the city of Columbia, the capital of South Carolina.

It appears that Mr. Oliphant's statement, that the present condition of the inhabitants of Columbia is most miserable and pitiable in the extreme. They have not the means to buy the barest necessaries of life. The houses and cattle were killed and burned for many miles along the track of Sherman's march. The city now is nothing but a ruin. Turn where one will, there is absolutely nothing but shattered walls and pillars of churches, schools and private dwellings. Walking the streets, between graves and trees, nothing can be seen on either hand but the ruins of houses; not of frail wooden structure, but substantial building of stout red brick or granite. The State capital, a very handsome building, a new capitol, built entirely of white marble, three or four splendid churches, as many chapels, a spacious convent, a fine library, schools, and about 1,430 dwelling houses, were destroyed on that miserable day of the 17th of February last. More than 14,000 persons—the larger part being women and children—were driven from the city with scarcely a rag to cover them, and not a morsel full of food. Mr. Oliphant evidently thinks that Gen. Sherman and his soldiers committed a foul outrage against civilization and humanity in the sacking and burning of Columbia.

Causes of Sudden Death.

Very few of the sudden deaths which are said to arise from diseases of the heart, do really arise from that cause. To ascertain the real origin of sudden deaths, an experiment has been tried in Europe, and reported to a scientific congress held at Strasburg. Sixty-six cases of sudden death were made the subject of a thorough post mortem examination; in these cases only two were found who had died from disease of the heart. Nine out of sixty-six had died from apoplexy, while there were forty-six cases of congestion of the lungs—that is the lungs were so full of blood that they could not work, not having room enough for a sufficient quantity of air to enter to support life. The causes that produce congestion on the lungs are—cold feet, tight clothing, costive bowels, sitting still until chilled after being warmed with labour or a rapid walk, going on suddenly from a close heated room into the air, especially after speaking, and sudden depressing news operating on the blood. These causes of sudden death being known, an avoidance of them may serve to lengthen many valuable lives which would otherwise be lost under the verdict of heart complaint. That disease is supposed to be inevitable and incurable; hence many may not take the pains they would to avoid sudden death, if they knew it lay in their power.

INGENUITY OF SMUGGLERS.—Quite a novel dodge was successfully carried out on the St. Lawrence river by a party of smugglers a short ago, which has recently come to the knowledge of the Commissioner of Customs. The facts are these: One of the gang of smugglers called upon a collector on the frontier, and informed him that he had information that parties would endeavor to bring across the river a load of whiskey in a small boat. The place and time of landing was given to the Collector by the informer. At the appointed hour the officer, with a posse, was on hand, and, after watching for a short period, descried the boat nearing the shore. The smugglers, seeing that they were observed by parties on the land, allowed their boat to drift down stream with the intention of landing at another point. The collector with his force followed, and, after some little manœuvring, captured the party together with the whiskey. While this one barrel was being risked by the smugglers, the main portion of the gang successfully landed, at the spot first visited by the collector, three hundred barrels of liquor, and, having teams near at hand, got away with it, thus avoiding the payment of the duty.—Buffalo Courier.

ACCIDENT.—The Free Press relates the particulars of a horrible accident, by which a woman named Mrs. McBride, aged about forty-five years, met her death on the Sarnia branch of the Grand Trunk Railway. She left the Widder station about 6 p. m. and went down the track on her way home, which is between Widder and Forest. It is supposed she lay down on the track, under the influence of liquor and fell asleep, when the cars of a freight train passed over her legs part of the train also severely bruised her breasts. The unfortunate creature must have crawled to a fence corner, where she was found quite dead the next morning.

A LUCKY NAME.—In the year 1664, on the 5th of December, a boat crossing the Menai Straits, with 81 passengers was upset and only one of the company named Hugh Williams, was saved. On the same day, in the year 1785, was upset another boat containing about 60 passengers, of every person perished with the exception of one whose name also was Hugh Williams; and on the 5th of August, 1820, a third boat met the same disaster, but the passengers of this were no more than 25; and singular to relate, the whole perished with the exception of one, whose name was Hugh Williams.

A curious convulsion of nature occurred lately at Bon Desir, county of Tadousac, C. E., by which an immense marl hill, a dwelling house, barn, and a number of other buildings were removed to a distance of about two acres below their original sites, and the beach close by strewn with immense boulders and raised to a height of from twenty to 30 feet above its ordinary level, while the ground all around, over an area of 12 or 13 acres, was cut up with deep crevices. The slide covered an extent of over 12 acres in width by four or five in depth.—Three Rivers Inquirer.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 25, 1866.

Important to Township Clerks, Reeves and Deputy Reeves.

At the present meeting of the County Council, just before the members proceeded to elect the Warden, some discussion arose on the validity or legality of some of the certificates from the Township Clerks relating to the election of Reeves, which certificates have to be duly filed in the Clerk's office before such Reeves can take their seats or vote. The Section of the Act that relates to this matter, reads as follows: —

"That no Reeve shall take his seat in the County Council until he has filed with the Clerk of the County Council a certificate under the hand and seal of the Township or Town Clerk, that such Reeve was duly elected, and made and subscribed the declarations of office and qualifications as such Reeve."

The subject of discussion was, could the Reeve of Monaghan, or of any other Municipality, take his seat in the County Council while the last word Reeve was found omitted in the certificate of such Reeve. Mr. Pearce, of Belmont, and Mr. Grover, of Asphodel, held that such Reeve could not take his seat, while others thought that the word was so evidently implied, that the certificate was legal and that the individual could take his seat. The County Attorney, C. A. Weller, Esq., gave it as his opinion that after the certificates have been filed with the Clerk and not objected to by him, that he could not afterwards do so, he not being the judge of such matters, and that if afterwards there were doubts of the legality of the certificates the matter could be tested at a proper tribunal. This settled the matter for the present, and accordingly the Council proceeded to elect their Warden and did so.—But as there is a case to the point in the Law Journal for January, 1866, we have concluded that it would be for the interest of the different Municipalities to give it in this issue.

The Queen ex rel McManus versus Ferguson.

Election of Warden—Proper description of Warden—Sufficiency of certificates of Reeves and Deputy Reeves—Duty of Clerks—Nature and effect of certificates—New election—Costs.

Held 1. That the proper designation of a Warden in a quo warranto summons, is "Warden of the Corporation of the County of ——."

Held 2. That "Warden of the County ——" is not improper, as there is no particular name or designation in the Municipal Institutions Act.

Held 3. That "Warden of the County Council of the County of Simcoe" might, if deemed necessary, be amended by striking out the words "of the County Council after the word "warden," and before the words "of the County of Simcoe" in the writs to be issued in pursuance of the judgment in a quo warranto matter.

Held 4. That after appearance by defendant in a quo warranto matter, the 18th Rule of court applicable to such proceedings is against holding any proceeding irregular or void, which does not interfere with the just trial of the matter on the merits.

Held 5. That a Reeve of a Township who was duly elected and had made and subscribed the declarations of office and qualification, had not a right under sec 67 of the Municipal Institution Act to take his seat in the County Council, when the certificate of the Township Clerk did not state that he "had made and subscribed the declarations of office and qualification, but only he had "taken or made the declaration of office."

Held 6. That where Reeves and Deputy Reeves who had filed defective certificates were notwithstanding allowed by the Clerk to take their seats in the County Council, their votes therein could not be challenged for such defective certificates, see 67 of the Municipal Institutions Act being only directory and not imperative.

Held 7. That the certificate is only evidence that what is contained in it was done—if it have not been done, or the Reeve or Deputy Reeve have not been duly elected, the mere certificate would not give the party holding it, a right to sit and vote in the Council.

Held 8. That where a vote is improperly rejected in a County Council on the election of Warden, and it does not appear that the Reeve or deputy Reeve whose vote was rejected tendered it for the complaining candidate, though his vote if recorded might and probably would have influenced the result of the election, the proper course is to order a new election instead of seating the complaining candidate.

Held 9. That where the Clerk improperly refuses to allow a Reeve to take his seat, but allowed several Reeves and Deputy Reeves whose certificates were equally if not more defective to take their seats and vote, the proper course was to order a new election.

Held 10. That no costs should be given against the sitting member, although he occupied office and was sworn in and his seat was afterward vacated on the ground of the improper decision of the County Clerk, unless shown that he in some manner directly interfered with the decision of the Clerk or otherwise misconducted himself.

[Chambers, April 10th, 1865.]

This was a proceeding in the nature of a quo warranto to unseat Thomas R. Ferguson, Warden of the corporation of the county of Simcoe for the year 1865, based on the statement and relation of George McManus, of the township of Mono, in the county of Simcoe and province of Canada, Esquire, Reeve of the said Township of Mono, who complained that Thomas R. Ferguson had not been duly elected, and had unjustly usurped the office of Warden of the county council of the county of Simcoe, and province of Canada, under pretence of an election held on Tuesday, the 24th day of January, A. D., 1865, at the town of Barrie, in the said county of Simcoe, and had accepted and acted in the said office of Warden; and that George McManus, the relator, was duly elected thereto, and ought to have been returned at such election and declaring that the said relator had an interest in the said election as a candidate for the said office of Warden, and also as a municipal voter at the said election. The relator stated and showed the following causes why the election of the said Thomas R. Ferguson to the said office should be declared invalid and void, and the said George McManus be declared duly elected thereto:

First. The relator set forth that the election was not conducted according to law, in this that Duncan Matthewson, Reeve of Sunnidale, was not allowed by the clerk to vote at the election of Warden; the clerk refusing said Mathewson because of some certain informalities in his certificate of election. This produced a tie for the Warden, when Ferguson voted for himself.

Second. The relator set forth that the election was not conducted according to law, inasmuch as several other Reeves and Deputy Reeves—neither of whom had filed the necessary certificates of their being duly elected, and having made and subscribed the declarations of office, and of qualifications as required by law as such Reeve or Deputy Reeve—were allowed to take their seat in the Council, and to vote at said election of Warden.

Third. The relator also set forth that since Mr. Ferguson had not filed the proper certificates worded exactly according to the statute, he could not take his seat in the council, and consequently could not be elected Warden.

Fourth. Also that the said Ferguson was not duly elected, inasmuch as several Reeves and Deputy Reeves had voted for him while they had not filed the proper certificates, as aforesaid.

Fifth. That before the said election and after the said Council was called to order by the Clerk, the certificate of John Hogg was openly objected to, and the attention of the clerk was called thereto, but he overruled the objection and allowed the said Hogg to take his seat.

Sixth. That just before the election it was suggested to the clerk that some of the other certificates besides Mathewson's and Hogg's might be defective; but he paid no attention thereto, although charged at the time with partiality.

Seventh. And that said relator was duly elected to the office of Warden aforesaid, and ought to have been returned thereto, as having the largest number of legal votes for the said office; whereas, the said Mr. Ferguson had been declared by the clerk duly elected.

The certificates to which objection was made were in the following forms:—

"To T. R. Banting, Esq., county clerk.

"Dear Sir,—I hereby certify that Duncan Mathewson, Esq., was duly elected as councillor for this Township, and that he has made and subscribed the declaration of office and qualification of office as such, and that he has been also "appointed Reeve" of said Township, and has taken or made the declaration of office of Reeve for the said Township of Sunnidale.

"I have the honor to be, yours, &c.,

ALEX. HISLOP, { Corporate T. C. } Seal.

The objection raised to this certificate was that it did not state that Mathewson was elected Reeve.

"This certifies that at the first meeting of the municipal council of the corporation of the Town of Barrie, held on the 18th of January, inst., William D Ardagh, Esq., was unanimously elected Reeve of said corporation for the current year, A. D. 1865.

(Signed) GEORGE LANE, { Corporate T. C. } Seal.

Council Room, Barrie, Jan. 20th, 1865."

The objection to this certificate was that it did not state that Mr. Ardagh was duly elected, or that he had taken the declaration of office and qualification, as required by C. S. U. C, ch. 54, sec. 67.

"I do hereby certify that on the sixteenth day of January, 1865, at the first meeting of the Municipal Council of the corporation of the township of Innisfil, held in the village of Victoria, in the said Township, Thomas R. Ferguson, Esq., was unanimously elected Reeve of the said township for the year 1865, and that he has made and subscribed the declaration of office and qualification.

(Signed) BENJAMIN ROSS. [Seal] Township Clerk.

Innisfil, Jan. 17, 1865.

The objection to this certificate was that it did not state that Mr. Ferguson was duly elected, nor that the declaration of office and qualification were made and subscribed as "such Reeve."

"I do hereby certify that on the sixteenth day of January, 1865, at the first meeting of the Municipal Council of the corporation of the township of Innisfil, held in the Village of Victoria, in the said Town hip, William C. Little, Esq., was unanimously elected and eleven Deputy Reeve of the said Township for the current year 1865, and that he has made and subscribed the declaration of office and qualification.

(Signed) BENJAMIN ROSS, [Seal] Township Clerk.

The objections to this certificate were the same as to that of the Reeve of Innisfil.

"I, Joseph Hill Lawrence, clerk of the Municipal Council of the Town of Collingwood, do hereby certify that John Hogg, Esq of the Town of Collingwood, has been duly elected Reeve of corporation of said Town of Collingwood, and that he has made the declaration of qualification of office prescribed by law as such.

Witness my hand and seal, this twentieth day of January, 1865.

J. H. LAWRENCE, [Seal] Clerk.

The objections to this certificate were that it did not state for what year Mr. Hogg had been elected.

"This is to certify that James Rowatt, Esq., has been duly elected Reeve of the Township of Flos for the year 1865, and that he has made and subscribed the declarations required by law. Given under my hand at Flos, this 16th day of January, 1865.

(Signed) W. HARVEY, { Corporate Township Clerk of Flos." } Seal.

The objections to this certificate were that it did not state Mr. Rowatt had made and subscribed the declarations of office and qualification; that "the declarations required by law" may have been the proper ones, but this depends upon the clerk's reading of the law, and wants explanation. They may not have been as "such Reeve," but merely as a Councillor.

[Corporate Seal.]

"I, Edward Moon, Clerk of the Municipality of the Township of Medonte, hereby certify that John Craig, Esq., has been elected Reeve of the Municipality for the year 1865, and that he has made and signed the declarations of qualification and office.

(Signed) EDWARD MOON,
Medonte, Jan. 16, 1865. Town. Clerk."

The objections to this certificate were that it did not state that Mr. Craig was duly elected, and that he made and subscribed the declarations of office and qualification as "such Reeve," and that it had no seal.

Affidavits of several clerks were filed to show that the above counts were true. The minutes of the County Council, as far as relates to the first days proceedings, were also filed, being as follows:—"The certificates of the Reeves of Bradford and Sunnidale being presented were considered informal by the clerk. The members present suggested that legal advice be taken; after which the clerk felt justified in not allowing said gentlemen to take their seats in the Council, and they were requested to retire."

The clerk then called the council to order, and on motion it was found that there was a tie between Mr. Ferguson and Mr. McMannus—thirteen voting for each. The two unseated Reeves would have voted for Mr. McMannus.

D. McCarthy, jun., shewed cause. He objected, that there is no such office known to the law as "Warden of the County Council of Simcoe." Subject to this objection, he argued that Mathewson's vote was not improperly rejected; the Clerk of the County Council is the proper and only judge of such a matter and has decided against it; it was not shown that Mathewson, had his vote been received, would have voted for relator; and in the absence of fraud, the acts of the Clerk and of the Council were binding at law. The Queen ex rel Hyde v. Burnhart, 7 U. C. L. J., 126. If an appeal lay from the decision of the Clerk, the several certificates objected to were sufficient as against the objections taken. Rex v. Sayer, 10 B. & C. 486; In re Hawkins v. Ballard, 3 U. C. C. P. 241; Reg. ex rel Hedlewell v. Stevenson, 1 U. C. Chans. R 270; Reg. ex rel McGregor v. Kerr, 7 U. C. L. J. 67, 69. But if not so, similar objections existing in the certificates of Robert Murphy, the Reeve of Pickering, John E. Steele, the Reeve of Orillia, Michael Scott, the Deputy Reeve of Orillia, Thomas Saunders, the Deputy Reeve of Tecumseth, John McManus, the Reeve of Tecumseth, Roderick Stewart, the Reeve of Morrison and Muskoka, James Aberdeen, the Reeve of the Township of Malahide, and have elected him as Warden, and his certificate is not as defective as the certificates of several of those who voted for the defendant, I ought to declare the relator duly elected, as Mr. Matheson was unfairly excluded from his seat; and he stated by his affidavit that he would have voted for the relator if he had been allowed to vote.

I do not see my way clear in acting on this suggestion—the Reeve of Sunnidale did not, in fact, tender his vote for any one. If he had offered to vote for relator, and his vote had been rejected, then in the event of my deciding that he was entitled to vote, I could have put his vote down for the relator; but as it now appears, I can only say that he intended to vote for relator; but did not at the time disclose his intention. I do not feel at liberty to say that his vote can properly be considered as cast for the relator, even if I am satisfied that he ought to have been allowed to vote. Under the circumstances, if I hold that he is entitled to vote, then this result follows:—That he was a person properly qualified to vote; that he has been wrongfully deprived of his right to vote; and that his vote might have influenced the result; and from what is before me, it is probable, would have influenced the result. In this view, I should feel bound to set aside the election, and order a new election to remedy the injustice that has been done.

On the 25th January last, the Reeves and Deputy Reeves forming the county council for the county of Simcoe, met a Barrie. R. F. Banting, Esq., the county clerk, examined the certificates of the different Reeves and Deputy Reeves, and pronounced them regular, until he came to the Reeve of Sunnidale Duncan Mathewson, Esq., and the Reeve of Bradford, Anson Warburton, Esq., when he objected to their certificates of election and qualification, and finally directed them to leave the council, which they did without voting. The relation states that these persons, both before and since the election, stated that they had intended to vote for him as Warden.

The certificate of the town clerk of Sunnidale was as follows:—

I hereby certify that Duncan Mathewson, Esq., was duly elected as councillor for this Township and that he has made and subscribed the declarations of office and qualifications of office as such, and that he has also been appointed Reeve of said Township, and has taken or made the declaration of office of Reeve for the said Township of Sunnidale.

The certificate of the clerk of Collingwood certified that the Reeve had made the declaration of qualifications and of office pre-cribed by law as such but omitted the word, subscribed.

These two certificates were held by the court as erroneous because of the two omissions.

The certificate of the clerk of Barrie read. "This certifies that at the first meeting of the municipal council of the corporation of the town of Barrie, held on the 18th inst. Wm. D. Ardagh was unanimously elected Reeve of said corporation for the current year 1865." This one was more defective than the other, hence from the whole it was held that:

If this election is allowed to stand, it this result will follow, that at any time a county clerk may, according to his own caprice or preferences of any kind, decide in favour of any "allow certain persons with their certificates to take their seats and vote in the council, while as to others whose certificates are quite as good, and in one cases even less defective, he may reject them and refuse to allow them to vote with any reasonable ground being assigned for such inconsistante decision. I do not think it is desirable that any judicial decision could be arrived at that would furnish any excuse for such a course of conduct, and I shall therefore set aside the election of the defendants to the office of ward in

* * * * * * * * * *

A writ will go to remove the defendant from the office of warden, and to hold a new election.

The relator may, if he deem it necessary, amend the style of the office, by omitting the words "of the county council," after the word "Warden," and before the words "of the county of Simcoe," in the writs he may issue in pursuance of this judgment.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

EVANS INGRAM, Esq., WARDEN.

The Reeves and Deputy Reeves of the different Municipalities assembled on Tuesday, according to law; and after arrangements were completed, and the prospects of the different reports to the high office of Warden known, at about three o'clock p. m. the Clerk having taken his seat, said that all the Reeves and Deputy Reeves of the municipalities but one were present and had filed their certificates with him; but that he would not take upon himself to decide whether they were all perfectly according to law. Upon this there arose a discussion concerning the certificates, when it was agreed that the Clerk should read each one of them. After the reading of the first one relating to the Reeve of Monaghan, it was held by Mr. Pearce, Reeve of Belmont, that inasmuch as there was one word omitted from the certificate, it could not be considered legal. Mr. Gilmour and others contended that the word was strongly and plainly implied, and therefore the certificate was good. The Clerk found after examination that the same word was omitted from one of two others. Under the circumstances, the Clerk thought it advisable to take legal advice. He therefore went to the County Attorney, who said that after the certificates were filed the Clerk must be the sole judge, until tested before a proper tribunal.

It was then proposed by Mr. Pearce, and seconded by Mr. W. A. Scott, that Evans Ingram, Esq., be Warden, which was carried unanimously.

The choice could not have been better made. Mr. Ingram is an old and efficient Councillor, understands the business connected with the Council, and will prove himself equal to any of his predecessors. Besides, of the Council Mr. Pearce has already efficiently filled the high office for two terms. Mr. Dean also filled the office for a like period; and it shows something like justice to bestow the honors on another, at least for a season; and no other in the Council better deserves this honor than does Mr. Ingram.

Accident at Port Hope.

On Friday night last, as the benevolent concert, given by Mr. Koerbern, was at its height, one of the galleries, containing about 175 people—men, women and children—came down with a crash. Only one was badly hurt and two or three slightly. The confusion was great, and it is a miracle that there were no lives lost.

One of the largest dealers in supplies for Ottawa lumbermen, mentions that the average annual amount of Chicago pork sent up the Ottawa was about 15,000 barrels, worth about $350,000. The supply will have to be obtained from Canadian farmers when the Reciprocity Treaty lapses.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, Jan. 22nd, 1866.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—His Worship the Mayor in the Chair, Messrs. Burnham, Chamberlen, Cox, Hamilton, Miller, Ormond, Ewing, Doherty, Stevenson, Wrighton, Wilson and Toole.

The minutes of last meeting were read over and confirmed.

Communications were read from Colonel Haultain, acknowledging the receipt of the notice of his being appointed a Grammar School Trustee by the Council, and conveying his acknowledgements for the honor thus conferred upon him. From R. Dennistoun, Esq., upon the subject of the application of Mr. Lundy as to his duty in signing a release pre-sented to him by the Ex Mayor of Port Hope. Both communications were received. Also a petion from James Elgar, informing the Council that he was an applicant for the office of Chief Constable.

The petition of Angus Kennedy, for a ship license at a reduced rate, which had been referred to the present Council, was read over and after some discussion ordered to be laid on the table.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Cox, the following members were appointed a Committee on Finance and Assessment, viz:—Messrs. Ormond, Toole, Ewing and Millar.

On motion of Mr. Toole, Messrs. Stevenson, Wilson, Hamilton and Cox, were appointed a Committee on Streets and Bridges.

On motion of Mr. Millar, Messrs. Ewing, Hamilton, Toole and Cox, were appointed a Committee on License.

Committee on Fire—Messrs. Hamilton, Doherty, Wrighton and Cox.

Committee on Printing and Petitions—Messrs. Cox, Burnham, Wilson and Wrighton.

Health Committee—Messrs. Wrighton, Cox, Hamilton and Ewing.

In the matter of a petition from N. Y. Ellis for license for a saloon. The Clerk being asked said that all the certificates for license that could be given had been already granted.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, twenty dollars was granted to D. Carlisle to make up for losses sustained by him as Collector.

An account for burying paupers, to the amount of $7.12½ was ordered to be paid.

Some other accounts were referred to Committee on Finance.

The Council adjourned till next Monday night at 7 30 p.m.

Curliana Champion Medal.

We have been shown by Capt. Sutherland, President of the Peterborough Curling Club, a very beautiful silver medal, presented to the Peterborough Curling Club by our very worthy Member, Col Haultain. The medal has three clasps, and is beautifully engraved with all the emblems of the 'roaring game,' such as besoms, curling stones, &c., the whole being surmounted with the Scottish thistle. We learn that the conditions on which the medal is presented to the Clubs of this County are, viz: That every year it must be played for in a set match between the Clubs, and the winners to retain it for that season: and if won by the same Club for three successive seasons, then to become their property exclusively. We anticipate that our keen curlers will now have something to stimulate them, as to who will keep possession of this splendid medal, which we know our Clubs will duly appreciate.

The Bible Society meeting will be to-morrow evening, in the Presbyterian Church

Another Accident on the Grand Trunk

Three cars precipitated over an embankment—Several passengers severely injured.

Montreal, Jan. 20, 1866.

About four o'clock yesterday morning the night express from Richmond to Montreal when near the draw bridge about three miles from New Durham, station ran off the track, precipitating three cars over the embankment, to the height and leaving two others on the brink of the precipice. The rear wheels of the engine and tender were entirely off the track; and one sleeping car rested resting upon the tre-tle work of the bridge, immediately overhanging the edge of the same, with wheels completely misplaced and in an opposite direction from the body of the car. The passenger and sleeping cars that were thrown over the embankment are now lying on their sides in the hollow entirely disengaged from the wheels and gear. One passenger car was partly, and the sleeping car nearly, full of passengers at the time of the accident. Several of the passengers were severely injured, others more slightly, while the lives of all were jeopardized. As soon as day dawned many of the passengers examined the track, and found that for a distance of three miles it was in a very imperfect condition. They also found that where the cars ran off the track, a piece of rail eight feet long had become completely displaced from the want of sufficient fastening; there being no "chains" nor any other sufficient mode of retaining it in its place. For the first eighty rods the passengers found the rails in very unsafe condition, some of the flanges being entirely gone, thus affording every facility for the cars running off the track. Some of the rail ends were not fastened in any way, the bolts being entirely gone and lying loose along the road. The passengers also learned from the employees in conversation with each other, and also from a note found by a passenger, that orders had been given to have men stationed at each end of the place of accident to warn approaching trains from either direction, which shows that there was no ignorance as to the condition of the road. This is the third accident upon the road within twenty-four hours. The passengers announce their determination to have the whole facts laid before the public, and express their unqualified condemnation of what they consider the unwarrantable conduct of the Grand Trunk Railway authorities in suffering them to remain at New Durham till 7 p. m. without so much as deigning to inform them as to what time, if at all, they might expect to be forwarded on their journey, notwithstanding that there had been an engine and cars at their disposal for six hours, during which time had it not been an for the hospitality of Mr Leighton and his family, who furnished them with food and shelter, they might have remained without either.—Leader.

THE BROCK ELECTION.—The writ for an election in the Brock Division, the representation of which has become vacant by the acceptance of office by the Hon. Mr. Ferguson Blair, has been received by Sheriff Grange, of Guelph. That functionary has issued his proclamation appointed the nomination to take place in the town hall in Guelph on Thursday, the 25th inst; and the polling should there be a contest, on the 1st and 2nd of February. Mr. Ferguson Blair will no doubt be returned by acclamation.

CHURCH ROBBED.—On Friday night the 12th inst, the John Street Presbyterian Church in Belleville, was broken into, and four silver goblets, being a portion of the Communion service, taken away. No clue to the thieves has as yet been obtained.

Great Robbery at Windsor of $4,000

A lady and gentleman named Mr. and Mrs. Watermire, were boarding at Bernard Hotel, kept by S. S. Smith, for some months. About six weeks ago their trunk was broken open and four $1000 United States Bonds were stolen from it. Suspicion at once rested upon the proprietor of the house, in consequence of his being the only person who knew that Mr. Watermire had so much money in his possession, but no steps were taken to recover the property at the time, it being judged best to let the matter rest, and in the mean time watch the suspected parties. This was done, and on Thursday, Smith left Windsor to come to Hamilton. Mrs. Smith followed him, and left her husband at Windsor to allay suspicion. On Smith's arrival at Hamilton he immediately proceeded to Toronto, and Mrs. Watermire put herself into communication with the Hamilton police. They telegraphed to Captain Prince, Chief of the Toronto police, requesting him to have the movements of Smith watched. This was done, and on his offering a $1000 bill for one he was arrested on a warrant which had been obtained in Hamilton. Two detectives of our force were immediately despatched to bring back the prisoner, but they did not return last night. We hope the losers of the money may be recompensed for the cautious manner in which they have detected the perpetrator of the theft and the energetic measures taken at the right moment for his apprehension by a recovery of the whole of their property. Mr. Watermire was negotiating at the time of the robbery to buy Smith's business. We hear also that several other boarders have lately been robbed at Bernard House of their money and other valuables.

A COOL REQUEST FROM A ROBBER.—On the 18th inst. Mr. Bilton, from whose store the sum of $800 was stolen about a week ago, has received a polite note from his friend Higgins, the escaped thief, who has taken his residence at Port Huron. The note respectfully request Mr. Bilton to see that the $60 in greenbacks belonging to him, and also the two silver watches, are forwarded to his address at once. His business, he says, called him away rather suddenly from London, else he would have seen to the matter himself; and but that he thinks the climate of Canada rather unhealthy at present, he would have taken great pleasure in coming over himself to settle these little affairs in a business-like manner. He is willing to allow one dollar for breaking the shop window, but requests that the balance in his favour may be sent at once as he is rather short of cash. He also sends his compliments to the police force and says he intends keeping the handcuffs to with which he escape as a memento of his visit.

COLD BLOODED MURDER NEAR KINGSTON.—On the night of the 16th inst., about twelve o'clock, a soldier on the lookout party stationed at Wolfe Island, shot a farmer by the name of James Sudds, killing him instantly. It appears that some contention took place between the parties while engaged in playing cards. Sudds accused the soldier of cheating, and called him a Fenian. The guard replied he would show him soon what a Fenian could do. As Sudds was returning home on the ice the sentry shot him in the back, the ball passing through the heart. The soldier is under arrest. Great indignation is manifested by the citizens, and the prisoner had to be closely guarded to prevent his being injured by the mob.

It is stated that at the Governor General will sail for Canada in the first week of February, in connection with this a telegram from Ottawa says that the work on Rideau Hall, the Governor's residence, was suspended at the commencement of the winter, as far as the masonry is concerned. The interior winter work is now being pr ceeded with.—The contract prescribes completion next fall. Quarters for Lord Monk, during next season will have to be provided by the use of some of the private buildings in Ottawa.

ITALY.—The Pope received the congratulations of the French army on the 1st instant. He returned thanks, and said it would provably be the last time he could bestow his blessing on them, he feared the enemies of the Church would go to Rome after the departure of the French troops.

John A Cooke, late Cashier of the Catskill New York National Bank is reported defaulter to the amount of $90,000.

The schooner Hattie Martin, of Philadelphia, was wrecked at Hatteras Inlet on the 7th instant. Captain Smith, of Camden, N. J., and a colored cook, where frozen to death. Two others were rescued badly frozen, after remaining on the wreck five days, and for the last twenty four hours they fed on the body of the negro cook.

The Herald's Toronto special says: The Canadian Trade Review professes to know that the United States Government intends to renew the Reciprocity Treaty, if Canada will raise the Provincial Excise Duty to the American standard, admit certain manufactures free, and enlarge the canals. The United States will bear part of the expense, the whole matter to be arranged by the respective Legislatures without a treaty.

The Herald's Washington special says French Minister has made a demand on the State Department for information relative to the recent capture of Bagdah, Mexico, by Yankee filibusters. Up to Saturday night no official information relative to it had been received at the Department. Instructions were transmitted to Gen. Sheridan immediately on receipt of the intelligence of the affair, requiring him to make thorough investigation, and punish the offenders.

The Herald's Georgetown (Nicaragua) correspondent states that on the trip of the steamer Moses Taylor, from San Francisco to San Juan, with California passengers for this city, an Irishman came on deck with a revolver, and declared he would shoot any man who was not a Fenian. Two English men at once denied having any Fenian proclivities, and he shot them both. He was wounded himself in return and jumped overboard, but was rescued by the crew.

Letter from the Archbishop of Halifax.

The Irish in the United States and in British America—Fenianism dedounced.

Halifax, 18th Dec, 1865.

SIR,—Allow me, on the part of Her Majesty's loyal Roman Catholic subjects in these Lower Provinces, emphatically to thank Your Excellency for your recent speech, and the fearless and out-spoken manner in which you have so effectively expressed the here truth on our behalf.

From all the sources of information at my command, I am convinced, if the crisis come, that the whole Roman Catholic population in this country will yield to no other class in unwavering loyalty and the unflinching performance of duty in the day of trial. Apart from the allegiance which as churchmen, we owe to the constituted authorities, we have here everything to lose and nothing whatever to gain by a change, be it ever so luring in the distance. What can any Government give that we have not got? We have prosperity, law, order, peace unmeasured liberty, the country secured against the foreign foe, trade and commerce protected all over the world at an expense one-sixth less pe. head than in the neighboring republic, and a mere fraction as compared with the expenditure of any other country we know of. To exchange the condition with any other, would be suicidal madness, and the thinking, leading portion of our people, the portion that have anything to lose, are aware of the fact. They, like myself, have visited the United States from time to time, and have made data to guide them to the same conclusion. Catholics, no doubt, enjoy many advantages in that country (and it is a blessing for millions they have such a country as a refuge), but after the experience of twenty-four years in British America, it is my deep conviction that Catholics, taking into account their numbers and opportunities, are wealthier and happier—better Christians—and socially and politically more elevated here than there.

In New York, Maryland and Louisiana, there are many Catholics in the higher walks of life, but few are Irish or of Irish descent, and they owe their position to anything rather than to the political institutions of the country. For over eighty years, I have yet to learn that one President, Vice-President or any member of the General Government at Washington, was a Catholic, and not more than two or three of that faith (as far as I could ascertain) have reached the Senatorial dignity, since the days of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton.

Catholics have now no share in the Executive no seat in the Senate, and but very few members in the House of Representatives. Wherever a few Catholics appear in their State Legislatures, it is admitted that our people, according to numbers are but feebly and inadequately represented. These numbers are variously estimated at from three to five millions—and despite the cosmopolitan city of New York with its foreign population and foreign vote—deduct the Catholic cities of Baltimore, St Louis and New Orleans, where the mass of the people have belonged to that faith, from the beginning, and what progress have they made, what position do they now occupy as contrasted with ours in British America?

In Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Prince Edwards Island, there has been no period since the days of emancipation, at which Catholics have not possessed that influence in the community to which their number and position fairly entitled them. The Legislature, the Executive Council, and the bench are as accessible to the Catholic as the Protestant, whilst men of vast wealth and the highest business and social standing in every city of Montreal to St. John's, Newfoundland, are to be found among our ranks. In all these particulars, according to our numbers, we stand as a hundred to one when compared with our fellow religionists in the neighboring republic. The mechanic, the labourer, and the peasant may receive higher wages there than here (of which however, I have grave doubts), but taxes, costs and charges, are as three to one. Beside the tax on the raw material they pay five per cent on the cloth in their coats, and the leather in their boots. They pay five per cent more for them as they pass from the hands of the tailor or boomaker, and one per cent on the sale of each article. Tea, coffee, cotton and silk, tobacco, liquors, match boxes, writing paper, and manufactured articles on every description, follow the same tegory, so that they are now beyond all comparison, the most heavily taxed people in the world. Another war (and who can say how soon it may come) will make taxation still more oppressive. It is true, indeed, that at present wages, the poor with prudence and economy, can meet those accumulated charges, and they will be fortunate if they continue in the same happy position), but it cannot be pretended for a moment that they have the same substantial comforts and as much to spend at the end of the year as the same classes in every part of British America. Th ve seen thousands emigrate from here and not one ever return with a fortune made, or even an humble competency secured for their declining years. I do not know half a dozen among seventy thousand of an Irish Catholic population in the city of Boston, whose business position is half as good or respectable as that of hundreds in Montreal or Quebec, or even in this small city.

Our people, therefore, have nothing to expect from change of any kind but increased taxation, diminished income a decided fall in the social scale, the seething contempt of their new rulers, as was ever the case in New England, and with the e, perhaps, the horrors of a devastating war. The great Government of the United States has nothing more tempting to offer; and what have we to expect from the so-called Fenians, that pitiable band of knaves and fools, who, unable to degrade themselves, are doing all in their power to add another Ballingarry to the history of Ireland, and to make the condition of our poor country more deplorable even than before

On the occasion of my recent visit to the United States, many of these poor deluded people talked as flippantly and confidently of taking all British America in the course of this winter, and holding it as if they already had the de da in their pockets. If they come on the strength of their own resources, it will indeed be a laughable affair; and from what is now occurring in New York, we may easily foresee the glorious denouement. Two millions of Protestants, and eighteen hundred thousand Catholics, who have mothers, wives and daughters—happy homes and free altars, and a Government of their own choice—will meet them as they would the freebooter and assassin, with knife in hand on the trail of victim. From their success we have nothing to expect but bloodshed, rapine, and anarchy, and the overthrow of God's religion—for all, this is inscribed on their banners. Take running and rapscrion, the religion in Ireland, and the priests of the land are to be exterminated under the fostering aegis of the new Republic. All British America is to be occupied and declared a neutral territory, wherein Fenian armies and navies are to be recruited and fitted up. The power of England is to be crushed. Protestants, Catholic Priests and the upper classes of Catholic in Ireland are to be exterminated, and a new republic is to be inaugurated with an ex-lunatic, Mr. O'Mahoney at its head! With such a programme, the Catholics of this country will assuredly accede to the Fenians, if they come the warm reception they so richly deserve. And, with prayer to the Prince of Peace, at this holy Christmas Season, and the earnest hope that they and we may be spared the trouble, I thank you again and again for your speech, and have the honor to remain

With sincerest respect and gratitude,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed) † THOMAS L. CONNOLLY,
Archbishop of Halifax.

To His Excellency,
The Lieutenant Governor of New Brunswick.

The Fenians in Ireland

During the Christmas holidays the military and Police in Ireland were extremely vigilant and watchful, apparently in anticipation of an outbreak in some southern part of the island. In Dublin a renewed but fruitless search was made for Stephens, and the guards all over the city were strengthened and the police armed. The Liverpool Post of the 29th ult. has the following —

"Two regiments have been suddenly sent off to Ireland, one from Manchester, and the other from Chester. The Manchester regiment, 1,200 strong, was aroused at 3 o'clock in the morning, and by 8 o'clock they were on their way to Liverpool, whence they were to embark at 6 o'clock. Seven officers, absent upon leave, were ordered by telegraph to report themselves at the Chirenes dock by 5 o'clock yesterday evening. Our information is that the Chester regiment was ordered with equal haste to Dublin, by way of Holyhead.

"Moreover, as well, these will create a deal of uneasiness, and they must indicate either a serious danger or remarkable credulity on the part of the authorities. No doubt the troops who have been sent are Englishmen. For the last few days there have been statements made as to certain very extensive designs being entertained by the Dublin Fenians, and these have been supported by the measures taken by the authorities. Agitation has prevailed at Limerick, fostered by the hasty transfer of troops from place to place."

Mr. McGEE ON THE FENIANS.

The antecedents of some of our Fenian Centres and Head Centres are hit off by the Canadian Minister of Agriculture, Hon. T. D'Arcy McGee, in a letter to one of his correspondents in New York, from which the N. Y. Times makes the subjoined extracts:

"As to the chief combatants. I know both O'Mahony and Roberts only by report—the latter by very recent report. Mr. O'Mahony when I lived in Brooklyn was known to be zealous Spiritualist, and inveigled one or two of my friends, who still live there, into a circle he had formed. I should not wonder if it was from the Spiritualists he got his idea of 'circles,' and 'centres,' and 'sisterhoods;' and, indeed, it is quite likely at this very moment that he is conducting his whole system independent of mundane control, by the advice of the spirits. I never heard of his restoration to the Catholic Church, after his sojourn among

THE HORSE.

"Of the great number of animals under the control of man, the horse is unquestionably the most serviceable;" but is not strange that so many who own horses, and who are dependent on their labor for a living, should neglect to give them that care and attention which their own interest is no less than the safety and comfort of the horse demands. The best medicine for horses is "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine;" of this there can be no doubt—it is safe and easily given.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

Prescott, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

None genuine unless signed, I Butts, on the wrapper. Prepared by Sold by W. Fowle & Co., Boston, and for sale by all dealers in medicines.

Among the most important of modern Medical discoveries, stands the Canadian Pain Destroyer.

As a Family Medicine, it is well and favorably known, relieving thousands from pain in the Side, Back and Head, Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frost-bites, &c. &c. The Canadian Pain Destroyer has now been before the Public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction, where the Directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly, and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Orders are coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, and each testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

The Canadian Pain Destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it. Price only Twenty-five cents per Bottle.

All orders should be addressed to

The Hamilton Spectator.

Great Inducements to Canvassers

THE steadily increasing popularity of the Hamilton Spectator, evidenced by the subscription list trebling itself in a single year, encourages the Proprietors to offer additional inducements to their friends throughout Upper Canada to still further extend its circulation. The following Prizes will be awarded to those who shall bring in the largest number of Subscribers before the 31st of March next:—

1st PRIZE—One of the Wanzer's superior Combination Sewing Machines, highly finished and having all the latest improvements - worth $50.

2nd PRIZE—A superior Knitting Machine,—price in gold, $40.

3rd PRIZE—An order on Mr. Joseph Lyght, Bookseller, King-street, for books to the value of $30.

4th PRIZE—Do, do, $20.

5th PRIZE—Do, do, $10.

The following, from Messrs. Wanzer, & Co., will show the class of machine and the guarantees which they give with it:—

"Messrs. T. & R. White have purchased from us one of our new and improved Family Sewing Machines, half case, extra finished and ornamented, with it a hemmer, quilter, braider, tucker, seaming gauge, oil case, screw driver, two wrenches, half-a-dozen needles, letter of instruction, &c., which we hold subject to their order, in connection with the prizes offered by them as premiums to agents for the Spectator, and which we have agreed shall be of the very best quality, and subject to all the guarantees given with our best machines.

(Signed) "R. M. WANZER & Co.

"January 1st, 1866."

Each subscriber obtained for the Daily Spectator will count as five weekly subscribers.

Each list of subscribers as received will be entered in a book kept for that purpose, to the credit of the party sending it; and as many of our friends have already sent us in lists since the 1st of January, these will also be credited in awarding the prizes. Should they send any further list, they will please mention the fact of a previous list having been sent, to avoid the chance of error or oversight.

THE SPECTATOR

Is now equal, as a newspaper, to any journal published in the Province. It is the only paper west of Toronto which receives and publishes all telegraphic reports of the Associated Press, and the number of persons employed as correspondents in different parts of the country, makes it, as a general Provincial paper, second to no other in British America.

During the session of Parliament full reports of the proceedings of the Legislature are given, and its editorial correspondence from the seat of Government, gives an interesting resume of all questions of general interest.

THE WEEKLY SPECTATOR

Is made up with the greatest care. Full reports of the Markets in different parts of Upper Canada are given weekly; and no pains or expense is spared to make it a welcome visitor to the family circle.

The Daily is sent by mail at $5 a year, and the Weekly at $1.00, payable in advance.

Our regular agent, Mr. Carolan, will not be permitted to compete for these prizes.

The well established popularity of the Spectator will enable persons willing to compete for these prizes to secure large lists with but little trouble; and the number of prizes offered, which will be given to those who will secure the largest lists, afford an excellent opportunity to persons to secure these valuable donations.

☞ All letters addressed by mail to us, and registered, will be at our risk.
